From the Editor

OUR COVER STAR this week is a remarkable person. In her 30 years on the planet she has packed in being an actress, activist, dancer, writer, presenter and British Sign Language champion. There's probably nothing Rose Ayling-Ellis couldn't do if she turned her mind to it. This week she's starring in the new ITV drama Code of Silence, in which her deafness and BSL play a role. She is, of course, brilliant in it.

Whether it was representing the deaf community in EastEnders or the intensely moving silent dance she performed on her way to winning Strictly, she has been using her fame to educate the hearing about how the deaf community feels about modern life and how it could be improved for them. Read our revealing interview with this extraordinary young woman on page 12.

Elsewhere, Joanna Lumley and Roger Allam answer personal questions about each other in a fun version of Derek Batey's quiz show Mr & Mrs. They star in a new series of Conversations from a Long Marriage, the Radio 4 comedy that's genuinely funny and, if you have been married for any length of time, occasionally hits a raw nerve. Read what each other thinks the other is thinking on page 102.

BARE BONES Sophie Raworth visits the RHS and Radio 2 Dog Garden as it begins to take shape at the RHS Chelsea Flower Showground

CHELSEA DOG GARDEN

BARKING BEAUTIFUL

Gardeners' World legend Monty Don has united his two great passions – plants and dogs – for his first ever RHS Chelsea Flower Show garden this year. But don't expect giant lampposts or novelty bones, says Don's collaborator on the project, Jamie Butterworth. "We're not trying to share a message," Butterworth tells RT. "It's a garden for dogs. it's not trying to tell a story about dogs, if that makes sense."

Created in conjunction with Radio 2, Don intends his Dog Garden as a "haven" for our four-legged friends. Though when we caught up with nurseryman Butterworth two days into the 19-day build, he was feeling far from relaxed. "The RHS scrape you out a rectangle based on the size of your garden. And that's it. Nineteen days sounds like a lot of time. But you have to put in tanks, cables, pipes, pumps and filters... then trees and flowers... We have a team of 60 working on it."

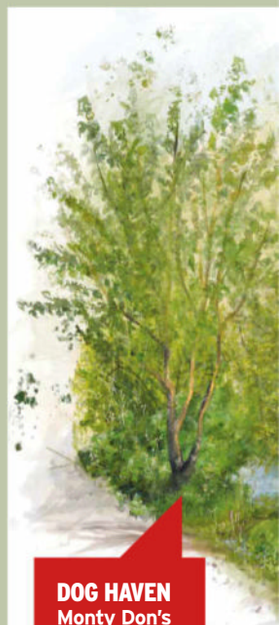

The finished version will include 60-year-old trees, a stream for the dogs to wallow in (based on one behind Radio 2 presenter Jo Whiley's home), a shaggy lawn and a "tough" flower bed, including paths plotted by tracking Monty's dog Ned as he moved around early samples. And, of course, there's the central dog house.

"Dogs love shelter, they love shade. And lounging about! So we're giving them a building for that. There'll be an old leather sofa with the stuffing coming out and toys strewn about."

There'll also be a "doggy playlist" of songs assembled by Whiley. On Monday, she will co-host Scott Mills's breakfast show on Radio 2 live from the Dog Garden from 6.30am.

And when the show is over, the whole garden will be heading 700m over the Albert Bridge to Battersea Dogs Home, "where it will live for ever and be used by the dogs," promises Butterworth. "So that's really nice. It's the most joyful garden I've ever been a part of." HUW FULLERTON

TEN QUESTIONS WITH

DAVID OYELOWO

He's a big cheese in Hollywood now, but making his dream roles a reality has taken patience and faith

From Martin Luther King to Coriolanus and gunslinger Bass Reeves, 49-year-old Brit David Oyelowo has become synonymous with some pretty tough dramatic parts on stage and screen. So, his latest role, in Apple TV+'s quirky comedy drama Government Cheese, marks a significant gear change. He plays Hampton Chambers, a family man in the late 1960s, who's done time in prison for forging cheques but is now determined to go straight, chasing the American dream with his invention – a self-sharpening drill. It's a deadpan, bizarre story that Oyelowo says is unlike anything he's done before...

Government Cheese is lighter in tone than we often see from you. Was that a conscious decision?

Many of the projects I've worked on deal with the racial struggle or civil rights. All of that is very much part of what it is to be African-American in America, but that's not the totality of the experience. Given how much the 1960s were steeped in civil rights, it felt almost radical to put a black family at the centre of a comedy set in that time without bogging it down with those elements.

It's an unusual show in its mix of genres and styles. How would you describe it?

It's a parabolic, surrealist family comedy. I don't know many shows you could describe as that! It has a whimsical, romantic nostalgia. It might not be for everyone in terms of how it changes gears, but for me, it's a pretty honest way to look at things that may have occurred in the past.

How did you get on board?

In 2018, [co-creator] Paul Hunter approached me with the idea for a short film. I'm basically playing a version of Paul's father. It felt unique, fresh and surreal – I hadn't read anything quite like it. We shot it for four days in Paul's mother's house and felt there was more we could do with it. A TV show felt like the natural progression.

What do you think Paul's family and friends thought of immortalising this period?

Paul's mother was very enamoured with the process, and proud of Paul, who's been trying to make this for a long time. The production design is very evocative of life in California's San Fernando Valley back then, and when Paul's friends visited the set – some of whom appear in the series played by actors – they all felt like they'd stepped into a time machine.

You also get to wear some sharp 60s suits. Did you enjoy that?

We wanted to tip the hat to folks who have a sense of aspiration but not much by way of resources. Hampton only has two suits, but you still feel he's a bit of a dandy. You see this a lot with immigrants: they'll have two or three outfits and they're good at mixing it up. That's where the title comes from.

Government Cheese*? How do you mean?

Government cheese is government-subsidised food that's

COURTESY OF AMANDA BRADLEY

STARTING AGAIN
With Bokeem Woodbine in Government Cheese

quite basic, but people would turn it into these amazing grilled cheese sandwiches or macaroni cheese, and these became beloved dishes. It symbolises making something out of nothing.

Hampton looks for assurance from God that he's forging a righteous path. Did you relate to that?
Faith is a huge part of my life, but what I like about this is that it's not proselytising – almost everyone can relate to having a difficult circumstance and wanting a sign they're on the right track. Hampton has his epiphany after starting a conversation with God, but that doesn't mean his day-to-day or spiritual challenges go away.

As an actor, can you relate to that idea of pushing for a project, hanging on to a dream?
Enormously! Many of my projects have required immense tenacity to get them made. I literally felt a spiritual calling to play Martin Luther King, but the initial director of Selma rejected me. Then, seven years later, I brought on the director who eventually made it [Ava DuVernay]. Lawman: Bass Reeves took nine years. This was a six-year journey. I've definitely been guilty of trying to force something when it's not the right time. My own faith has been a huge component in helping me let go when it's the healthy thing to do.

It must be nice shooting this so close to your own LA home. How important is it for you to be near your family when working?
I'd just spent six months in Texas doing Bass Reeves. I told Apple: these are the circumstances under which I can and will do it. Two of my kids are still quite young, and 'I felt a spiritual calling to play Martin Luther King'

I know that too much time away is not healthy. Often things are filmed somewhere that's advantageous for tax breaks. But as it was set where I live, there was an excuse to take that position.

We see the difficulties Hampton faces in slotting back into his children's lives after his stint in prison. As a father of four – what do you think of him as a parent?
I find him incredibly relatable – he might be equal parts selfish and selfless, but he's not been absent or irresponsible by choice. He's trying to do the right thing – and failing consistently. I don't know a father for whom that is not the case. Certainly, that's been my experience! ROBIN PARKER

New episodes of Government Cheese are released on Wednesdays on Apple TV+

WHAT IT'S LIKE TO...

be a stunt driver

AT THE WHEEL
Amanda Bradley doubling for Cameron Diaz in the film Back in Action

As a professional stunt driver, Amanda Bradley, 34, has taken the wheel for A-listers from Cameron Diaz to Emma Stone. She has also helped stage thrilling automotive sequences in the Bad Boys and Guardians of the Galaxy series, and is now back in the driver's seat for *Thunderbolts, about a team of troubled Marvel superheroes.

JUMP START When I was ten, my mum took me to a demolition derby in upstate New York where I grew up. From that point on, I knew what I wanted to do. I learnt to drive when I was 16 in my dad's pick-up truck. When I saw the Fast & Furious movies, I thought, "I wish I could do all the cool driving – with none of the dialogue."

CRASH COURSE I attended the Team O'Neil Rally School in New Hampshire where I learnt to "drift" and drive trucks. I also went to the Corey Eubanks Car Crashing Clinic – Corey drove the General Lee in The Dukes of Hazzard.

PACE YOURSELF People think that just because they drive fast, often recklessly, they'd make a good stunt driver. But spatial awareness and the ability to adapt is the real bare minimum. Also, you need to hold an exact speed, because often a camera car will have a lens less than a foot away from you. If you hit it, that's a very expensive mistake!

HIDDEN TALENT We sometimes use "pod cars" to make it look like the actor is driving – they have rerouted pedals, steering wheel and gearbox controls. The cameras are set up to show the driver's seat, but the stunt driver is framed out. I've driven pods on roofs, in backseats, in the backs of vans – even facing backwards!

SAFETY FIRST You can't always wear a helmet or protective gear. Most of the time, the airbags are disabled so they don't deploy when you bump into other cars or the kerb. Of course, when we do a full car crash, we wear protection: helmet, harness, wrist restraints...

EQUAL TERMS The Academy Awards recently decided to introduce a stunt design Oscar. It's long overdue. But I'd say the biggest challenge, still, is earning respect as a woman in this industry, and proving that you're knowledgeable and experienced. JONATHAN WELLS

VIEWPOINT

WE NEED TO END MEDICAL MISOGYNY

Naga Munchetty suffered in silence for years and is fed up of women's health issues being ignored

SPEAKING OUT Naga Munchetty at the mic for Radio 5 Live

I started my periods aged 15 and from day one they were painful, heavy and exhausting. I would faint, throw up, have to sleep on a towel, and they happened every three weeks for ten days. I didn't talk to friends about them – the whole narrative around periods when I was younger was that they were dirty and unhygienic. Doctors told me that they would be more manageable and improve when I got older, or when I had a baby. I was made to feel it was just a normal part of being a girl – and the message that came through was that I simply needed to tough it out.

At the age of 47 – after various treatments including going on the pill, taking progesterone injections and undergoing sterilisation – I bled for 35 days consecutively, and an ultrasound finally revealed my condition: adenomyosis, meaning the lining of the womb (endometrium) grows outside the uterus into my pelvis. It only took 32 years to get a diagnosis.

My body functions like every other woman's, but this story isn't about me, it's about women's health issues being ignored. One in eight women are reported to suffer from adenomyosis, for which there's no cure, not enough research and the waiting lists are long. This oversight in female health is nothing new. I was fortunate to have medical insurance, which meant I could pay for an ultrasound and have one quickly.

Medical misogyny – the absence of equal care for women's health through lack of interest, recognition and resources – has been around for centuries, with everything from painkiller dosage to BMI measurements being based on men's bodies. My book title, It's Probably Nothing, comes from the message to women, both implicit and often said out loud: don't worry your little head. It's both external: an unwillingness to recognise women's pain on a par with men's, and internal: women's fear of being perceived as hysterical if they complain. The word "hysterectomy" even dates from Plato's time when a woman's "wandering womb" was seen as a source of ills both physical and mental. Today I know younger women who've been diagnosed with adenomyosis and told their only option is to have a child. What they hear is: use your womb for what it was meant for, and you'll get sorted.

> 'There's an unwillingness to recognise women's pain on a par with men's'

Besides the blatant unfairness of all this, the social impact is disastrous. Women are the main carers in society, and if they're dealing with anything from heavy bleeding to anaemia, how can they fulfil their potential? And when they can't, the economy isn't getting their creativity, brilliance, determination or fervour. We've already lost so much as a society because women have not been kept well. I'm not a campaigner, but I recognise that there is a fight for funding when it comes to women's reproductive health. We have parliamentary committees and investigating bodies, but until it's as important in the world of pharmaceuticals and medicine for women to be healthy as it for a man to get an erection, we're not there, and we all lose.

I was worried when I first spoke out about these issues on Radio 5 Live, that people would say, "Oh, she's whining." But I received so many messages from women – and men – grateful not to have these conditions left in the shadows. It inspired the monthly section on my radio show That Time of the Month. We tackle all sorts of health issues not spoken about: libido, incontinence, fertility and endometriosis, which affects around one in ten women in the UK. My hope is that, if we're talking about it on national radio where parents, partners and children can hear it, it can't be taboo. Both on radio and for my book, the reason people have spoken to me is, they don't want someone else going through what they have. It's a platform to say, "I've been told to keep my mouth shut and put up with it. But I don't have to."

Rose Ayling-Ellis has shone in everything from EastEnders to Strictly. Now she takes centre stage in a police drama with lip-reading and BSL as her co-stars

THE RT INTERVIEW BY LAURA CRAIK

PHOTOGRAPHED EXCLUSIVELY FOR RADIO TIMES BY RACHEL LOUISE BROWN

Few viewers could have failed to be moved – many to tears – by the “silent dance” performed by Rose Ayling-Ellis in the 2021 series of Strictly Come Dancing. Hailed as the show’s “greatest ever performance”, when the music stopped and she continued to dance with her professional dance partner in poignant silence, it simultaneously paid respect and raised awareness of the deaf community.

Which is what Ayling-Ellis has been doing ever since. Four years after scooping the trophy, she’s still on a winning streak – the first deaf contestant not only to appear on Strictly but to win it, the 30-year-old actor’s series of firsts also include being the first deaf person to host live sports coverage on British TV (as a presenter for Channel 4’s coverage of the 2024 Paralympics), the first person to work with a major toy company to produce a doll with a hearing aid (Barbie, in 2022) and the first person to sign a Bedtime Story on CBeebies. Her first book, Marvellous Messages, was published in March, part of a ten-book deal that will deepen her advocacy for the deaf community while educating those of us who can hear. Although “educating” sounds too preachy for a person who’d rather entertain and enlighten.

Preachy is the last thing that Ayling-Ellis is, which is something that becomes apparent as soon as we start chatting in the tasteful, plump-cushioned environs of a five-star London hotel. “French,” she says definitively, when I ask her what the hardest accent is to lip-read. “They talk with their teeth together. Men are generally harder to lip-read because they mumble too much. Look me in the eyes and open your mouth more, please!”

With lip-reading and BSL (British Sign Language) as her co-stars, Ayling-Ellis has just notched up another first, playing the lead in Code of Silence, a tense new ITV drama in which her deafness plays a starring role. Written by Catherine Moulton, who has been partially deaf since childhood, the police drama centres on Alison Brooks, a deaf woman who’s plucked out of working in a police canteen and recruited to lip-read as part of a surveillance operation hoping to thwart a gang planning a dangerous heist.

Moulton had the idea for the script after having lip-reading lessons to improve the skills she’d taught herself as a child. “That’s when I learnt that only between 30 and 40 per cent of speech is actually visible on your lips – everything else is complicated guesswork. So you’re looking at the person’s body language, the situation you’re in and what you know about them. It made me think of it as a big puzzle. With lip-reading, you’re putting together clues and then coming up with an answer. Which felt perfect for a detective show.”

Ayling-Ellis committed to the role after being shown an outline of the story, encouraged by its ground-breaking format. “So when I wrote the script, I knew I was writing for Rose, which was brilliant, because some of her personality, energy and drive worked its way into Alison,” smiles Moulton. “Then we took it as a package to ITV – my script, and Rose playing the lead.”

Ayling-Ellis had zero doubts about taking the role. “I’ve wanted to do something like this for ▷

‘I’ve been frustrated at having small roles – I needed to show everyone I can do this’

ROSE AYLING-ELLIS

◁ a long time. I've been acting for about 13 years. When I've done theatre, I've always had a small role and it used to frustrate me, because I feel there is a story out there that's not being told. I needed to show everyone I can do this.

"Normally, when you get a script about lip-reading, it can make you feel a bit on edge," she adds, explaining that depictions aren't always realistic. "But the fact that this one captured how hard lip-reading is, and how it's like a puzzle, and [showed] how you work it out, really drew me to it."

For the viewer, this means watching subtitles form on screen slowly, letter by letter, at a pace designed to echo that of a lip-reader figuring out the words they're interpreting. "It took us a long time to work that out," says Moulton. "There was a lot of back and forth, and Rose had a lot of input."

"We've never done anything like that before," says Ayling-Ellis, explaining that she wanted to capture the process of deduction that deaf people have to go through, given that some words look the same when spoken. "That's what lip-reading is. For example, 'elephants', 'colourful' and 'I love you' have the exact same patterns."

"Certain words look the same, like 'leaf' and 'leave'," Moulton adds. "Also 'police' and 'please' have the same pattern, so there is always room for doubt. You could say, 'Oh, he wasn't saying that,' which is why sometimes you can't rely on that evidence in court."

It's one of many elements of a show that places deaf and hearing-impaired people front and centre, reminding everyone of how the world is through their eyes. In one scene, a meeting takes place where the speaker is out of eyeshot, forcing Alison to ask a stranger what's going on. "Those scenes came quite naturally, because those are things that we experience all the time – being at a school assembly or a play, and too far away [to lip-read]," says Moulton. "It's so frustrating, but it's part of our lives."

The plot also emphasises Alison's quick-witted intelligence, in a way that will feel vindicating to any deaf or hearing-impaired person who's experienced the hurt and frustration of deafness and slowness being conflated. "There's a lot of prejudice," sighs Ayling-Ellis. "You're slow because of the environment that you're in. Everyone else is making it slow – it's not yourself. That's why I say I love being deaf. There's no problem with being deaf at all. It's my environment that makes it harder for me to be deaf.

"There's a famous saying, 'I'm disabled because the world disabled me'. What makes this script and plot so exciting is how Alison plays with that to her advantage. Everyone will assume she's 'just' a deaf girl. It happens to me a lot. I have people talking about really uncomfortable situations in front of me, assuming I won't hear them."

Brought up in Hythe on the Kent coast, Ayling-Ellis's hospital worker mum and surveyor dad found out she was deaf when she was 18 months old, after she "failed" a hearing test. It was presented as a problem that needed fixing. Her parents' decision, controversial at the time, to teach their daughter BSL (some professionals claim it can delay speech) is covered movingly in her 2023 documentary, Signs for Change. "Sign language is brilliant, but it needs to be made more accessible," she says. "Medical services need to think about deaf people in relation to mental health. Domestic abuse helplines as well. How are people going to call on the phone?" Given that an estimated one in two deaf people have mental health issues, it's an urgent point.

After a film-making weekend organised by the National Deaf Children's Society sparked a love of performing as a teen, she was encouraged to join a deaf youth theatre group in London, and kept her passion alive while at university in Rochester. A deaf actors' Facebook group led to a part in Casualty, as well as other small parts, which eventually led to her getting an agent, and winning the part of Frankie in EastEnders, which she played for two years. "It was great training for me, because it made me learn how to hit my marks, how to get things [done] quickly, because they don't have time. If you make a mistake, that's it."

As well as appearing in the BBC1 thriller Reunion this year, she's also joined the Whoniverse, with Russell T Davies describing her role in last month's story The Well as "an astonishing performance of terror, anger and bravery in one of the most frightening episodes we've ever made". "It was really fun, and great for building up my acting skills," she says of the experience, adding that "a lot of coffee" helped her to act suitably jittery and scared.

Davies recently revealed that the role wasn't originally written for a deaf actress, but that he incorporated feedback from Ayling-Ellis during script development. In the future, would she prefer to play deaf characters with storylines written to reflect this, or roles without reference to being deaf? "I don't have that privilege," she says. "No matter what I do, it's going to be deaf because it's in my accent, my wearing my hearing aid and in the way I communicate. That can never be taken away."

She and Moulton are optimistic that deaf representation, for cast as well as crew, is improving. "I hope so," says Moulton. "The talent is there, and it would be a real shame not to give people more to do. I think things are changing."

"There's more realisation that a disabled story can be entertainment, and not be preachy," adds Ayling-Ellis.

Strictly fans may be aware that Ayling-Ellis can sometimes hear the beat of a song: still, I wonder whether it's insensitive to ask whether music has a role in her life. "Oh, I love music," she beams. "I have Bluetooth in my hearing aid that I connect to my phone. I can control it so that there's no background noise – I can't hear anybody, and then I put my music on, whack it up really loud so I can't hear the traffic or people shouting – just music. It's great. Hearing people don't have that luxury."

Her tastes are wide-ranging. "Dolly Parton is my favourite. My favourite dance music would probably be Show Me Love by Robin S, or Young Hearts Run Free by Candi Staton. For my 30th birthday, I had proper 70s old school music. It was a crisps party."

Despite – or maybe because – I'm the world's number one crisp fan, I think I've misheard her. A crisps party? "I love crisps," she beams. "I wrapped the whole venue in foil, so it would look like the inside of a crisp packet. And everyone had to dress up as a different crisp. One friend put a spacesuit on – Space Raiders – and another's got lovely long ginger hair. She had an orange dress and hat on, fluffed up her hair and sprayed it with hairspray, and she was a Wotsit."

What did the birthday girl wear? "I wore cheese and onion Walkers crisps. You put the packets in the oven and they shrink, and then I made them into a 1960s-style dress. They're my favourite childhood crisp. Now, it's Tyrrells, but those were a bit too expensive to make into a dress."

Like music, fashion isn't a subject she's often asked about, despite having studied it at university. Today, she's wearing a black top, black trousers and a new pair of black slingbacks. "This year I'm really trying not to buy new clothes, and I've been doing really well until these shoes came along," she laughs. For fancier occasions, she loves Chloé and Stella McCartney. "I wore her to collect my MBE. I love her clothes, and she's a really smart businesswoman."

It's hard to imagine Ayling-Ellis has much spare time, but while she doesn't much like cooking ("It's outrageous to spend two hours cooking something you eat in ten minutes") or exercise ("Who does?") she's recently become addicted to padel. "I've been going three or four times a week. I've got one big arm and one small one." She's also been learning some DIY. "My dad is teaching me. He taught my brother but never me, and I told him that's wrong. I live in an old Edwardian house; my next task is stripping the paint off the window frame."

Having achieved so much already, it must be tiresome to be asked what she wants to achieve next. "I've got no job at the moment, which is actually quite nice," she smiles. "So I think I'm going to enjoy the quietness."

She should enjoy it while she can. Her world might be quiet, but her professional life is destined to be anything but.

The Bombing of Pan Am 103
Sunday, Monday 9.00pm BBC1, iPlayer

'THE CASE IS ONGOING'

Until 21 December 1988, the Frankfurt-London-New York-Detroit transatlantic route with the US airline Pan Am, was designated Flight 103. But, as is standard practice after an aviation disaster, those numerals were retired when the plane was blown apart by a bomb over Lockerbie, south-west Scotland, killing 243 passengers, 16 crew and 11 people on the ground.

The first FBI agent to arrive at the crime scene was Richard "Dick" Marquise, who is now long retired, although the case remains to some extent open. "Lockerbie has literally been almost half my life," says Marquise on the phone from his Florida home. "I was 41 when it happened and I'm about to be 78, but it's still a big part of my life."

As an adviser on a six-part BBC drama, The Bombing of Pan Am 103 – for which one of the sources is his 2006 book, Scotbom: Evidence and the Lockerbie Investigation – Marquise recently spent more than a year working with producers and actors, and visited the filming in Scotland. (In an increasingly common practice due to the huge cost of making a drama, The Bombing of Pan Am 103 will be shown in a UK "first window" on 18 May ahead of a later global release on Netflix, a co-producer.)

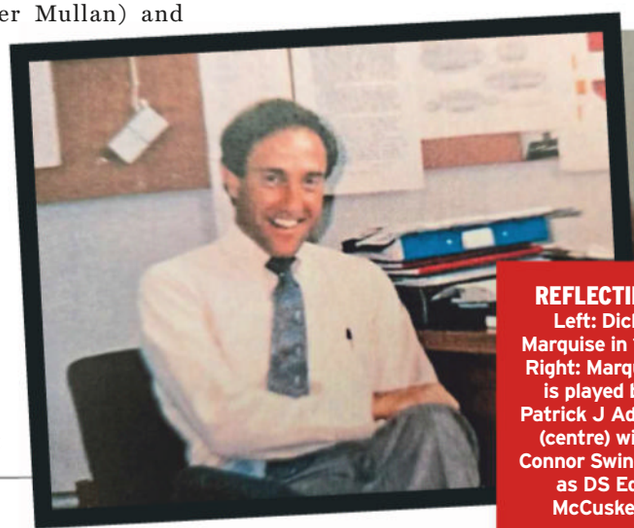

In the drama, there's a striking scene in which, as Marquise (played by Suits actor Patrick J Adams) prepares to fly to the UK to start the investigation, his wife tells him to keep thinking that it could have been their own sons on that plane; the FBI officer replies that he has to be rational, not emotional. Is that scene true to his working personality? Marquise laughs: "No! Viewers may think I'm an – pardon my French – asshole, but I understand why they've done it. There's a scene where someone says: 'I hope Dick has a heart under that suit of his.' They're portraying my character not so much as heartless but as devoted to the mission. Is that 100 per cent me? No. But I accept it for dramatic reasons."

The Bombing of Pan Am 103 focuses on hostility between the lead investigator for the local Scottish police, DCS John Orr (played by Peter Mullan) and Marquise. Orr is seen growling, "Scottish soil, Scottish evidence, Scottish procedure," and slamming down the phone on his American counterpart. Were things as prickly as they are depicted?

"We had our issues," Marquise admits. "They've had to simplify things in the drama: you can't have 35,000 characters. In reality, I didn't have a lot of one-on-one dealings with John Orr. I got to know him later and we became good friends until he died. My main dealings were with Stuart Henderson [who joined as a senior investigating officer] and that was, for both of us, a work in progress. I hate to use the word "distrust" but you have a crime scene in Scotland with 190 American victims and you have this very small [Dumfries and Galloway] police force that had never investigated anything like this before. And I'll be honest, the FBI is not used to not being in charge. But I'll tell you this, no one could have collected evidence as diligently and expertly as the Scottish cops."

This, of course, is the second drama about the mass aviation homicide to be screened in the UK this year, following January's Sky Atlantic five-parter, Lockerbie: a Search for Truth, with Colin Firth as Dr Jim Swire, the GP whose daughter, Flora, was killed on the flight and who has led bereaved families in a campaign for justice.

anniversaries, but it is 37 years since Lockerbie and the double interest at this uneven anniversary results from many remaining questions and continuing litigation: a Libyan national, Abu Agila Mohammed Mas'ud Kheir Al-Marimi, is scheduled to go on trial in Washington this summer, accused of building the Lockerbie bomb. In 2001, another Libyan, Abdelbaset al-Megrahi, was convicted by Scottish judges of plotting the massacre; a past government of Libya also admitted responsibility. "So the case is still going on after 37 years!" says Marquise.

'This BBC drama will tell the story more accurately than ever'

RICHARD "DICK" MARQUISE

In most instances, a recent-historical drama following just a few months after another would, however well done, seem repetitive and second-best. But The Bombing of Pan Am 103 tells a story almost completely different from the Colin Firth drama. The Sky series dramatised Jim Swire's belief that the convicted and accused Libyans were framed to protect (for alleged international political convenience) a plot by Iran and pro-Palestinian groups based in Syria in which, Swire and his supporters suggest, the bomb was placed on the plane not at Frankfurt, but at London Heathrow. The BBC drama supports Libyan culpability, as advanced by Marquise and the FBI.

"I haven't seen the Colin Firth programme but I have read Jim Swire's book," says Marquise. "And I've told Dr Swire I disagree with his conclusion that we're hiding things and that there's much more to the story. I try to be respectful and I would never criticise a Lockerbie family member, but I simply disagree with him. The BBC programme is fact-based and will tell the story much more accurately than anything that's ever been portrayed in the media, and I'm thankful for that."

The contention between Marquise and Swire largely rests on the forensic evidence, from which the FBI concluded where the bomb was made (Zurich), for whom (Libya) and how it entered the luggage hold (Frankfurt) of a plane with three airport stops and a feeder flight from Malta. "There's a lot of disagreement," the former FBI lead investigator says, "over a fragment called PT/35, a piece of a circuit board of the timer built by a Swiss company in Zurich for Libyan intelligence. It's almost unbelievable a fragment that small could have been found in such a large crime-scene, but I know the great work the Scottish cops did in collecting evidence. I know what the fragment was, know how it was recovered, where it was, I've seen it."

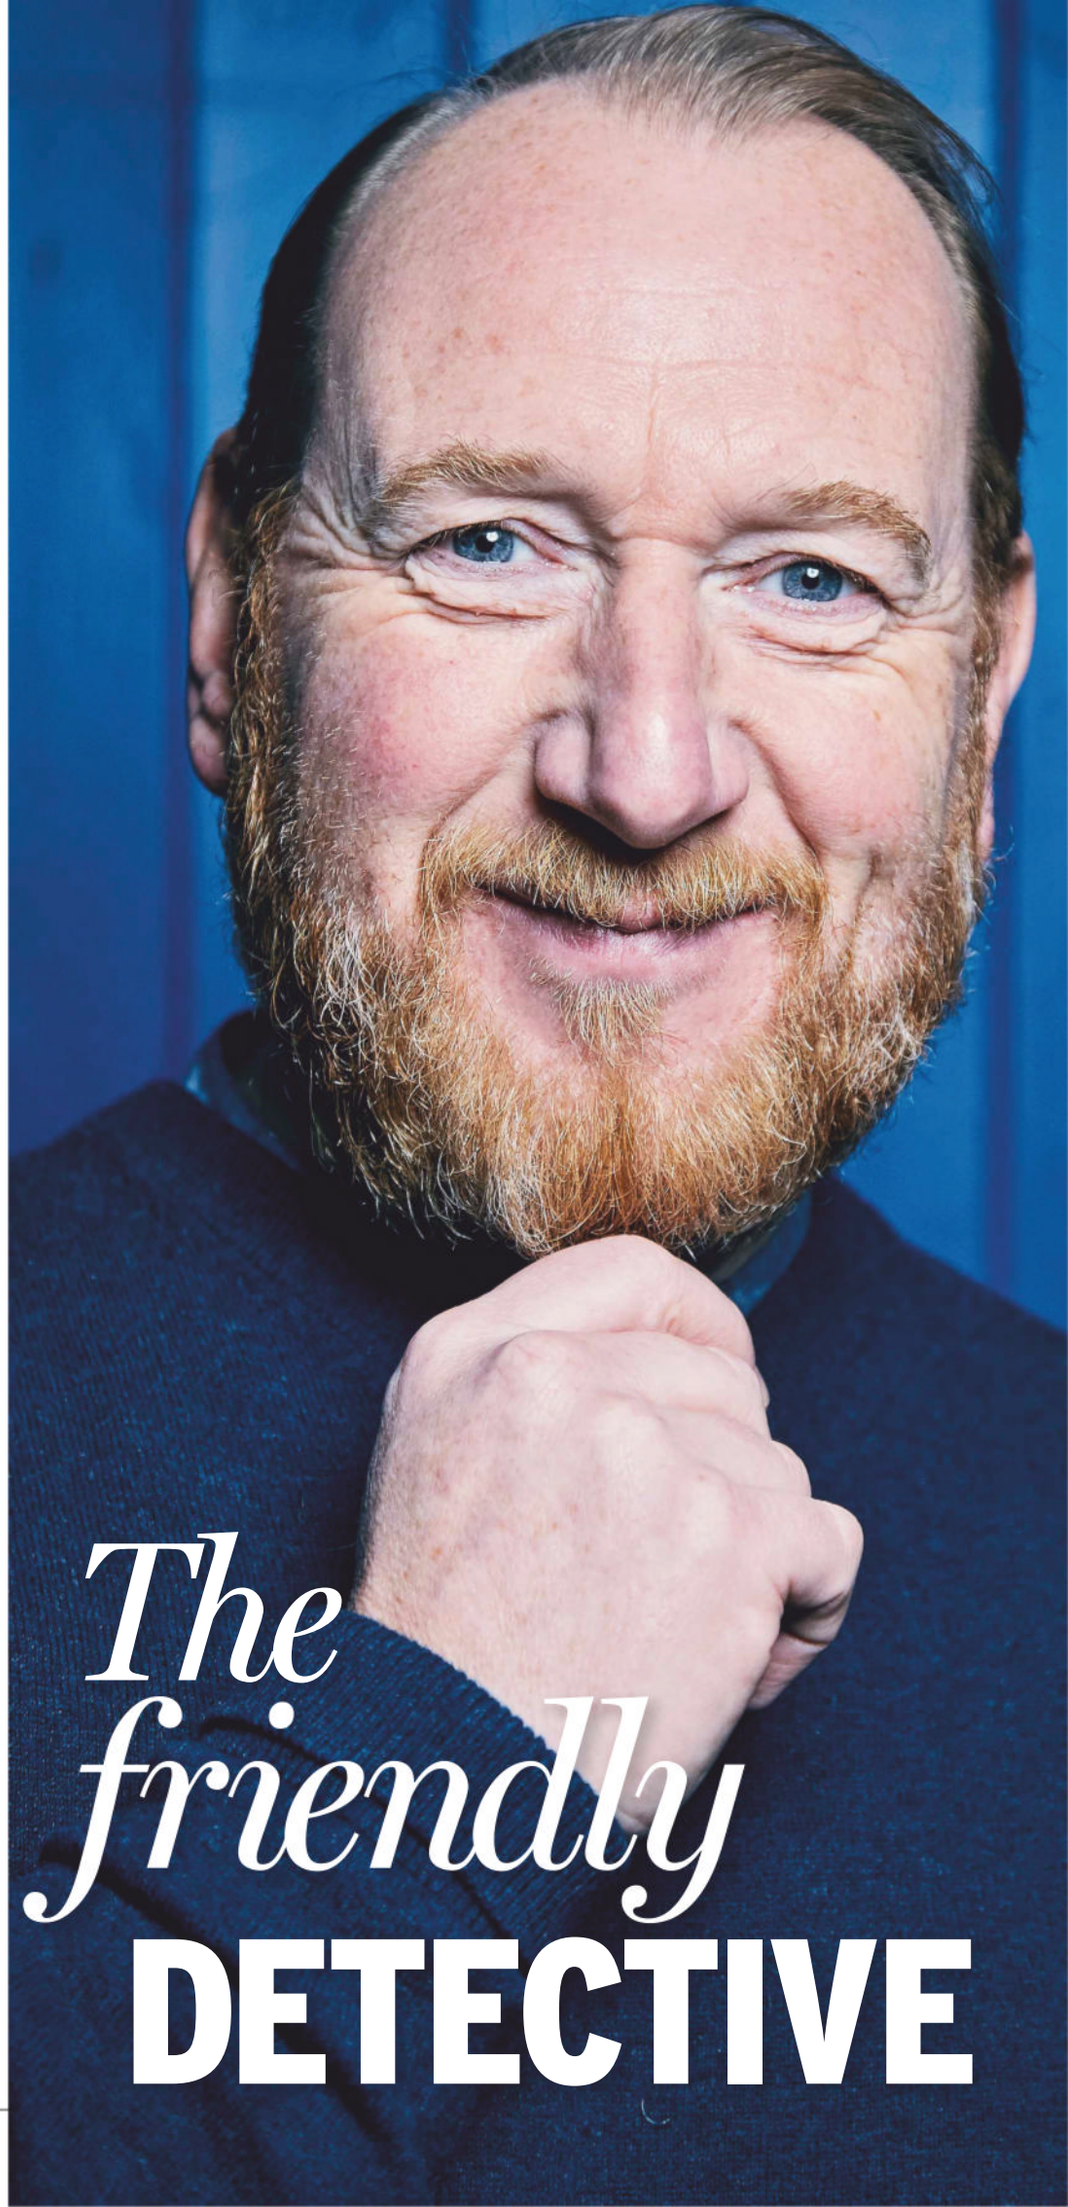

The other side has claimed that the discovery of PT/35 was not "almost unbelievable" but completely so, casting doubt on how it was found and by whom. That fragment matters because it's the main basis for the FBI/official line that the attack was run from Libya. Marquise, meanwhile, rejects the rival Iranian/Palestinian theory: "We didn't discover any link to Iran or Palestinian terrorists. We let the evidence speak for itself and it led us to conclude that it was a Libyan operation. The one thing I can never rule out is that the Iranians had some role way far in the background, but there's no evidence for that."

Not even a six-hour BBC drama can give a sense of the patient and painstaking length of the investigation. Marquise recalls: "At the FBI, we hated to say that we were assessing stuff. The CIA analyses; we find evidence that we can take to court. But we didn't get that evidence until three years afterwards. Until then it was a whodunnit in which we had to re-create that 845-square-mile crime scene and follow that evidence where it led."

A subtle way we see time passing in the drama is that the standard photo of the president on FBI walls changes from Ronald Reagan to George HW Bush. These days, it's Donald Trump smiling out for the second time. How much difference does it make to the FBI who is in the White House? "I started in 1971 and worked under seven presidents [Nixon, Ford, Carter, Reagan, Bush Sr, Clinton, Bush Jr]. And it made no difference who it was. I never felt anyone in the White House or Department of Justice was telling us how to do our job. Let me be clear, I don't know how often I've said this publicly, but on Lockerbie I never had a single enquiry from the White House. The current president – that's a whole different can of worms and I'm glad I'm retired..."

The friendly DETECTIVE

Adrian Scarborough doesn't want to outstay his welcome on TV, but would he do a Gavin & Stacey spin-off series?

Adrian Scarborough has been acting for more than three decades – in television, film, radio and theatre. The accomplished character actor has played Villanelle's violent and sinister handler Raymond in Killing Eve and Dawn's awkward yet well-meaning husband Peter in Gavin & Stacey. He has two best supporting actor Olivier Awards and has appeared in acclaimed films including The History Boys and The King's Speech.

But it took until 2022, when The Chelsea Detective first aired, for Scarborough to be cast in a lead role on screen. Scarborough was actually ready to cut back on television work, but the part of DI Max Arnold convinced him to change his mind. "I never expected to go down this road," says the 57-year-old who is now promoting the third series of his detective drama. "Playing the lead isn't a responsibility that I really enjoy. People start looking at you like you must know the answer, because you've been there from the beginning."

Arnold and his partner DS Layla Walsh (Vanessa Emme) solve cases in the London borough of Chelsea, and in the new series' first episode, a body is found in an allotment. Scarborough enjoyed watching John Thaw in Inspector Morse growing up and says Arnold has a bit of "bumbling Columbo" about him.

It's cosy crime at its finest. There's no swearing, no sex and no bloodshed. "It appeals, because there's quite a few people out there, myself included, that don't like too much gore," says Scarborough. "The crimes themselves are almost irrelevant. The most interesting bit is the process of working them out."

Scarborough was born in Melton Mowbray, Leicestershire. His father was a teacher and his mother was a lay worker at the local Methodist church, who inspired his love of theatre by taking him at a very young age. "I wanted to be a dancer, but it was very obvious from about the age of eight or nine I didn't have the physique," he says. "As soon as I saw that acting was a job you could do, I thought it was for me. My parents never turned up their noses and went, 'You're never going to be an actor, don't go on the stage.'"

He describes himself as a "disaster at school" and was his happiest when he left at the age of 16. "I don't think school catered for the person that I was. My creative side wasn’t nourished. I’m a very practical person, so I learn by being active and doing. I don’t learn by reading or sitting.” He went on to attend Brooksby Melton College, where his love of acting was encouraged, and then he studied at the Bristol Old Vic Theatre School.

‘Playing the lead isn’t a responsibility that I really enjoy’

He recalls his first on-screen role in The Bill in 1991, when he had to drive a truck across an airfield. “I used to do what I call SAS acting,” Scarborough explains. “You essentially get parachuted into a job, you’re there for three days, they shoot all of your stuff, and you’re gone again. That had its own set of problems – you never got to be part of a family.”

Now, he tries to make all the guest stars in The Chelsea Detective – which this series includes Alex Kingston (A Discovery of Witches, Doctor Who) as US Ambassador Emily Morgan – feel as welcome as possible. “We try to make everybody’s journeys on the show a happy one, partly because I’ve had some st experiences in my time. I would hate anybody to come on our set and go away with that sort of experience. It’s hard walking into a space where you don’t know people and you’re expected to do big, emotional scenes or violent stuff, or be angry. It can be really tricky getting yourself to that place in a very short space of time when there’s not a lot of trust about.

“You get on a gig where people have been doing it for a very long time, perhaps too long, and they get used to doing it in a particular way, and they don’t want to do it any differently. You don’t feel welcome or comfortable – you feel like cannon fodder. Those experiences have an impact – more of an impact than the good times you have. They can upset you and play havoc with your confidence.”

How did he keep going? “Well, sometimes I didn’t actually. I took time out or went off and did something completely different.”

The Chelsea Detective is very different to “SAS acting”. It takes five months to film, with a couple of months’ prep before that, and involves a lot of long days. “This takes up a massive chunk of my life. Your loved ones become impatient, and sometimes tempers are thin…” says Scarborough. He lives with his wife, psychotherapist Rose Blackshaw, in Hertfordshire. Their children, Esme and Jake, no longer live at home.

“We try to be as communicative as we can, but it can be hard to find time to get together. You have to go, ‘OK, you can have me for an hour and a half here, you can have me for this much of Saturday, but the rest of the day I need to sit down and work out next week’s scenes and script, and I need a bit of time to myself.’”

Scarborough didn’t expect for The Chelsea Detective to run as long as it has, and believes “all gigs have a finite life”. He praises Gavin & Stacey for knowing when to end. The final episode, which aired on Christmas Day last year, brought in more than 12 million viewers.

Would he ever do a spin-off with Julia Davis, who plays his on-screen wife Dawn? “I don’t think so. One of the reasons why Peter and Dawn were so delicious was that you didn’t have to have a full half-hour of them. I think you’d get exhausted pretty quickly with the highs and lows of that relationship. It would just get so frantic and mad so quickly that I’m not sure it’d sustain for six episodes, but Julia is a genius. She’s also the worst corpser [an actor who laughs uncontrollably during scenes] I have ever met!”

What about The Chelsea Detective? DI Arnold could probably carry on for years, solving hundreds of cases, but would Scarborough want to? “You shouldn’t outstay your welcome. You have to be careful that you don’t get bored and complacent, particularly in this genre. You can tell when your heart’s not in it, but I haven’t reached that stage yet!”

It’s safe to say Scarborough won’t be requiring a parachute any time soon. LAURA RUTKOWSKI

Doctor Who Saturday 7.10pm BBC1*, from 8.00am* iPlayer
Eurovision Song Contest Saturday 8.00pm BBC1, Radio 2

WHOUZE POINTS!

Sending Doctor Who to Eurovision – in space! – was a childhood dream come true for writer Juno Dawson

I HAVE HIDDEN myself in this episode of Doctor Who. At one point, the Doctor's companion Belinda (Varada Sethu) says "Eurovision is the best night of the year. When I was little I was allowed to stay up late for the voting as long as I got into my pyjamas and brushed my teeth." And actually, that was me! I remember kneeling in front of the TV waiting to see if Sonya or Michael Ball would take the trophy. Both came second – I was gutted.

There might not be an obvious link between the Eurovision Song Contest and Doctor Who, but I think they're cousins – if not sisters. Of course, they're both globally successful brands with a passionate and dedicated audience. But more than that, fans of Doctor Who and Eurovision can sometimes feel like outsiders, and that becomes part of someone's identity. One becomes a Whovian or a Eurofan. At school, I was very much the weird kid who was obsessed with Doctor Who and Eurovision (as well as the Spice Girls). Professing my love of these things was my way of saying I was queer before I knew what it was to be queer.

Perhaps it's not surprising they're so beloved by LGBTQ+ people. Both shows occasionally address queer themes – last year's Eurovision winner, Nemo, was the first non-binary performer – but more generally the DNA of Doctor Who and Eurovision is fairness, tolerance, peace and the triumph of joy over hatred. It's not hard to see why queer people feel so seen and so safe in both worlds.

Both events have also evolved together, in aesthetic and reputation. Forty years ago, either might be derided for their shaky sets and outlandish costumes. But those tropes are as dead as the Time Lords. Modern Doctor Who is epic, on a level with sci-fi juggernauts Star Wars and Star Trek. Similarly, Eurovision is now a showcase for some of the biggest artists in the world, with Madonna and Justin Timberlake performing at recent finales. There were 163 million viewers worldwide for the final last year. That's more than the Super Bowl. Yes, some people still dismiss it as fluff… but to be honest, at this stage that opinion is embarrassing.

So, WHEN I was asked to write this episode, I was determined that my Interstellar Song Contest wouldn't make fun of Eurovision by having aliens dance around in tin foil dresses. Why would the show devolve in the far future? If anything, I thought it would continue to become even grander. With huge ambition, the fictional Harmony Arena is the O2 Arena, in space, on steroids. I'm so proud of how the effects team rendered the stadium both physically and digitally. It looks very real and very, very big!

Russell T Davies and I wrote some lyrics and series composer, Murray Gold, was tasked with coming up with contemporary-sounding Eurovision music. Altogether, he composed four original tracks for the episode; three "entries" and one song that comes as a surprise at the end… Gold's music adds further breadth.

But viewers shouldn't go into this episode thinking it's all camp and glitter. When a dangerous hijacker (Freddie Fox) attacks the contest, the Doctor (Ncuti Gatwa) unleashes a sort of rage we haven't seen in a long time, while Belinda faces up to the fact she might never see her family for Eurovision – or on Earth – ever again. Meanwhile, bickering fans Gary (Charlie Condou) and Mike (Kadiff Kirwan) are on the verge of divorce, until catastrophe reminds them of what really matters. And what about the divalicious Cora (Miriam-Teak Lee), the wannabe winner from the planet Trion? What is she hiding?

With this episode, I wanted to tell a human story. Because that's how you win Eurovision. The best contests have plucky heroes like Conchita Wurst in 2014, who overcame homophobic rhetoric from certain nations, or an underdog like Kaarija, who raced past the hot favourites at the last second in 2023. It's always about the act and the song. Truly.

While not immune from current affairs, Eurovision isn't nearly as "political" as people think. In the last few years, Switzerland, Sweden, the Netherlands and Italy have won on the strength of their songs alone. No gimmicks, no dodgy votes. I'm afraid other nations are simply better at Eurovision than we are. A tough pill to swallow, but here we are. We got so close with Sam Ryder [when he came second in 2022]. We can, and will, win, if we send the right act with the right song.

Doctor Who and Eurovision have meant so much to me my whole life. Truly, if I could time-travel and tell my teenage self that one day I’d be combining them for the BBC, she’d think I was a liar. They’re two of my greatest pop culture loves. What an absolute gift to be able to bring them together.

THE PERFECT (EURO) VISION

The secret to a winning Eurovision act lies in the UK’s past triumphs – so here is RT’s recipe for success…

VOICE
JADE EWEN, 2009

The likes of Lulu, Sam Ryder, Frances Ruffelle and Jessica Garlick have all displayed some impressive pipes at Eurovision, but 2009’s Jade Ewen (right) stands out for a powerful vocal performance that gained the UK a top five result.

FASHION SENSE
GINA G, 1996

Eurovision may not be known for high fashion, and the UK’s had its share of faux pas (think 2007’s air-steward chic on Scooch, or the lime green look of Belle and the Devotions in 1984). For our creation, we’re thinking the shimmering sequins of Gina G (our second-place entry in 1996, right) will add a bit of sparkle.

DANCING SKILLS
BUCKS FIZZ, 1981

It was the dance wot won it! Many pundits today still think that Bucks Fizz’s slightly off-key 1981 performance (below) was rescued by their dance routine, with a costume “reveal” – the moment Cheryl Baker and Jay Aston’s longer skirts were torn off to reveal shorter ones below – propelling them to victory, and a place in Eurovision history.

SONGWRITING
KATRINA & THE WAVES, 1997

Of course, the perfect Eurovision voice is only as good as the song, and for that key ingredient we’re turning to Kimberley Rew, a member of Katrina and the Waves (below), who penned their winning song Love Shine a Light way back in 1997. Since then we have only had one sniff at winning.

MUSICAL ABILITY
SAM RYDER, 2022

The hair, the song, the jumpsuit, the smiley face… they all helped propel Sam Ryder (below) to the UK’s best 21st-century performance, in 2022. But we reckon it was Space Man’s epic guitar solo that really pushed it to second place that year – and brought the contest back to the UK for 2023 in partnership with winners Ukraine.

STOP SINGING THE BLUES

It's time we Brits dropped the cynicism and embraced Eurovision for what it is – a thing of joy

OPTIMISTIC
The UK's entry What the Hell Just Happened? is sung by Remember Monday – Holly-Anne Hull, Charlotte Steele and Lauren Byrne

IT'S THE HOPE that kills you. My heart has taken up its annual residence in my mouth as I watch this year's UK entry gear up for the final of the Eurovision Song Contest. Remember Monday's song What the Hell Just Happened? is a Queen-influenced glam-rock operetta that showcases the musical trio's vocal harmonies. It has amassed more than a million streams since its release last month, and the country-pop girl band have been peddling their wares away from home in countries whose votes will matter come Saturday evening in Basel. So it's all looking good going in, but...

Every year since 2011 I've hosted a Eurovision party, complete with a prize for the most accurate forecaster in the room and, every year, the same person has won. Sadly, the Royaume Uni has been nearly as consistent and not in a good way. In that time, the UK has only once made it to the top half of the results board. Worse, seven of the last 12 years have seen us in the bottom three, with two of those, well, to quote Mike Moran and Lynsey de Paul (UK, 1977, 2nd): "Where are we? Rock bottom".

The noble exception was Sam Ryder who stormed to second place three years ago with Space Man and would surely have triumphed but for collective goodwill for Ukraine. With a big song and bigger smile, Sam proved what's possible when the UK stops hiding behind a layer of self-protective disdain and embraces the spirit of the Contest.

For the artist, it's more than a noble cause. Prior to Sam, the last UK act to earn a decent score was boy band Blue in 2011. They came 11th, but that's only half the story. Seven years after their last hit, the group enjoyed a new lease of life performing across eastern Europe. Previous British stars from Matt Munro to Olivia Newton-John saw no dip in their fortunes, while Abba and Celine Dion proved the power of the Contest stepping stone. But even so, why should success matter to us all?

STAR TURN
Olivia Newton-John came fourth in 1974 with Long Live Love

For nearly 70 years, this tiny island has enjoyed a reputation for punching well above its weight in terms of popular music. For the first 40 of those, this carried over into Eurovision glory, until something shifted at the turn of the century. We'll never know if 2003's Jemini scored nul points due to the UK's role in the invasion of Iraq or because the duo sang in different keys, but that wooden spoon heralded a disastrous decline: geopolitical shifts in Europe creating voting blocs the UK would never be part of, defeatism by BBC executives over our choice of entry, and a too-cool-for-school attitude maintained by us viewers. Since its inception in 1956, the Contest has always been kitsch, but we began to treat this magical event with our centuries-old British scorn, we lost sight of its potential and scale, and now it's an immense, still beautiful thing and we've been left behind. (Don't be fooled by our position in the Contest's "Big Five" countries with automatic Grand Final entry – with our recent roll-call, that's just awkward.)

> 'We began to treat Eurovision with centuries-old scorn'

WHAT CAN WE do? Do as the Swedes do, engaging with Melodifestivalen – a nationwide song competition that has garnered at least six Eurovision winners and 26 top fives. Emulate the interest of Icelanders, 98 per cent of whom tuned in for the 2023 final. And lean into our big hitters once again, whether that be younger talent from Dua Lipa to Ed Sheeran, or a fitting swansong from the likes of Elton John or the Rolling Stones. Otherwise, never mind that British irony we still hold so dear, I fear the joke will forever be on us.

The Eurovision Song Contest Grand Final is on Saturday 8pm BBC1, Radio 2 and iPlayer

SIMON'S PICK OF THE WEEK

The FA Cup Finals

An FA Cup final double makes this weekend a true festival of football, says Simon Barnes

THE SILVERWARE
The men's and women's FA Cup trophies are buffed and ready

Sport is a celebration of humanity, so if you want to do the job properly you must celebrate the athleticism of both men and women. The Wimbledon tennis tournament has been doing it since 1884; other sports are beginning to catch up. It not just about allowing women to play – and that's been struggle enough in some sports, notably football. It's about sharing the same great stage and the same great occasion.

The Boat Race has become the Boat Races, with men's and women's crews racing over the same treacherous stretch of the Thames on the same day. At the London Marathon the women's elite race is just as important as the men's. And even those who dislike cricket competition the Hundred admit that it's done the right thing for the women's game.

The FA Cup has given the otherwise uninspiring London suburb of Wembley the allure of Shangri-La. This year the men's and women's finals will be held there on successive days.

The women's final is on Sunday: Chelsea, who dominate the game in England, will take on Manchester United. After five successive league championships the London side had a new manager this season and the usual doubts were expressed. But Sonia Bompastor has taken the team to yet another triumph in the league, and with a game to go they were still unbeaten. Lucy Bronze and Keira Walsh, both signed from Barcelona in the close season, made sure the team has stayed fresh and eager.

Manchester United disbanded their women's team in 2005 just after the Glazers took over. But someone must have pointed out that reputation is related to profitability. Anyway, they were reformed in 2018 and last year won their first major trophy, beating Tottenham Hotspur 4–0 in the FA Cup final.

> 'It's about sharing the same great stage and the same great occasion'

They have qualified for Champions League football next season, coming back from two goals down against Manchester City, and with a player sent off, to secure a heroic and decisive draw. There is a resolve in this team – the underdog role will suit them on Sunday.

The men's final on Saturday pits Crystal Palace against Manchester City, who have won the Cup seven times. Victory for Palace would be celebrated across the ages. They have never won the FA Cup, though in 1991, when English clubs were banned from playing in Europe, they did triumph in an extra domestic competition, the Full Members' Cup.

Palace enjoyed a rampaging win against Aston Villa in this year's semis, with Eberechi Eze scoring the goal of the round with an effort like one of Zeus's thunderbolts. This has been a Cup run full of slightly incredulous joy. They will certainly go at City with delight and confidence – at least at first.

For their part City have looked a little world-weary this season. A combination of injuries and a general wising up to Pep Guardiola's tactics took away their sense of certainty. But it's likely to be the farewell appearance of Kevin De Bruyne, who has started a campaign to remind us that he was once one of the greatest players in the world and is still pretty damn good. His recent goal against Wolves was a classic. One more trophy to go with the 19 he has already won with City would certainly provide a fitting finish.

All this adds up to a proper sporting festival, a double event with each gaining meaning and lustre from the other. It's what sport should be.

Lewis Hamilton (above) has a chance to endear himself to the Ferrari faithful, the Tifosi, as the F1 carnival rolls into Imola this weekend. The seven-time world champion has punched in solid displays without threatening the podium in six races so far. His team-mate Charles Leclerc will be equally keen to make an impact at the front of a grid dominated so far this year by McLaren duo Oscar Piastri and Lando Norris.

FOOTBALL

Premier League: Arsenal v Newcastle United

Sunday 4.15pm (k/o 4.30pm) Sky Main Event/Premier League/ Now/Radio 5 Live

There's no love lost between these two sides following a string of fiery clashes in recent seasons, with Newcastle defeating Arsenal in four of their past five encounters. The Magpies have won all three duels this season so far without conceding a goal, including both legs of the Carabao Cup semi-final. Reported Arsenal transfer target Alexander Isak (above) continues to fire Newcastle towards Champions League football.

Rory McIlroy (left) was the name on everyone's lips going into the PGA and the Masters champion will hope to be in the hunt for more glory on the final day of the second major of the year. He won this tournament in 2012 and 2014 – the latter becoming his last major title for 11 years until his recent win at Augusta. Fans will hope the floodgates are ready to open for McIlroy as he battles world number one Scottie Scheffler and reigning champion Xander Schauffele, among other rivals at Quail Hollow, North Carolina.

TEST CRICKET

England v Zimbabwe

From Thursday 10am Sky Main Event/Cricket/Now, 10.30am 5 Sports Extra

The England red-ball team begin their Ashes year with a one-off, four-day Test against Zimbabwe at Nottingham's Trent Bridge. Captain Ben Stokes (above) will lead a refreshed side, with Essex seam bowler Sam Cook in line to make his international debut while stalwarts including Chris Woakes and Mark Wood are injured. England have only played one Test at home since 2007 without Woakes, James Anderson or Stuart Broad in the attack.

RUGBY UNION

Challenge Cup Final: Bath v Lyon

Friday 7pm (k/o 8pm) Premier Sports 1, 9pm (second half) 5 Live

At the Principality Stadium, Cardiff, Bath are within touching distance of their first continental silverware since 2008. Finn Russell (above) kicked nine points during their 39–24 win over Edinburgh in the semi-finals, while Tom Dunn crossed the line twice to set his side on the path to the final.

Bath ended a 17-year trophy drought by winning the Premiership Rugby Cup in March and remain hot favourites to win the Premiership itself this term.

T20 CRICKET

England Women v West Indies Women

Wed/Fri 6pm/6.30pm Sky Main Event/Cricket/Now, 6.15pm/7pm 5 Sports Extra

England begin a fresh era under new leadership, former captain Charlotte Edwards having assumed the position of head coach. A four-match series against the West Indies begins with two T20 showdowns this week, first in Canterbury and then in Hove. Nat Sciver-Brunt (right) leads the team after Heather Knight's nine-year reign.

Europa League Final

Wednesday 6.30pm (k/o 8pm) TNT Sports 1/Discovery+/ 7pm Radio 5 Live/Talksport

At the time of writing, Manchester United and Tottenham Hotspur each had a sizeable advantage going into their second-leg semi-final ties. When it comes to United and Spurs, anything is possible – for better or for worse. However, should the Premier League pair both defend their leads and reach the showdown in Bilbao, Spain, it'll be the first all-English Europa League final since 2019 when Chelsea crushed Arsenal 4–1 in Baku.

REALITY

Clarkson's Farm Amazon Prime Video Series 4 episodes 1–4 available Friday

You know the (seed) drill by now: as Jeremy Clarkson's agreeable reality doc returns, he has a new plan to bring prosperity to Diddly Squat, his struggling Oxfordshire farm. What is it this time? Having battled the council last year over his plans to open a restaurant and the possibility of his fame drawing unmanageable crowds to the site, Jez now decides to distract everyone by purchasing a pub. The flaw in this scheme is that, like farming, being a pub landlord is another great British business that involves a lot of awkward hard work without a guaranteed financial return. Still, there's fun to be had scoping out potential purchases, and there are plenty of local pubs up for sale. Back at Diddly Squat itself, this series has made farm manager Kaleb a star in his own right, and he's now off on a UK tour, which means Clarkson has to fend for himself.

There's an old tractor that needs replacing and an extended spell of wet weather is threatening to kill off the normally lucrative wheat harvest. For those who enjoy, or can tolerate, the host's screen persona, the show remains an informative romp through the difficulties of modern farming. JACK SEALE

Two big-name speakers, CEO Griffin Mill (a very game Bryan Cranston) and Zoë Kravitz, are still suffering from the buffet of drugs inadvertently laid on by Matt (Rogen).The film references come thick and fast as the team try to save the company – and their jobs. Can they snatch victory from the jaws of defeat? FRANCES TAYLOR

SCI-FI

Murderbot

Apple TV+ Ep 3 available Friday

This very strange sci-fi dramedy continues, with Alexander Skarsgard as the apparently dutiful android who has achieved sentience, which mainly manifests as smug snark that only we can hear. This week, Murderbot (why is it called that? It doesn't seem to want to murder anyone) spends more time witheringly observing its human crewmates, while they edge closer to deducing that something's up. Nothing in this series fits together smoothly, but in this third episode there is at least a semblance of a story emerging. JS

A gently intriguing miniseries takes us to the clifftop mansion of retired lawyer turned bird-fancier and, possibly, cult leader Michaela (Julianne Moore). Her faithful assistant is Simone (Milly Alcock), a determined striver who sees to Michaela's every need. Her boss, however, has no idea about Simone's humble background – until, that is, Simone's smoking, straight-talking sister Devon (Meghann Fahy) crashes in uninvited, ready to cause chaos. One of the most pleasing things about Sirens is that it doesn't play all its cards too early: is it a satire on the rich, an examination of sisterhood or a comment on how women still struggle to be seen as equals in the workplace? Is it a drama about social class, or something more fanciful? It might just be a mix of all the above. JACK SEALE

Nonnas ★★★ 12

Netflix Available now

In 2007, Joe Scaravella opened a restaurant on Staten Island with a cooking staff made up entirely of grandmothers. The origins of the project are traced with impeccable taste in this lovingly prepared biopic. Susan Sarandon, Talia Shire, Brenda Vaccaro and Lorraine Bracco twinkle as the nonnas, while Vince Vaughn makes a louche, likeable Joe. Offering jocular insights into Italian-American rivalries and the snobbery of the foodie media, this is essentially a celebration of friends, family and the joys of good home-cooking. Corny, sentimental and irresistible. DAVID PARKINSON

COMEDY DRAMA

The Miracle Club ★★★ 12

Netflix Available now

A strong female ensemble spearheads this touching comedy drama set in Ireland in the 1960s. The story sees devout Catholics Eileen (Kathy Bates), Lily (Maggie Smith) and Dolly (Agnes O'Casey) planning a trip to Lourdes, the French town where pilgrims flock in the hope of witnessing miracles. Their trip is unsettled, though, when Chrissie (Laura Linney), the estranged daughter of their late friend, tags along. While the narrative is predictable, director Thaddeus O'Sullivan (The Heart of Me) finds a cosy, heartfelt tone and makes the most of his esteemed cast. JAMES MOTTRAM

ANIMATED FANTASY

Love, Death & Robots

Netflix Available from 15 May

The animated anthology series returns with a fourth batch of dark tales: it's like Black Mirror's more twisted little brother, but since it's usually a cartoon it's more likely to be set in a galaxy far, far away. The new run is typically eclectic, with a rare foray into live action (Rhys Darby playing a vicar negotiating with a dolphin-worshipping alien) along with stories of gladiators on Jupiter, a megalomaniacal cat... and a string-puppet re-creation of Red Hot Chili Peppers playing live at Slane Castle in Ireland in 2003, voiced by the band themselves and directed by David Fincher. It's the kind of show where even the episodes that don't work are interesting. JS

Untold: The Fall of Favre

Netflix Available from Tuesday

The Untold sports documentary strand is always worth a spin – Shooting Guards was an excellent recent addition to the catalogue – and this new one tells a classic Untold story of a gifted star whose off-field behaviour has tainted his legacy. Brett Favre is the quarterback who led the Green Bay Packers to their 1997 Super Bowl triumph, and was a star of the NFL for 20 years. But his reputation has been battered by a near-fatal drug addiction, as well as allegations of inappropriate behaviour and of financial irregularities. Mike Leigh is on familiar but fruitful ground with this London-set family drama. Marianne Jean-Baptiste gives an exquisite, Bafta-nominated performance as Pansy, a troubled mother who is permanently angry at the world. She's resentful of her laid-back sister (Michele Austin), who has a loving relationship with her two daughters. It's an emotionally potent but often very funny examination of sisterhood, marriage and mental ill health. Leigh's first film with an almost entirely black cast, this is a finely etched character study rooted in its nuanced, empathetic performances. JAMES MOTTRAM

COUNTRY POP Remember Monday represent the UK and Graham Norton (below) hosts

MUSIC

Eurovision Song Contest 8.00pm BBC1 Catch up via iPlayer

If AI was tasked with writing a winning Eurovision song, it'd likely come up with Sweden's entry Bara Bada Bastu. Performed by comedy group KAJ and roughly translated to "Just take a sauna", the ridiculous (and ridiculously catchy) track has amassed double the number of views on YouTube of any of the other 37 songs longlisted for this year's contest.

So, can Sweden do it again? They're already jointly the most successful country in Eurovision history (notching up seven wins, the same as Ireland) and the bookies' favourites. It's hard to see anyone else beating them in Basel, Switzerland.

Meanwhile the UK's entry is girl band Remember Monday – a country pop trio who auditioned for The Voice UK in 2019. Back then they were eliminated before they could reach the live shows. That same fate was an impossibility for Eurovision, given we're part of the "Big Five". So that's... something. Let's hope the title of their tempo-adverse effort What the Hell Just Happened? isn't what we're all left saying after tonight's results come in.

William and Catherine: Putting Family First

7.30pm 5 Catch up via My5

The conflict between commitment to the crown and maintaining a stable family life has challenged the royal family for generations. For the Prince and Princess of Wales, their priority of putting parenting first is clear, which breaks many traditions of their ancestors. This exhaustive documentary examines how William and Kate have quietly revolutionised what it means to be a royal parent in the modern age.

The Princess talking publicly about childbirth and her cancer diagnosis, and William's insistence on being a hands-on dad, have made them the most relatable royals yet. The film is full of details as to how our next King and Queen are securing the future of the monarchy. JOHNATHON HUGHES

P The Boys in the Boat

★★ 12

8.00pm BBC2 Catch up via iPlayer

George Clooney directs this true-life drama about the University of Washington team that rowed its way to gold in the 1936 Berlin Summer Olympics, based on the book by Daniel James Brown.

Callum Turner (Emma) plays Joe Rantz, a student in desperate need of funds to continue his education. Rowing for the uni crew, which is led by coach Al Ulbrickson (Joel Edgerton), is a way to earn a wage, but will he overcome the physical strain and fierce competition?

There's a curious lack of drama in the competitive rowing scenes, making this a sports biopic that sinks long before the finish line. JAMES MOTTRAM Reviews: page 39

Titanic: Our Secret Histories

8.00pm C4 Catch up: C4 streaming

The story of the Titanic has been told in countless ways, big and small. This fascinating documentary, however, seeks to illuminate the tales that have been lost at sea. Laura Ward, for instance, is the descendant of a woman called Silanah, who was part of a Syrian community based in the ship's lower third-class deck. Here she travels to Belfast to investigate Silanah's claim that multiple Syrian men were shot dead on the ship while being turned away from lifeboats.

It is a story with challenging revelations for Cliff Ismay, who is trying to prove that ancestor Bruce Ismay – the chairman of White Star Line, which owned the Titanic – was scapegoated as a coward after surviving the sinking. STEPHEN KELLY

Blessed day: Aunt Lydia (Ann Dowd) is back. However, she looks a rather pathetic figure, having been stripped of her power, health and cattle prod, when she discovers that her "special girl" Janine is now working as a prostitute in a subterranean "den of depravity" in Gilead.

Meanwhile June (Elisabeth Moss) is mounting a rescue mission in No Man's Land. It seems a lot less dangerous than it used to be, so why Moira (Samira Wiley) and Luke (O-T Fagbenle) found it so difficult to escape is a mystery. And Serena (Yvonne Strahovski) is using her status to market New Bethlehem to visiting dignitaries. "She always ends up on top," June comments drily. JANE RACKHAM

SERIES FINALE

Half of Denmark's population has left, including Laura (Amaryllis August), who regrets her decision to trust people smugglers, and architect Jacob (Nikolaj Lie Kaas) who thinks he's secured his future in France. This distressing drama piles on the devastating realities of being a refugee by putting privileged Europeans with good jobs, comfortable lifestyles and no experience of racial discrimination at its centre. The teenage love story is, perhaps, a little overblown but, inevitably, you'll wonder how you would cope if this happened here. JR

Mission: Impossible – Rogue Nation ★★★★ 12

10.00pm C4 Catch up: C4 streaming

Tom Cruise and his undercover agents confront the shadowy Syndicate in this action-packed fifth instalment in the franchise. The regular cast is joined by Rebecca Ferguson as a British MI6 agent, though the focus as ever is on Cruise and his daredevil skills. The stunt coordinator on the movie told Simon Pegg that Cruise was going to do all the driving on the movie because he didn't have a better driver. The sixth film, Fallout, is on Film4 on Friday (see p99), and the latest movie, The Final Reckoning, is in cinemas from Wednesday. TOM FOLLEY See page 39

The FA Cup Final

3.00pm ITV1/3.25pm BBC1 Catch up via ITVX/iPlayer

For neutrals, this is perhaps half of the dream FA Cup final line-up: great as it would have been to see two relatively unheralded teams, Crystal Palace and Nottingham Forest, beat the big guns in their semi-finals, we can settle for a battle between a waning superpower and an in-form underdog, as Palace take on Manchester City. Pep Guardiola's light blues have had a disappointing season, but lately have looked more like their old, intimidatingly proficient selves. Crystal Palace, meanwhile, are in mid-table obscurity in the Premier League but are, based on recent performances, one of the sharpest teams in England.

Can Manchester City keep the speedy Ismaïla Sarr, the fearless Jean-Philippe Mateta and the exquisitely skilled Eberechi Eze quiet, or is it time for a new name on the trophy? With some wrangling between the two main broadcasters having finally been settled, the kick-off at Wembley Stadium is at 4.30pm. JACK SEALE Sport: p24

SPACE MAN The Doctor goes Interstellar

DRAMA

Doctor Who

7.10pm BBC1
Available from 8am via iPlayer

Risk has always been part of the Doctor's business, but with this episode sandwiched between the FA Cup final and Eurovision, there's more jeopardy than in an average week. As show boss Russell T Davies has acknowledged, if the football over-runs, then there may not be time for the Time Lord on BBC1 before we head live to Switzerland.

All being well though, there'll still be space in the schedule: after all, this adventure serves as a companion piece to Eurovision, featuring as it does the Interstellar Song Contest of 2925, with specially created hits from composer Murray Gold and a host in the form of Rylan, whose enthusiasm remains undimmed despite the passing of centuries. DAVID BROWN See feature: page 20

Fake

10.30pm ITV1 Catch up via ITVX

Things just seem to happen to Joe (David Wenham). He has, eventually, persuaded Birdie (Asher Keddie) to let him take her and her family out on his beautiful vintage boat for sunset drinks to celebrate the wedding anniversary of her mother and late father.

It's a big deal, partly because it's the first time he'll meet the family, but also because her mother is such a nightmare (you'll wince at her continual put-downs of Birdie) and because it's a year since her father died. Their marriage, we learn, was nothing short of perfect. However, the evening goes terribly wrong... again.

You won't believe his excuse – although Birdie does. That "run" text she received seems increasingly appropriate. JR

Graham Norton provides his usual take on events from the commentary booth, as Remember Monday fly the flag for the UK with their song What the Hell Just Happened? The first all-female group to represent the UK since 1999, the country-pop trio is made up of Lauren Byrne, Holly-Anne Hull and Charlotte Steele. Known for their vocal harmonies and a capella covers, in 2019 they reached the quarter-final of The Voice UK.

If the group can end the UK's 28-year wait to win the event once more, they'll follow in the footsteps of former Eurovision champions Katrina and the Waves, Bucks Fizz, Brotherhood of Man, Lulu and Sandie Shaw.

FILM REVIEWS

FILM OF THE DAY

The Untouchables ★★★★★

10.00pm-12 midnight BBC2 15

CRIME DRAMA In Brian De Palma's riveting take on the old TV show, Kevin Costner gives a star-making performance as Eliot Ness, the quiet Treasury agent and family man who picks up a pump-action rifle in order to rid Chicago of bootlegger Al Capone (Robert De Niro). Always a showman, De Palma lets loose with a barrage of bloody set pieces, notably the climax at the railway station – a nod to The Battleship Potemkin. Yet for many the main attraction is Sean Connery's Oscar-winning turn as the cop who shows Ness the ropes. ADRIAN TURNER (US 1987, violence, swearing, HD)

Rockets in the Dunes ★★★

10.30-11.30am Talking Pictures TV U

ADVENTURE The sands of Croyde Beach in North Devon are the setting for this gentle adventure from the Children's Film Foundation. When the British Army commandeers the beach for training, the local kids decide to protest. The chirpy enthusiasm of the young cast is contagious, and this quaint tale is shot through with nostalgic charm. JAYNE NELSON (UK 1960, BW)

Murder on the Orient Express ★★★★

1.20-3.25pm BBC2 PG

MURDER MYSTERY Albert Finney makes fussy Belgian detective Hercule Poirot seem every bit as absurd as Agatha Christie intended, earning an Oscar nomination for his performance. Praise should also go to director Sidney Lumet for keeping you guessing right to the end. Kenneth Branagh's version is showing on Wednesday; see review p79. DAVID PARKINSON (UK 1974, some violence, HD)

Annie ★★

2.40-4.55pm C4 PG

MUSICAL This updated remake of the 1977 Broadway hit mostly feels like a wasted effort under the haphazard direction of Will Gluck. But its saving grace is Quvenzhané Wallis, who is wonderful as the orphan who is offered a means of escape from her drunk carer (Cameron Diaz) after she meets a cynical tycoon (Jamie Foxx). ALAN JONES (US 2014, HD)

27 Dresses ★★★

3.25-5.10pm BBC2 12

ROMCOM In this reassuringly familiar movie, Katherine Heigl plays a woman who is always the bridesmaid, never the bride – and has 27 bridesmaid dresses to prove it. Her story attracts the attention of newspaper wedding columnist James Marsden, who then falls for Heigl. DAVE ALDRIDGE (US 2008, edited for swearing, HD)

P The Boys in the Boat ★★

8.00-10.00pm BBC2 12

See review p32.
(US 2023, swearing, HD)

Pacific Rim: Uprising ★★★

9.00-11.05pm ITV2 12

SCI-FI ACTION This action sequel stars John Boyega as the son of Idris Elba's deceased hero, who avoids going to jail by training new robot-pilot cadets. And just in time, too, because rogue Jaegers are about to go on the rampage. The monster mayhem makes little sense, but once the gargantuan battles begin, this delivers on all city-trashing fronts. AJ (US 2018, violence, HD)

Heat ★★★★

9.00pm-12.15am Legend Xtra 15

CRIME THRILLER Michael Mann's tense tale of a cop and a robber is epic in both scale and length. Robert De Niro is on fine form as the methodical criminal who can abandon everything in 30 seconds when the heat is on, though Al Pacino is more of a cliché as the angst-ridden lawman on his tail. The running battle in downtown LA is one of the best action scenes ever filmed. AT (US 1995, violence, swearing)

Mission: Impossible – Rogue Nation ★★★★

10.00pm-12.25am C4 12

SPY ACTION In this eye-popping fifth episode in the franchise, Ethan Hunt (Tom Cruise) and his team take measures to neutralise a global threat posed by the mysterious "Syndicate". Cruise clinging to the side of a plane during take-off is just one of the exciting stunts, while a steely Rebecca Ferguson is a fine addition to the cast. Fallout is showing on Friday; see review p99. AJ (US 2015, some violence, HD)

Venom ★★

12.25-2.15am C4 15

ACTION FANTASY Tom Hardy plays a reporter who becomes infected with a symbiotic alien brought to Earth by a power-hungry scientist (Riz Ahmed). It's let down by sloppy writing, but Hardy is likeable in the lead, forming an amusing bond with Venom that gives the second half of the film a twisted buddy-movie feel. VICTORIA LUXFORD (US 2018, violence, swearing, HD)

Parallel Mothers ★★★★

1.00-2.55am BBC2 15

DRAMA Pedro Almodóvar directs this touching and typically stylish tale about female solidarity and political adversity. Photographer Penélope Cruz and teenager Milena Smit bond in the maternity ward where both give birth after unplanned pregnancies. Almodóvar weaves together their stories with emotionally satisfying results. AJ (Sp 2021, sex scenes, HD)

DRAMA

The Bombing of Pan Am 103

9.00pm BBC1 Catch up via iPlayer

NEW SERIES

There's a sense of déjà vu here, given that this is the second factual drama about the Pan Am bombing this year. In January, Sky Atlantic aired Lockerbie: a Search for Truth, with Colin Firth portraying bereaved father Dr Jim Swire's crusade to get justice for his daughter, who was killed in the tragedy.

This six-part series, a co-production between the BBC and Netflix, takes a more multi-faceted approach. In the immediate aftermath there are anxious relatives waiting for news, but at the forefront is the investigation unfolding either side of the Atlantic.

When calls come in about fire and debris raining down on a small town, Scottish police including DCS John Orr (Peter Mullan) and DS Ed McCusker (Connor Swindells) are first on the scene. But not far behind are the Met and the FBI, including US explosives expert Tom Thurman (Eddie Marsan, with an accent as thick as his 'tache). Soon, all sides are jostling to lead a case where the world is watching.

Continues tomorrow at 9pm. FRANCES TAYLOR See feature: page 16

Football: Women's FA Cup Final

Chelsea v Manchester United

*12.50pm (kick-off 1.30pm) BBC1
Catch up via iPlayer

Taking over from a revered coach is a double-edged sword: you likely inherit a strong team, but it's hard to measure up to your predecessor. So far, however, Sonia Bompastor is doing a fine job of managing Chelsea following the departure of Emma Hayes: with the league cup and Super League already in the bag, the treble is on. Standing in the Bompastor Blues' way at Wembley are the FA Cup holders Manchester United, who lost to Chelsea in the league the other week, and indeed in the 2023 final of this competition. Stopping the likes of Lucy Bronze and Millie Bright will take everything United have got.

Antiques Roadshow

8.00pm BBC1 Catch up via iPlayer

The last time the Antiques Roadshow team visited Beaumaris Castle on the island of Anglesey in north Wales, jewellery expert Joanna Hardy was dazzled by a rare ruby and diamond collection that had been worn by a family for generations of weddings. This time she's equally thrilled to see some jewellery that was once owned by Lady Megan Lloyd George (daughter of former prime minister David). Other treasures brought in for valuation include a ceremonial puppet, a Royal Doulton vase and a very old dog collar.

Meanwhile, heading a little further north on the Isle of Man, Marc Allum examines a collection of trophies from the famous TT road racing event for motorcycles.

No offence to classical virtuoso Lang Lang, but his replacement as mentor has been a breath of fresh air during the third series of the ivory-tinkling talent search. Award-winning US artist Jon Batiste has added a whole new energy to proceedings.

Now, with the train station auditions over and the final concert at Gateshead's Glasshouse mere weeks away, the hard work begins. Jon, Mika and Claudia Winkleman prepare the amateur pianists to perform on a professional stage for the first time. When Mika and Jon do some one-on-one coaching, there are surprises in store. Rocky rehearsals leave our mentors worried. Have they taken too big a gamble with the line-up? Can they get their acts ready in time? MICHAEL HOGAN

Andrew Lloyd Webber Night

*from 8.40pm BBC4
Catch up via iPlayer

In the year the musical impresario reunites with Tim Rice for their first collaboration in 14 years (Sherlock Holmes and the 12 Days of Christmas, opening in November), BBC4 celebrates his cultural contribution with some gems from the archive.

Andrew Lloyd Webber at the BBC, first shown in 2023, features performances of some of his most famous West End ditties from the likes of Elaine Paige, Barbra Streisand and Michael Crawford, plus interviews with the man himself. It's followed by an Imagine... from 2018 in which he opens up about his early life. You'll wake up tomorrow humming Don't Cry for Me Argentina.

Later... with Jools Holland

10.00pm BBC2 Catch up via iPlayer

Five months should be long enough for Jools Holland to have recovered from his annual Hootenanny antics. And presumably he'll return tonight with a skip in his step as faces old and new congregate around the ivories at London's Alexandra Palace. In the veterans' corner are Skunk Anansie, whose sound is now more focused and less rock-based than when they first played Later... in 1999. And representing the new contingent is Heartworms. The gothy vocalist delivers brooding lyrics set against dark yet danceable stabs of grown-up electronic pop. GARY ROSE

NEW SERIES

Amanda Seyfried plays Philadelphia beat cop Mickey Fitzpatrick in this edgy drama based on Liz Moore's novel. In the high-crime neighbourhood of Kensington, there have been three deaths – probably murders – of sex workers, but Mickey is also obsessively searching for her missing addict sister.

However, this isn't a simple police procedural. Dark (in subject and visuals), it's an unflinching, slow-burn look at homelessness, opioid addiction and broken communities that is presumably aiming for a Mare of Easttown vibe. JR

ON THEIR LIPS Alison (Rose Ayling-Ellis) is given a special assignment

DRAMA

Code of Silence 9.00pm ITV1 Full series on ITVX

NEW SERIES

Police canteen worker Alison (Rose Ayling-Ellis) is excited to be asked by the CID to use her lip-reading skills for a covert operation. They need her to decipher the surveillance conversations of a gang plotting a high-stakes heist but, although Alison is a smart young woman, she becomes so embroiled in the investigation she puts herself at risk.

Catherine Moulton's ground-breaking script cleverly shows what it's like to be a deaf lip reader through the thoughtless attitude of others and subtitles that gradually make sense as Alison pieces the sentences together. But it's also a gripping crime story, told by an impressive cast including Andrew Buchan, Charlotte Ritchie, Kieron Moore, Beth Goddard and Joe Absolom. It's riveting and there's more tomorrow. JR

Scandinavia with Simon Reeve

9.00pm BBC2 Full series on iPlayer

NEW SERIES

Climate change, national service, mining, nuclear war, reindeer herding and the real home of Father Christmas: for this latest series Simon Reeve moves effortlessly through a smorgasbord of subjects as he explores Norway and Finland. In Svalbard, a town where you can be neither born nor buried, he becomes aware that "thoughts of war are never far away", thanks to its proximity to Russia.

Displaying his customary empathy and curiosity, he visits an enormous nuclear bunker under Santa Park and hears about sisu (the Finnish word for having grit or guts in difficult circumstances). Hats off to him for diving into an ice hole to test himself. JR

The Assembly: Unseen

10.05pm ITV1 Catch up via ITVX

LAST IN SERIES

Mostly, the response to The Assembly has been positive. Ratings have been strong and reviews glowing, with the exception of one critic who found the show "mawkish and exploitative" and argued it wants "nothing more than to signal its own virtue..." Well, if this is virtue-signalling, signal away. It is currently the third most-watched show on ITVX and a second series is coming.

But first, there's this compilation of out-takes, with questions from the collective of neurodivergent interviewers to Danny Dyer, David Tennant, Jade Thirlwall and Gary Lineker that didn't make the final cut. If that includes even more awkward moments, it should be fun. DAVID BUTCHER

FILM OF THE DAY

P Gold ★★★ 9.00-11.20pm Legend 15

ADVENTURE While mining a seam of anti-Wall Street movies, Gold also celebrates a real-life chancer. Matthew McConaughey encapsulates everything that a treasure hunter should be as prospector Kenny Wells, who bankrolls a mining operation in Indonesia before heading for Wall Street to find investors – inevitably, though, success costs. Frustratingly, the film's central power struggles never create enough tension, and the plot is occasionally murky, but, luckily for director Stephen Gaghan, McConaughey's enthusiasm is infectious and the character's innocence shines through. STELLA PAPAMICHAEL (US 2016, swearing)

Dick Tracy vs Cueball ★★
7.35-8.55am
Talking Pictures TV PG

DETECTIVE ADVENTURE Fans will need to get up early for this rarely screened second of RKO's Dick Tracy B-movies. It's an apprentice work for director Gordon M Douglas, better known for Them! and The Detective, and he keeps the pace up. Sadly, the production values are shoddy, and Morgan Conway makes for a vapid Tracy. TONY SLOMAN (US 1946, BW)

Mosquito Squadron ★★
1.00-2.25pm BBC2 PG

WAR ADVENTURE A host of familiar faces keep their upper lips stiff as our boys try to destroy the Nazis' super-duper doodlebug, the V3, in this derivative movie. David McCallum plays an RAF pilot who must comfort his missing friend's wife and lead the mission. Only some nice flying sequences pass muster. DAVID PARKINSON (UK 1968, edited for language, violence, HD)

Johnny English ★★
1.45-3.25pm ITV1 PG

SPY COMEDY Fans of Rowan Atkinson's rubber-faced antics will know what to expect from this slice of slapstick. He plays an enthusiastic but bumbling agent asked to track down those behind the theft of the crown jewels. Atkinson brings the simplistic screenplay to life with a selection of facial tics, pratfalls and poo jokes. SLOAN FREER (UK/US/Fr 2003, may be edited for content, HD)

Ice Cold in Alex ★★★★
2.25-4.35pm BBC2 PG

See review p89. (UK 1958, BW, HD)

Dr No ★★★★★
3.25-5.35pm ITV1 PG

SPY ADVENTURE The James Bond series began in great style here, and director Terence Young set the pace with terrific action, witty humour and exotic locations. Sean Connery is perfect as the debonair secret agent investigating a colleague's death in Jamaica, where he befriends a bikini-clad Ursula Andress. ALAN JONES (UK 1962, may be edited for violence, HD)

Everest ★★★★
9.45pm-12.05am ITV4 12

ADVENTURE This epic mountaineering tale is based on real events on a blizzard-hit Everest in 1996. Among the climbers are Josh Brolin's amateur, Jake Gyllenhaal's cocky rival and Jason Clarke's expedition leader, with Keira Knightley as Clarke's fretting wife back home. The script matches vertiginous action with emotional heft. ANDREW COLLINS (US/UK 2015, violence)

Yesterday ★★★★
10.45pm-12.35am BBC2 (not in N Ireland) 12

FANTASY COMEDY Danny Boyle's film, written by Richard Curtis, hinges on a brilliant conceit, in which a mediocre musician (Himesh Patel) wakes up in a world where The Beatles never existed. This means he can say he's written all of the Fab Four's tunes himself. The result is a healthy shot of feel-good escapism. KAREN KRIZANOVICH (US/UK/Chi/Jpn 2019, swearing, HD)

Jaws 2 ★★
10.45pm-12.50am ITV1 PG

See review p89. (US 1978, violence, swearing, HD)

Flamin' Hot ★★★
12.05-1.45am C4

DRAMA Director Eva Longoria (of Desperate Housewives fame) recounts the story of Richard Montañez (Jesse Garcia), the Mexican-American janitor who claims to have invented US snack sensation Flamin' Hot Cheetos. The veracity of the tale is questionable, but Longoria paints a passionate picture with plenty of Latino flavour. EMMA SIMMONDS (US 2023, swearing, HD)

Man Up ★★★★
12.30-1.55am BBC1 (starts 1.30am in Scotland) 15

ROMCOM Heaped with wit and insight, this screwball tale boasts a smart script and winning performances, all set against an appealingly buzzing London backdrop. Lake Bell stars as a woman who steals someone else's blind date (Simon Pegg) from under the clock at Waterloo Station, and then tries to perpetuate the lie over the course of an eventful evening. KK (UK/Fr 2015, swearing)

Wuthering Heights ★★★
12.55-3.40am Film4 15

ROMANCE Andrea Arnold (Fish Tank) directs this earthy, stripped down adaptation of Emily Brontë's 19th-century love story, with Shannon Beer and Solomon Glave as the young Cathy and Heathcliff. Arnold chases the action, handheld, like a Bourne movie. It's a boldly modernist approach, but a little too avant garde to fully engage. AC (UK 2011, violence, swearing, HD)

GARDENING

RHS Chelsea Flower Show/Garden Rescue

2.00pm/3.45pm BBC1, 8.00pm BBC2 Catch up via iPlayer

An exceptionally dry spring will have added to the challenges facing exhibitors at Chelsea, but now their big moment has arrived, and it's a big one too for BBC TV, whose week-long coverage begins on BBC1 this afternoon, with Nicki Chapman and Angellica Bell and a team of experts channelling the kind of inspiration that only Chelsea offers. Carol Klein, Toby Buckland and Frances Tophill are all on Chelsea duty, with this year's show emphasising gardens with youthful appeal.

Monty Don, Rachel de Thame and Arit Anderson step up this evening on BBC2 to find out about this year's planting trends.

If you're more hands-on gardener than awed spectator, this afternoon's Garden Rescue is not without ambition as Flo and Charlie visit Twickenham with the aim of transforming one couple's unloved patch and filled-in pond into a Hawaiian paradise, complete with tiki bar. The plans they have are on a scale that would not look out of place at Chelsea, all on a £7,000 budget.

Nine more Chelsea programmes follow this week. SIMON O'HAGAN

QUIZ

Mastermind

7.00pm BBC2 Catch up via iPlayer

SERIES FINALE

Specialist subjects in this year's grand final include the Tom Stoppard plays, Tenzing Norgay and Edmund Hillary's 1953 ascent of Mount Everest, the music of Led Zeppelin, groundbreaking German mathematician Emmy Noether, the tangled history of the Empire State Building, and penguins. Life's rich pageant in full, more or less.

A bona fide TV institution, Mastermind has been a staple of the schedules for 53 years. And no wonder – that solid stripped-down format is quizzing in its purest form. A knowledge-guzzling shark. So let's join unflappable quiz-master Clive Myrie to find out who will be the latest proud owner of the coveted glass bowl. PAUL WHITELAW

SOAP

Coronation Street

8.00pm ITV1 Catch up via ITVX

Viewers may still be drying their tears from Julie Carp's death, but there's no respite from the misery as Corrie kicks off a truly dramatic and distressing week. There's a distinct chance that not everybody will make it out in one piece.

Mick and Kit's toxic feud is fuelled by an encounter between the former childhood friends, and escalates into a shocking act of violence that has huge consequences. Kit is hardly in the mood to babysit Craig on day one of his CID placement, and quickly crushes his colleague's enthusiasm. Craigy jumps at the chance to prove his mettle when he's called to a disturbance, though has no idea of the horror that awaits him. Pray for PC Tinker. JOHNATHON HUGHES

Code of Silence

9.00pm ITV1 Catch up via ITVX

It was foolhardy enough for police canteen employee Alison (Rose Ayling-Ellis) to start work in the pub the gang were known to frequent but, even more dangerously, she's getting friendly with gang member Liam (Kieron Moore). "You've risked the entire operation!" DI James Marsh (Andrew Buchan) screams at her when he finds out.

But Alison is determined to keep on seeing Liam while helping the police. The extra money helps because she and her mum, who is also deaf, are skint, but perhaps she's also motivated by the need to prove herself. "They're not suspicious of me. They underestimate me... most people do," she argues when questioned. JANE RACKHAM

HISTORY

Laurence Rees Remembers... The Nazis: a Warning from History

9.00pm, 9.20pm BBC4
Catch up via iPlayer

In 1997, more than 40 years after the end of the Second World War, this six-part BBC series explored the events that led Germany to fascism. Writer and producer Laurence Rees explains that the fall of the Berlin Wall in 1989 opened up possibilities for interviews with people previously unreachable. He also recalls chilling moments in which he found himself challenging the views of those who still believed the Nazis were right.

Episode one follows at 9.20pm. It examines the origins of the Nazi Party and the rise of Adolf Hitler. STEPHEN KELLY

DRAMA

The Last of Us

9.00pm Sky Atlantic
Catch up via Now

In many ways, secrets have driven this second series of The Last of Us – like Ellie's (Bella Ramsey) hidden immunity to the cordyceps infection or Dina's (Isabela Merced) denied romantic feelings. And of course, there's the dark secret that poisoned Ellie's relationship with father figure Joel (Pedro Pascal). So it feels oddly appropriate that I have to keep this penultimate instalment a secret. According to a list of "spoilers" sent to the press, we're not allowed to discuss much of anything about it, including the premise.

Luckily, it's a great episode, and probably worth all the cloak and dagger. HUW FULLERTON

DRAMA

Elsbeth

9.00pm Sky Witness
Catch up via Now

There is a callback to actor Carrie Preston's appearances in The Good Wife in this spin-off, thanks to the reappearance of lawyer Carter Schmidt (Christian Borle), who's in New York to rattle some skeletons that she'd rather keep in the closet.

But that's put on the back burner, thanks to a freak accident during an astronaut-training simulation that results in the death of a billionaire. Expect some satirical digs against the space tourism industry as Elsbeth realises someone purposefully sent him beyond the final frontier. DB

INSIGHT
Chris Packham explores another aspect of neuro-diversity

DOCUMENTARY

Inside Our Dyslexic Minds

9.00pm BBC2 Catch up via iPlayer

The irony of the word "dyslexia", observes Chris Packham, is that it's so difficult to spell. But as he discovers in the second of two documentaries about neurodiversity, there's far more to this condition than the construction of sentences.

Builder Lee, 53, has spent his life not only battling his way through text on the printed page, but also struggling to overcome feelings of low self-worth. Then there's school counsellor Suki, 35, whose issues with organisation, ordering and navigation are a problem shared by many people with dyslexia.

It's a topic that has added resonance for Packham, whose stepdaughter, broadcaster Megan McCubbin, talks here about her own dyslexia and how she used to freeze with anxiety as a child when her stepdad would hand her books that he innocently thought would be of interest. DAVID BROWN

The Bombing of Pan Am 103

9.00pm BBC1 Catch up via iPlayer

Having swathes of real news footage from the 1980s spliced into this drama is distracting (and slightly lazy) – as is the sometimes exposition-laden dialogue. But, after this episode is done getting bogged down in police politics, due focus shifts to the victims and the community pulling together.

A warehouse of plane fragments and personal artefacts is being processed, while loved ones struggle to process their grief. There's the teenager who has lost his parents and sister, and the couple still hunting for their son. For Nazir Jaafar (Dana Haqjoo), his pain is intolerably exacerbated when the FBI accuse his son of bringing the bomb on board. FRANCES TAYLOR

THE EVIDENCE

FILM OF THE DAY

Malcolm X

★★★★ 15

11.00pm BBC2 Catch up via iPlayer

Today marks 100 years since the birth of Malcolm Little who, following a criminal stint and a conversion to Islam, would renounce his "slave name" and become one of the US civil rights movement's major voices. His life story is told in this 1992 biopic by director Spike Lee, with the black-power icon played throughout by a terrific Denzel Washington.

There's fire and stately respect to the film-making here, with Lee's key influence being Lawrence of Arabia. The director accused Warner Bros of selling him short on the budget, but the results are remarkable. As scrappy as it's majestic, this is a serious tribute to a complex figure.

FILM REVIEWS

FILM OF THE DAY

Malcolm X ★★★★

11.00pm-2.10am BBC2 15

BIOGRAPHICAL DRAMA Though conventional by Spike Lee's standards, the writer/director's three-hour biopic of American civil rights leader el-Hajj Malik el-Shabazz – better known as Malcolm X – is suitably monumental. Denzel Washington commands every scene in the title role, as Malcolm Little evolves from teen hoodlum in the 1940s to reformed figurehead of the American Nation of Islam in the late 1950s, before his murder in February 1965. Airing to mark the centenary of Malcolm's birth, this is top-tier film-making. CALUM BAKER (US 1992, violence, swearing, sexual references, drug abuse, HD)

Bombay Waterfront ★★

10.25-11.45am
Talking Pictures TV U

CRIME The fourth and final Paul Temple picture to be produced by Butcher's Film Service retains stalwart star John Bentley. He's spiritedly supported by an ensemble that includes Christopher Lee, whose archaeologist holds the key to a string of murders. The plot is short on twists, so few will be surprised when the perpetrator is unmasked. DAVID PARKINSON (UK 1952, BW)

The Steel Key ★★

11.45am-1.05pm
Talking Pictures TV U

SPY Terence Morgan is effective enough in this breezy but uninspired B-movie, as he tries to rescue a scientist and his formula for super-hardened steel from the clutches of enemy agents. But director Robert Baker's brisk pace can't disguise either the potholes in the plot or the phoneyness of the dialogue. DP (UK 1953, BW)

The Monster Hunters ★★

1.00-2.50pm Legend Xtra 15

SCI-FI A low-budget cash-in from "mockbuster" studio Asylum, this follows the US's Alien Defense Unit as it investigates a crashed alien vessel, with Tom Sizemore playing the colonel in charge of the operation. The film pilfers imagery and ideas from better films, and only entertains in its climactic dogfights. SEAN McGEADY (US 2020, may be edited for content)

Powderkeg ★★

2.35-4.25pm
Talking Pictures TV U

WESTERN Shot as a pilot for short-lived TV series Bearcat!, this lightweight movie sees maverick troubleshooters-for-hire Rod Taylor and Dennis Cole spring into action in their Stutz Bearcat car when a train is hijacked near the American-Mexican border. Set in 1914, the film's reams of historical context slow down the narrative at the expense of gripping incident. TERRY STAUNTON (US 1971)

Voyage to the Bottom of the Sea ★★★

2.45-4.50pm Legend U

ADVENTURE Walter Pidgeon and Joan Fontaine are top billed in this entertaining sci-fi outing, but the real star is the submarine Seaview. The glass-fronted nuclear sub went on to star in its own TV series following its exploits here, as admiral Pidgeon fires its missiles into the Van Allen radiation belt and saves Earth from meltdown. DP (US 1961)

Son of a Gun ★★★ 9.00-11.20pm Great Action 15

CRIME Ewan McGregor stars in this Aussie drama as a bank robber serving a long prison stretch who agrees to help a young petty criminal (Brenton Thwaites) get through his own sentence – for a price. McGregor makes a decent fist of playing against type as a mercenary recidivist thief, but the film's continual and often bizarre genre shifts are a distraction. ADAM SMITH (Aus 2013, violence, swearing, sex scenes, drug abuse)

Red Sonja ★★

11.05pm-12.55am Legend 15

FANTASY Brigitte Nielsen stars as a leather-bikini-clad warrior who aims to avenge the death of her family by confronting wicked queen Sandahl Bergman. But it's Arnold Schwarzenegger who is the real star here, showing off his bulging biceps while trying to retain his dignity in a loincloth as the grunting hero who helps her. JOANNA BERRY (US 1985, violence, nudity)

Memento ★★★★★

11.35pm-1.50am Film4 15

THRILLER This dazzling film starts with a murder, then moves backwards through the events that led up to it. Matters are complicated by the fact that the protagonist of the story (Guy Pearce) suffers from a rare form of amnesia, and the complex, jumbled narrative that unfolds proves equally challenging for the viewer. The film announced a major talent in writer/director Christopher Nolan. DAVID McGILLIVRAY (US 2000, violence, swearing, col/BW, HD)

Second Act ★★

1.50-4.00am Film4 12

COMEDY Overlooked for promotion, assistant store manager Jennifer Lopez uses street smarts and a fake CV to nab a consultancy job with Treat Williams's top cosmetics company. The film is slickly produced, with some gigglesome lines, but various ludicrous twists make it increasingly difficult for Lopez to live her lie convincingly, and her star power can't paper over all of the cracks. DAVE ALDRIDGE (US 2018, swearing, sexual references, HD)

DOCUMENTARY

The British Blood Scandal: Poisoned at School

*9.00pm ITV1
Catch up via ITVX

A forthcoming ITV drama will tell the harrowing story of what's widely regarded as the biggest health scandal in British history. But as a primer, the broadcaster is first homing in on events during the 1970 and 1980s at the Lord Mayor Treloar College in Hampshire, where pupils with haemophilia became victims of a system that prioritised unethical medical research way above patient safety.

You'll no doubt be aware of the headlines about boarders being injected with a drug that was contaminated with HIV and hepatitis. But to hear, from the mouths of those infected, of the recklessness and callousness to which they were subjected is another matter entirely.

Now-infamous footage is also reshown of John Major describing those affected by the blood scandal as having experienced "incredibly bad luck". In reality, the ex-students were guinea pigs whose lives could have been so different had proper care been taken. DAVID BROWN

NATURE

Iolo's River Valleys

7.00pm BBC2 (BBC1 in Wales)
Catch up via iPlayer

Iolo Williams continues his soothing journey through Welsh river valleys. This week he walks through Conwy Valley in North Wales, a scenic region rich in history and natural beauty. It is a joy to watch Williams starstruck by the sight of a redstart, a bird that has migrated from Africa, or rhapsodise about the melodic talents of a wren: "Oh, what a cracking little bird!"

Williams's enthusiastic birdwatching eventually progresses to conservation. On the farmland around Ysbyty Ifan he joins an RSPB team in search of a brood of curlew chicks who face a precarious battle for survival. To lose their call from the Welsh hills, he says, would be like losing the Welsh language itself. STEPHEN KELLY

Faking It

9.00pm 5 Catch up via 5 streaming

Can a posh southern estate agent straight out of central casting be convincingly transformed into a northern market trader in just four weeks? That's the class-based conundrum at the heart of this week's episode of the rebooted reality TV favourite. Floppy-haired Rex is a tough challenge – he's terribly nice and polite, but sticks out like a pampered thumb during his first few days on affable mentor Tony's meat and fish stall in Bolton.

So he's sent back down south to learn the wheeler-dealer ropes from Tom, a cheery Essex market entrepreneur. Steel yourself for cringe-inducing scenes in which Rex attempts to fit in by adopting a "regional accent". But he works hard and means well. PAUL WHITELAW

Our Farm Next Door: Amanda, Clive and Kids

9pm More4 Catch up: C4 streaming

The new year brings new challenges for Amanda and the Owens, as their tough task of renovating a derelict farmhouse in the Yorkshire Dales continues. Facing a brutal winter makes the tricky project impossible at times, though only a fool would underestimate the unstoppable Amanda. When her off-road vehicle gets stuck in a snowdrift, there's soon a tractor on hand to pull it out.

The snow makes the breathtaking scenery even more beautiful, and the Owen children are in their element in the winter wonderland. Unflappable builder Richard is just pleased he can work indoors at last as the interior of Anty John's starts to take shape, with flooring and electricity finally being put in place. JOHNATHON HUGHES

FOOD

Big Zuu and AJ Tracey's Rich Flavours

*9.00pm Sky Max
Catch up via Now

An unabashed exercise in excess, this culinary travelogue follows the ebullient rapper and food enthusiast Big Zuu, plus his rap star cousin AJ Tracey, as they head off in search of some of the world's most expensive dishes. Their journey begins in South Korea, where they dine like kings in Seoul's most expensive hotel (the chef has 16 Michelin stars), before cooking fried chicken for the twinkly descendant of an actual king.

They also meet some super-rich car fetishists and a successful vlogger who makes ASMR videos of herself eating noodles noisily. Fair play to our likeable hosts, they're clearly having a rare old time while Sky foots the bill. PW

DRAMA

Matlock

9pm Sky Witness Catch up: Now

SERIES FINALE

We've ended up at a place that few could ever have envisaged. In episode one, she charmed her way into the law firm, that twinkle in her eye masking burning hatred for those she felt were responsible for the death of her daughter. But what Matty has unexpectedly found is a real friendship with Olympia .

Matty has tried to explain that she both loves and lied to Olympia. And that, despite these emotions and actions appearing contradictory, they can co-exist. But can Olympia reconcile the deception with the affection? The jury is out... DB

SITCOM

The Strange World of Gurney Slade

*9.30pm Rewind TV

This courageously odd sitcom is to TV what Ulysses was to literature: stream-of-consciousness and boundary-pushing. It was devised by and starred Anthony Newley and written by Sid Green and Dick Hills.

In the first of only six episodes, a man (Newley) becomes bored with domestic concerns. Donning an overcoat and ignoring enquiries about boiled eggs, he walks off the sitting-room set, past cameras and a baffled floor manager and out into the street. While it's more peculiar than ha-ha, for a show in which little happens, a lot is going on. It was and is extraordinary. MARK BRAXTON

BACK IN TIME Comedian Aisling Bea is the latest star to trace her roots

FACTUAL

Who Do You Think You Are?

9.00pm BBC1 Catch up via iPlayer*

Comedian Aisling Bea hopes she doesn't find out anything terrible about her ancestors: "like they all had mullets". None of them do. Instead, she uncovers some fascinating stories touching on the potato famine and the Irish struggle for independence from Britain.

However, as she cares passionately about feminism and Irish culture, she's especially thrilled there are several strong-minded women in her family tree as well as a great-grandfather who was at the heart of the 1916 Easter Rising and fought for the preservation of the Irish language. "I'd love to go back in time and tell him... I'm so thankful for all the efforts you are going through," she says.

The Brontës by Anita Rani: Sisters of Disruption

9.00pm Sky Arts Catch up via Now

Anita Rani grew up with the Brontë sisters, sharing their love of the Yorkshire landscape and their sense of being constrained by expectations. This lovely documentary, framed by a personal journey back to Rani's childhood, offers an investigation of what the Brontës brought to literature.

It's in chatty, insightful interviews with academics that Rani gets at issues we would call domestic violence and coercive control, which fired both the Brontës and their readers. DAVID BUTCHER

P Catching Fire: the Story of Anita Pallenberg ★★★★ 15

10.00pm Sky Arts Catch up: Now

If you're a Rolling Stones fan, chances are you already know the name Anita Pallenberg. The style icon, actor and model was married to rocker Keith Richards between 1967 and 1980, and was considered the band's own personal muse.

Perhaps less well known are the colourful specifics of Pallenberg's life away from the arena of rock 'n' roll. This documentary sets that right, using insight gleaned from Pallenberg's own memoir, discovered in a shoebox in the aftermath of her death in 2017. It's a fascinating portrait of a complex and enigmatic figure – one whom Richards himself admits "I couldn't keep up with". JOSH WINNING Film reviews: page 69

9.00 Who Do You Think You Are?
RT 5/8. Aisling Bea. The comedian, actor and screenwriter examines her ancestry, starting with a look at her mother's side of the family. In County Limerick, she learns about her three-times great-grandparents, who were substantial farmers in the area. Next, Aisling heads to County Kerry, where she hears about her paternal great-grandfather's involvement in the struggle for Irish independence and his campaign for the Irish language to be taught in schools. She also explores the story of her paternal great-great-grandmother, a teacher who spent time on the Blasket Islands, off Ireland's west coast. See p63.

FILM REVIEWS

FILM OF THE DAY

P Catching Fire: the Story of Anita Pallenberg ★★★★

10.00pm-12.15am Sky Arts 15

DOCUMENTARY "I've been called a witch, a slut and a murderer," begins this fascinating film about actor, model and muse Anita Pallenberg. After a fateful encounter with the Rolling Stones, she got together with Keith Richards, while also pursuing a movie career in the likes of Barbarella and Performance. Pallenberg tells her own story, voiced by Scarlett Johansson, from a memoir that was found after her death in 2017. She emerges as a force of nature, a true bohemian free spirit. JAMIE HEALY (US 2023, swearing, a sex scene, nudity, HD)

Nearest and Dearest ★★

11.35am-1.20pm
Talking Pictures TV

COMEDY This bawdy, corny spin-off from the long-running ITV comedy series was released the year before that well-loved sitcom departed our screens. It provides a worthy record of the word-mangling sniping between Hylda Baker and Jimmy Jewel as they try to suppress their sibling rivalry and make a go of running their late father's pickle factory. DAVID PARKINSON (UK 1972)

The Spoilers ★★★

1.00-2.50pm Legend PG

WESTERN This was the fourth screen adaptation of Rex Beach's Alaska-set novel. As with previous versions, it's the climactic fight between the leading men that's the big draw, and this time it's John Wayne and Randolph Scott duking it out. The plot is tweaked to accommodate co-star Marlene Dietrich in the saloon keeper role she also played in Destry Rides Again. TONY SLOMAN (US 1942, BW)

A Knight's Tale ★★★★

6.25-9.00pm Film4 PG

PERIOD ADVENTURE Brian Helgeland's medieval caper sets out its stall at the start, when Queen's We Will Rock You plays at a joust, and the film is full of such cheeky flourishes. Heath Ledger plays the commoner who dreams of becoming a knight, and so impersonates one with the help of his merry sidekicks Mark Addy and Alan Tudyk. ANDREW COLLINS (US 2001, edited for content, HD)

Mad Max beyond Thunderdome ★★★

9.00-11.15pm ITV4 15

ACTION The third in the sci-fi series is the weakest, but it remains a robustly entertaining watch. Mel Gibson's Max finds himself a reluctant surrogate father to a tribe of youngsters, as well as fighting gladiatorial battles in a city ruled by Tina Turner's Aunty Entity. Co-directors George Miller and George Ogilvie stage some wild set pieces. JOHN FERGUSON (Aus 1985, violence, swearing, HD)

Amityville Dollhouse ★★

10.15pm-12.15am
Talking Pictures TV 18

HORROR This adds nothing new to the supernatural series and delivers unremarkable horror homages to better efforts in the genre. The Martin family desert the big city rat race for a quiet life in the country. But they find a beautifully ornate doll house in their new home and give it to their daughter, and it soon begins to exert an evil influence over the family. ALAN JONES (US 1996, violence, swearing, sex scenes, brief nudity)

Beyond Utopia ★★★★★

10.40pm-12.25am BBC4 15

DOCUMENTARY It's hard to grasp the reality of life in North Korea under dictator Kim Jong Un, but Madeleine Gavin's exceptional movie captures some of its horrors. Seungeun Kim has spent his life helping people defect to the South, including the Roh family, whose perilous journey we follow. The fraught phone footage lends the movie a gripping immediacy. LAURA RUTKOWSKI (US 2023, violence, HD)

Never Grow Old ★★★

11.20pm-1.20am Film4 15

WESTERN In this grim revisionist western, an Irish undertaker (Emile Hirsch) in a god-fearing frontier town sees business rocket when three lawless bounty hunters (led by John Cusack) take over the local saloon. Mostly shot in flame-lit half light, with earnest performances, it's a tense, edgy affair, and Cusack is convincing as the bad guy. DAVE GOLDER (Ire/Bel/Fr 2019, violence, swearing, HD)

Birds of Passage ★★★★

1.20-3.50am Film4 15

CRIME DRAMA Colombian director Ciro Guerra shares directing duties with his then-wife Cristina Gallego for this ambitious account of the impact of the drug trade on the Wayuu clan residing in the northern desert region of Guajira. Blending western and gangster movie tropes with anthropology and magic realism, this is an intoxicating assault on the senses. DP (Col/Den/Mex/Ger 2018, violence, swearing, a sex scene, nudity, HD)

Cut Bank ★★★ 1.50-3.50am Great Movies 15

CRIME DRAMA Mailman Bruce Dern enlists small-town mechanic Liam Hemsworth to fake his murder and swindle the US postal service out of $100,000 in this low-key but starry thriller. There are some implausible plot twists, but John Malkovich impresses as a taciturn sheriff, while the classy support cast features Billy Bob Thornton and Oliver Platt. TERRY STAUNTON (US 2014, violence, swearing)

TRAVEL

Travels with Agatha Christie and Sir David Suchet

9.00pm More4 Catch up via C4 streaming

NEW SERIES

The smile that David Suchet gave as Hercule Poirot was of an almost imperceptible nature that's a world away from the ready, toothy grin the actor offers up to those he encounters in this Christie-inspired travelogue.

At each stop-off during a tour that begins in South Africa, there's enthusiasm from him, and admiration from those who greet Suchet with a cry of "Sir David!" (it's always "Sir David", never merely "David"). But the tone of this trip is markedly different from the one undertaken by the crime writer and her then-husband Archie when they were members of a 1922 overseas mission to solicit support for the upcoming British Empire Exhibition.

A century on, the legacy of such colonialists as Cecil Rhodes is seen as contentious and Suchet doesn't shy away from addressing those controversies. But the highlight for him is obviously the thundering spectacle of Victoria Falls, an awesome sight that foregrounds the power of nature rather than the might of often-exploitative imperialists.

The Great House Revival

7.00pm BBC2 Catch up via iPlayer

Rob and Alfonso have bought a Dublin terraced house and given themselves 12 months to make it habitable before they get married. They reckon they have the perfect formula, although our host Hugh Wallace worries that aspiration may outstrip budget.

There's a fascinating – and, for community activists Rob and Alfonso, stirring – detour into A House through Time territory when they learn that a former occupant was an Irish MP responsible for an act to make good-quality housing available to the working classes. And if the reveal itself occupies almost a third of the programme, then it is with good reason: this is a spectacular build. GABRIEL TATE

EastEnders

7.30pm BBC1 Catch up via iPlayer

EastEnders are keeping up the nostalgia by naming Lauren and Peter's baby Jimmy, a nod to the lad's late maternal grandfather Jim Branning. Sadly, little Jimmy's arrival is fraught with drama – at barely a week old he's already been rushed back into hospital.

Lauren is concerned about her son's eyesight, and tonight's episode focuses solely on her and Peter's wait for a diagnosis. A consultant informs the parents Jimmy is severely sight impaired. The couple digest the bombshell, which will surely mean more strain on their fragile relationship as Peter is still worried that recovering addict Lauren has relapsed. With a long road ahead, can the pair get their priorities in order? JOHNATHON HUGHES

CRAFT

The Repair Shop on the Road

8.00pm BBC1 Catch up via iPlayer

Will Kirk and Kirsten Ramsay find themselves in the Scottish Borders this week to help with a project close to the heart of the local community. Rodger, a firefighter, was one of the first responders to the 1988 Lockerbie bombing, in which an airplane exploded over the small Border town. The tragedy is the focus of this week's new BBC1 drama The Bombing of Pan Am 103. Rodger was tasked with collecting photographs of the event for a report and needs the team's expertise to preserve them for a new memorial centre.

Meanwhile, Dom Chinea heads to the Highlands to assist in restoring artwork that was left behind by Polish soldiers stationed in Nairn during the Second World War. STEPHEN KELLY

8.00pm C4 Catch up: C4 streaming

After 25 years of TV property-searching, Kirstie Allsopp and Phil Spencer show no sign of slowing down. This time they're in Surrey, where it's all about space. Elise and Elliot, who have three children, have already viewed over 30 potential new homes. One very much caught their eye – but it's way over their available budget. Can Kirstie find anything that matches up? Meanwhile, Kim, Ralph and their two toddlers have run out of room in Kim's two-bed flat and long for what they grew up with in Zimbabwe – a garden and enough space to entertain their extended family. Can Phil tick both boxes at the right price? As the past quarter-century proves, there are no better house-hunters. MICHAEL HOGAN

REALITY

Race across the World

9.00pm BBC1 Catch up via iPlayer

There's a massive time gap between the teams as they prepare for the 1,500km trek to the next checkpoint in the Himalayan foothills. Deciding whether to brave the well-connected cities of Delhi and Agra or gamble on a more relaxed but uncertain route could change everything.

Don't read on if you've not seen who's been eliminated from the race. Nobody could have predicted that 60-something brothers Brian and Melvyn would be so entertaining and emotionally honest. Nor that they'd do so well, but then as kids they used maps and a compass rather than relying on a mobile for information and directions... JR

PROPERTY

Britain's Most Expensive Houses

9.00pm C4 Catch up: C4 streaming

The third series of this grimly compelling but morally grotesque show follows three more agents selling houses to the super-rich, tonight including an £80m Knightsbridge penthouse (unlikely to be a buyer's primary residence, states one agent, blithely), a Hollywood-inspired Cornish retreat and a 19th-century country pile in Norfolk. While a Succession-aping soundtrack grinds away, there is a degree of schadenfreude at the awfulness of some of the expensive architecture, but much of it is annoyingly tasteful. GT

DRAMA

The Chelsea Detective 8.00pm U&Drama

Full series available via U

With an average wait time of three years, many wannabe allotment owners in the UK would no doubt kill to get their green fingers on a patch. Metaphorically speaking. But over in swanky SW10, someone may have gone to literal extremes, as human remains have been found on a sought-after plot.

What gets unearthed first is a skull, its resurfacing giving this new case for DI Max Arnold and DS Layla Walsh the air of Unforgotten, as their initial task is to a put a name to the skeleton – a job made easier by the discovery of a lapel badge in the shape of the American flag. Find out tomorrow at 8.00pm whether Alex Kingston, currently on the margins of the drama as the US Ambassador, will start playing a more significant part in the mystery. DOCUMENTARY

Backlash: the Murder of George Floyd

9.00pm BBC2 Catch up via iPlayer

It is five years since George Floyd was murdered outside a grocery store in Minneapolis. A police officer knelt on his neck for more than nine minutes while Floyd protested that he couldn't breathe. This documentary charts how the incident triggered anger across America, added urgency to the Black Lives Matter movement and sparked demonstrations around the world. It also revisits cases of police brutality here, such as the awful story of black student Julian Cole, who suffered a broken neck and paralysis when police arrested him outside a Bedford nightclub in 2013. Cole died earlier this year. DAVID BUTCHER

PROTEST

DOCUMENTARY

David Frost vs... Elton John

9.00pm Sky Documentaries
Catch up via Now

"David had a way of making you admit things," says Elton John as he looks back here over the interviews he gave Frost at turning points in his life. The two were friends and Elton says Frost "had a deep intellect for how to get the best out of you".

There are times in this series when you wonder whether, if Frost had a darker side, we'd get to hear about it, or whether, perhaps, there's a mildly airbrushed quality to the picture we see, given the involvement of Frost's sons and widow.

But so what? The clips and the outtakes are always interesting, and tonight the interviewees offer insights both ways – on Elton's life and on Frost's. DBu

FILM REVIEWS

FILM OF THE DAY

Wild Rose ★★★★ 11.25pm-1.30am Film4 15

MUSIC DRAMA Glasgow grit meets Nashville swagger in this funny and touching film. Jessie Buckley is sensational as troubled yet talented Scottish songstress Rose-Lynn Harlan. Fresh out of prison, she's trying and failing to start over with her two young children, while her own mum (Julie Walters) pours scorn on her dream of country-music success. But she finds a champion when she begins cleaning the house of the benevolent Susannah (Sophie Okonedo). The star-is-born narrative tends toward the predictable, but Buckley's performance will keep you glued. EMMA SIMMONDS (UK 2019, swearing, sex scenes, HD)

The Curse of the Werewolf ★★ 11.00am-12.50pm Legend Xtra 12

HORROR Hammer's stab at the werewolf legend may look tame compared to later transformations, but this was shocking stuff in its day. The long prologue has little to do with the story of cursed Leon (Oliver Reed), who goes on a killing spree every full moon. But when he does appear, he gives a riveting performance. DAVID McGILLIVRAY (UK 1961, may be edited for violence)

Bite the Bullet ★★★ 1.00-3.50pm Great Action PG

WESTERN Richard Brooks's gripping drama centres on a 700-mile horse race and pits old-school values against shallow capitalism. It's filmed against the stunning scenery of Nevada, Colorado and New Mexico, and the splendid cast includes Gene Hackman, James Coburn, Candice Bergen, Ben Johnson and Ian Bannen. ADRIAN TURNER (US 1975, may be edited for content)

The Lost World ★★★ 2.35-4.30pm Legend PG

FANTASY The "master of disaster" Irwin Allen whisks audiences off to a lost world with this adaptation of Sir Arthur Conan Doyle's novel. In one of his later roles, Claude Rains leads the cast on an Amazon expedition where they confront a host of magnified pet-shop lizards with plastic fins in a glossy, if conventionally plotted, adventure with intermittent thrills. Clips from this would be a mainstay of Allen's TV fantasy series for years to come. ALAN JONES (US 1960)

The Living Daylights ★★★ 8.00-10.45pm ITV4 PG

SPY ADVENTURE Timothy Dalton's take on James Bond is endearingly human: he sweats, he bleeds and he falls in love – with Czech cellist Kara (Maryam D'Abo). The story segues from Soviet defection and arms dealing to the struggles of the Mujahidin, and is rooted more in reality than other entries. MARK BRAXTON (UK 1987, may be edited for content)

Oblivion ★★★ 9.00-11.25pm Film4 12

SCI-FI ACTION Tom Cruise stars as a security repairman who maintains the drones that monitor a desolated Earth in 2077. But when he rescues an astronaut (Olga Kurylenko) from a downed spacecraft, he uncovers secrets from the past. The plot borrows from other sci-fi films, but Cruise acquits himself well. TERRY STAUNTON (US 2013, violence, swearing, HD)

Murder on the Orient Express ★★★★ 10.00pm-12.15am More4 12

MURDER MYSTERY Despite the distraction of director/star Kenneth Branagh's extraordinary moustache as Hercule Poirot, this retelling of the Agatha Christie novel ticks all the whodunnit boxes. The plot sees a group of train passengers fall under suspicion when one of their number is murdered, with Michelle Pfeiffer, Judi Dench, Josh Gad and Penélope Cruz among the suspects. TeS (US/Malta 2017, violence, HD)

Kill Command ★★★ 11.05pm-1.15am Great Movies 15

SCI-FI ACTION Set in a hi-tech future, this low-budget film sees a group of human soldiers and a half-android weapons designer (Vanessa Kirby) land on a remote island for a training mission, only to encounter deadly robots. The dialogue is clunky but the special effects are stunning, and Kirby has great presence. VICTORIA LUXFORD (UK 2016, violence, swearing)

On the Yard ★★★ 1.10-3.05am Talking Pictures TV 15

DRAMA This prison-set tale is good at evoking the conflicts and conversation of convicts milling around the vast exercise yard into which they're released for daily recreation. John Heard plays the wife-killer at odds with prisoner Thomas Waites, and director Raphael D Silver efficiently summons up the atmosphere of a volatile community. TOM HUTCHINSON (US 1978, violence, swearing)

Antwone Fisher ★★★ 1.30-3.50am Film4 15

DRAMA Denzel Washington made his directorial debut with this powerful true-story tale of child abuse and its lifelong effects. Derek Luke is compelling as the young sailor whose deep-rooted problems manifest themselves in outbursts of violence. When he's forced to seek help from a naval psychiatrist (played by Washington), he learns how to process his horrific past. SLOAN FREER (US 2002, violence, swearing, HD)

WHAT A BUZZ
Steve Backshall gets up close and personal to some honey bees

NATURE

The Secret Life of Bees with Steve Backshall

9.00pm 5
Catch up via 5 streaming

If you ever enjoy watching a bee bumbling over a flowerbed or the happy hum around a shrub in spring, this is for you. I came to it with trepidation because of the crisis affecting bee populations, but don't worry: this first episode of a two-part documentary is full of (fairly) good news and interesting nuggets. For instance, one name the Celts gave to Britain was Y Vel Ynys – Isle of Honey.

Apparently, we have just one species of honeybee in the UK but 270-odd other types of bee, most of them nesting in the ground. And make of this fact what you will: male honeybees, known as drones, do zero work around the hive – caring for larvae, gathering pollen, making honey, and so on. So when summer is over, the female workers starve them and kick them out.

Steve Backshall explores this and other intriguing bee-haviour. He also installs a hive in his Berkshire garden that he hopes will become "the Backshall Beetopia". But it gets off to a bad start. DAVID BUTCHER

The Yorkshire Vet

8.00pm 5
Catch up via 5 streaming

Another visit to the glorious Dales to help animals in peril. In a busy week of veterinary action, Shona Searson tackles an unusual emergency with a pregnant sheep who has pushed out her uterus before giving birth. Julian Norton operates on a young girl's much-loved pet goat, while Rohin Aojula heads to Scotland with Rob and Dave Nicholson from Cannon Hall Farm to help them buy a bull.

Finally, Peter Wright performs surgery on an elderly German shepherd whose life is at risk due to an infected womb. Knowing that dear old Missy lives in a pub, Peter knows there'll be a pint in it for him if things go well. Perhaps even a packet of crisps. MICHAEL HOGAN

DRAMA

The Chelsea Detective

8.00pm U&Drama Catch up via U

One body found on an allotment could be considered misfortune. The discovery of a second? Well, that's when the seeds of suspicion start to grow. Max and Layla currently have a hunch that workers at the US Embassy are somehow entwined with the case. But it doesn't take detectives of their calibre to deduce that no amount of Ferrero Rochers will ensure a welcome reception from the ambassador.

On the upside, Max is making progress on the dating front, with interest coming from botanist Roz. That is, until soon-to-be-ex-wife Astrid makes a reappearance. Gone are the days when we were longing for the pair to be reunited – now, it feels as though Max really ought to be moving on. DAVID BROWN

Classic Movies: the Story of Scott of the Antarctic

8.00pm Sky Arts Catch up via Now

Released in 1948, Scott of the Antarctic starred a perfectly cast John Mills as British explorer Robert Falcon Scott, whose ill-fated attempt to reach the South Pole is the stuff of tragi-heroic legend. This beautifully made Ealing Studios classic played a key role in cementing that legend in the public consciousness. It could so easily have been presented as a stiff-upper-lip melodrama, but opted instead for a subtle, documentary-like approach. A Sky Arts stalwart, Classic Movies is refreshingly straightforward. Host Ian Nathan and fellow film critics provide perceptive analysis with carefully chosen clips. That's all you need. PAUL WHITELAW

Ambulance

9.00pm BBC1
Catch up via iPlayer

"The system's not perfect," an ambulance dispatcher called Liam tells us with crystal understatement. He means the whole healthcare caboodle – GPs' surgeries, waiting lists, mental health services, social care – and the fact that because they are patchy or under-resourced, patients call an ambulance instead.

Which in turn means a man called Marcello, 95, has to wait five hours for help after breaking his arm, something he seems remarkably cheery about and there's a nine-hour wait for another man with colon cancer. The programme starts to feel like a cry for help, but Liam reveals that he has himself had to rely on the system throughout his life, and it has always been there for him. DBu

Marie Antoinette

9.00pm BBC2 Catch up via iPlayer

"You have no assets! Everything, including your jewellery, belongs to France." It's 1785, and Marie-Antoinette (Emilia Schüle) is rebuffed by a financial-planning flunkey. Off she glides to appeal to Louis (Louis Cunningham) for the dosh required to buy Saint-Cloud, her dream gaff, but it's difficult to ask your spouse for financial help when you're also announcing a pregnancy and he is an outside bet for the father. Meanwhile, Chartres (Oscar Lesage) swans back into court, ready to cause trouble. Can Marie ease him back out of her life and move herself into a cushy estate? JACK SEALE

DRAMA

Poker Face

9.00pm Sky Max Catch up via Now

A baseball to the head results in Charlie Cale (Natasha Lyonne) turning up at the stadium of the Montgomery Cheesemongers, minor leaguers on a losing streak. Their pitcher's glory days may be over, but he has a secret plan: have the team place a big bet on their upcoming fixtures, throw the games and bag the cash. Naturally, the scheme turns murderous and Charlie is suspicious, but she at least finds a friend in a Cheesemonger devotee played by Carol Kane. The veteran star, best known for Annie Hall and Taxi, once had a famously high-pitched delivery, but now her vocals are as husky and sandpapery as Lyonne's. DB

Interior Design Masters with Alan Carr

8.00pm BBC1 Catch up via iPlayer

Three Edinburgh venues are being made over this time in preparation for the annual Fringe festival: one is given a vintage circus vibe with a bold lipstick-red colour scheme; another aims for sophistication while honouring its veterinary college history and the third has an "intentional clutter" aesthetic that features strips of different vintage wallpaper. "Couldn't you decide which one to use?" asks Alan Carr provocatively.

You can usually tell what Michelle Ogundehin thinks from the tone of the "hmmm" she always utters when she first walks in. Guest judge Shayne Brady is a lot harder to read. However, they're both enthusiastic about one makeover so we know that designer is guaranteed a place in next week's final.

Taskmaster

9.00pm C4 Catch up via C4 streaming

Sometimes, you might wonder if Alex Horne has any regrets in his creation of Taskmaster. Like, say, when he's standing in a chilly garden in underwear, about to be drenched in water by an eager contestant. Or being regularly abused by Greg Davies for the loopholes he hides in all the challenges. Still, one suspects he knows exactly what he's doing, given that his other TV show – sitcom The Horne Section TV show, returning tonight at 10pm – also relies on him being belittled at every turn. Alex Horne clearly knows he's funniest when he's downtrodden.

Murdoch Mysteries

9.00pm U&Alibi Catch up via Now

Whenever anyone on Murdoch Mysteries visits a theatre, the play they're watching is guaranteed to be interrupted by murder. In previous episodes, a prop gun was revealed to be loaded with real bullets and a desiccated corpse fell from the rafters. And now, during a production of Selections from Shakespeare, audience members Murdoch and Brackenreid find their revels ended by yet another on-stage fatality.

The victim here is Donald Tooley, a member of a troupe of visiting actors who, while performing a scene from Hamlet, has a dose of henbane poured into his ear. But while the sight is a shock to some, boss man Brackenreid, a long-time devotee of the Bard, decides immediately to investigate. DB

FILM REVIEWS

FILM OF THE DAY

Panic in Year Zero ★★★★

11.15pm-1.00am Talking Pictures TV 15

SCI-FI DRAMA Ray Milland directs and stars in this effective, low-budget story about the breakdown of society that follows a nuclear attack. Milland's nondescript direction sometimes makes the film even more chilling, as survivors take the law into their own hands and head for the hills through a traffic jam of surreal proportions. Milland plays the everyday Joe who determines that America has become a land where it's every man for himself, and so must behave in a similar way to help his family survive. There's a lot going on in this movie, with much to think about. ADRIAN TURNER (US 1962, violence, BW)

The End of the Road ★★★

11.45am-1.20pm Talking Pictures TV U

DRAMA Dependable Finlay Currie thrives in a rare leading role here, playing a man whose mental health suffers after he's forced into early retirement. A fine example of early social realism, this has a corny ending, but Currie deftly combines flintiness and vulnerability as he proves his worth to his family, workmates, and bosses. DAVID PARKINSON (UK 1954, BW)

Saraband for Dead Lovers ★★★

12.40-2.35pm Film4 U

PERIOD ROMANCE Postwar cinema audiences wanted colour and royalty, and this sumptuous movie set in 17th-century Hanover supplies both. Joan Greenwood plays the unhappy wife of the future George I, who falls for Swedish count Stewart Granger, prompting his ex-lover Flora Robson to react. It's a shame that Basil Dearden and Michael Relph direct with such straight faces. AT (UK 1948, HD)

My Name Is Nobody ★★★

1.45-4.05pm 5 Action 12

SPAGHETTI WESTERN Sergio Leone produced this movie and once again cast Henry Fonda, the star of Once upon a Time in the West, this time as a notorious, aging gunfighter. Terence Hill plays the "Nobody" who seduces Fonda into a final showdown. The story does have epic pretensions, but Hill is no Clint Eastwood. AT (It/Fr/WGer 1973, may be edited for content, HD)

MacShayne: Winner Takes All ★★★

5.00-6.50pm Legend Xtra 12

CRIME DRAMA This rather enjoyably cheesy TV movie pilot stars Kenny Rogers as an ex-con who is drawn into a plan to steal $6 million. The heist, led by Terry O'Quinn's former police officer, is a sub-par Ocean's Eleven scheme, but the film benefits from being shot on location in Las Vegas, and Rogers is a charming lead. JAYNE NELSON (US TVM 1994, may be edited for content)

Ice Cold in Alex ★★★★

8.00-10.05pm BBC4 PG

WAR DRAMA John Mills swigs the most famous glass of beer in movie history here, and how well he's earned it, having steered clear of the bottle as well as Axis troops to bring an ambulance to safety after the fall of Tobruk in 1942. Sylvia Syms, Harry Andrews and Anthony Quayle are along for the ride, and director J Lee Thompson keeps the action tense. DP (UK 1958, BW, HD)

The Dead Pool ★★

9.00-10.55pm ITV4 18

CRIME THRILLER "Dirty" Harry Callahan's fifth outing finds the San Francisco cop investigating when a crazed movie fan starts bumping off celebrities. Clint Eastwood's grouchy performance is the only reason for watching this silly and sadistic thriller, although Liam Neeson also features as a British director. TONY SLOMAN (US 1988, violence, swearing, drug abuse)

A Few Good Men ★★★★

9.00-11.45pm Film4 15

COURTROOM DRAMA The ultimate rebel Jack Nicholson has a ball as an establishment figure in this crisply directed movie. In fact, Nicholson's role as a martinet colonel amounts to little more than a scene-stealing cameo. Nominal leads Tom Cruise and Demi Moore play naval lawyers out to find the truth behind the death of a marine. JOHN FERGUSON (US 1992, violence, swearing, HD)

Malcolm X ★★★★

10.05pm-1.15am BBC4 15

See review p59.
(US 1992, violence, swearing, sexual references, drug abuse, HD)

Jaws 2 ★★

10.45pm-12.45am ITV1 (not in STV, Border Scotland) PG

ADVENTURE Three years after those infamous shark attacks, another great white swims into police chief Roy Scheider's resort town. Director Jeannot Szwarc tries to ape Steven Spielberg's style, but the suspense comes unglued because it floats in all-too-familiar waters. Stalwart Scheider does his best with the material he's given. DP (US 1978, violence, swearing, HD)

A Call to Spy ★★★

11.30pm-2.05am Great Action 12

WAR THRILLER Lydia Dean Pilcher's movie is a heartfelt tribute to the women who were crucial to the setting up of Churchill's spy network in Vichy France. Sarah Megan Thomas (who also wrote the script) gives a committed performance as Virginia Hall, an American with a prosthetic leg whose work for the British helped to disrupt Nazi operations. JEREMY ASPINALL (US 2019, violence, swearing)

FABULOUS
Joanna Lumley takes to the Danube

TRAVEL

Joanna Lumley's Danube 9.00pm ITV1 Catch up via ITVX

NEW SERIES

Joanna Lumley's latest adventure takes her from Germany's Black Forest along 2,000 miles of the river to the Black Sea, travelling through spectacular landscapes and beautiful cities. But, if you've seen any of her previous travelogues, you'll know that no scenery, architecture or experience can eclipse her. She is perpetually enthusiastic and charms everyone she meets, whether that's a fisherman who works near the source of the Danube, the only gay troupe of Schuhplattlers in Bavaria, the owner of a Viennese café run entirely by grandmothers, or a German cuckoo-clock maker.

"Fabulous!" she gasps when Tom Neuwirth (aka Eurovision winner Conchita) shows her the Habsburg Crypt in Vienna; "It's not every day you get invited by a nun to have a drink," she giggles when she knocks back a beer at Mallersdorf Abbey with master brewer Sister Doris. "You have the softest nose in the world," she coos to a carthorse working on a vineyard's terraces.

It's impossible not to be captivated by her – as well as the places she visits. JANE RACKHAM

Cyprus: Jewel of the Med

7.00pm 5 Catch up via 5 streaming

What better way to unwind on a Friday night than with another evocative exploration of a Mediterranean locale full of beautiful landscapes and rich heritage? The ancient history in which Cyprus is steeped is inspiring the younger inhabitants, who are bring traditional cuisine into the 21st century by fusing classic ingredients, such as locally grown root vegetable kolokasi, with surprising modern flavours.

With 11 months of sunshine a year it's a popular place for weddings, and we witness a very special one in the birthplace of Aphrodite. If the heat gets too much for tourists, they can cool down in Musan, the Med's first underwater sculpture museum, which has nearly 100 artworks beneath the waves. JOHNATHON HUGHES

SOAP

Emmerdale

7.30pm ITV1 Catch up via ITVX

As if there isn't enough to worry about the night before your wedding day, accidental murderer John must contend with the possibility his victim's corpse is about to be discovered in the lake he dumped him in. Isn't picking out your best underwear and making sure the cufflinks are shiny stressful enough? With damage limitation becoming his full-time job, John manipulates Belle against reporting Nate as a missing person. His mind games are unlikely to work on the machinery hauled in to dredge the lake. Expect Mr Sugden's chickens to come home to roost at next week's wedding.

Sarah reels from the news she may have cancer, but is determined to deal with it alone. Someone give the girl a hug. JH

DOCUMENTARY

Millionaire Hoarders

*8.00pm C4
Catch up via C4 streaming

Running a stately home is an expensive business. Claire and James, current custodians of Doddington Hall in Lincolnshire, have tried their best to cover the costs of this large estate by holding open days and running a bike shop and a café. Now, they hope to raise money by selling a few things from the 400 years worth of potential treasures buried in their numerous storerooms and attics. Antiques expert Ed Bailey is only too happy to help them.

Elsewhere Ronnie Archer Morgan, flushed with success from his discovery of a valuable George Stubbs painting in a recent programme, comes face to face with a collection of compacts amassed by Robert over the past two decades. JR

Cruising with Susan Calman

*8.00pm 5
Catch up via 5 streaming

There's no need to worry about your daily step count on the colossus of a cruise ship that Susan Calman takes around the Caribbean. It can accommodate 6,334 guests so, as Susan says, "It's a big 'un".

When she's not trying to find her way around the 18 decks or chatting to the guests, she hops off to visit Barbados for a rum punch-fuelled ride on the "fun bus", snorkels around an underwater sculpture park in Grenada and has her breath taken away by a St Lucian waterfall. The cascading water of the Toraille Waterfall is so chilly that, once she's queued up with dozens of other tourists wanting to get doused, she says it's like being in Scotland. JR

DOCUMENTARY

Draining Pompeii: Secrets Beneath the Ash

9.00pm 5 Catch up via 5 streaming

When the ruins of Pompeii were excavated, archaeologists unearthed over 1,000 human victims. Most Pompeiians apparently escaped from the city during the eruption of Vesuvius in AD 79, but some didn't – presumably the poorest, the sickest and the least physically able.

In this documentary, a team of forensic experts investigates one group of victims known as "the Fugitives". They were found in the 1960s as cavities in the ash that were then filled with plaster to create casts – statues, essentially. Some were subtly sculpted for effect, a poignant touch to engage tourists – but can modern techniques reveal the real victims underneath? DAVID BUTCHER

COMEDY DRAMA

Hacks

9.00pm Sky Max Catch up via Now

They did it. Deborah and Ava have made their late-night show number one in the ratings. Staying there is being made even harder by the show's guests. Dance Mom has gone AWOL (Jimmy and Kayla attempting to revive their social media star after she's been on a bender shouldn't be as funny as it is) while channel CEO Bob Lipka is adamant a problematic actor who Ava and co. previously vetoed should appear on the show. It sets off a chain of events that nicely – well, horribly in fact – tee up next week's finale. FRANCES TAYLOR

SCROLLING DOWN Graeme Gardiner and Charlotte Greenbank unfurl some family history

DOCUMENTARY

Hidden Treasures of the National Trust

9.00pm BBC2 Catch up via iPlayer

Family history, whether grand or humble, is always fascinating. In this edition we hear about two very different ones. Townend was the modest farmhouse home of 12 generations of the Brownes, a middle-class sheep farming family in the Lake District who rarely threw anything away. An album of personal letters promises to reveal a lot about their everyday lives.

In the sprawling Tudor palace of Knowle in Kent, home to the Sackville-Wests, conservators gently repair the naked statue of John Frederick Sackville's mistress and two fading "pedigree scrolls" or family trees that – mysteriously – were commissioned only 13 years apart. As he unfurls them, paper conservator Graeme says, "It's always a privilege seeing what other people haven't seen." JR

INTERVIEW

Alison Hammond's Big Weekend

8.30pm BBC1 Catch up via iPlayer

BANTER Alison Hammond catches up with Jimmy Carr

Jimmy Carr jokes that La Hammond has stolen Louis Theroux's job of grilling celebrities. It's hardly as in-depth as that, partly because Carr and Hammond already know each other and are firing showbiz jokey bants from the off. Regardless, she works hard to crack his comic defences and there are flashes of honesty about the loss of his mother, being a workaholic and surviving the cancel culture around his tax scandal. JH

SITCOM

Austin

9.30pm BBC1 Catch up via iPlayer

SERIES FINALE

An awkwardly conceived comedy ends as it began, with a few good lines and likable characters compensating for how undercooked it is overall. Austin causes a classic short-lived sitcom calamity by running away, roaming London as he researches his book about baffling slang. While Julian tries to decode the cryptic note Austin has left, and Austin bonds with a friendly journalist named Lucy (a charming turn by Boni Adeliyi), it's time for Ingrid to mature as an artist by mounting an exhibition.

As usual, the finest laughs stem from creative types fretting, as when Ingrid worries about whether her drawings of nude men form a coherent whole: "Is there dialogue between them?" JACK SEALE

FILM REVIEWS

FILM OF THE DAY

Mission: Impossible – Fallout ★★★★★

9.00-11.55pm Film4 12

SPY THRILLER The sixth episode in the action series finds Ethan Hunt (Tom Cruise) posing as a terrorist to buy plutonium before rogue agent Solomon Lane (Sean Harris) can enact his doomsday scenario. The dense narrative links up with past story threads as events speed towards a nuclear-countdown climax. But what audiences really want to see is Cruise's sensational stunt work – and he really delivers, with a London rooftop chase, a motorbike pursuit through Paris and even a helicopter battle. Part eight, The Final Reckoning, is in cinemas now. ALAN JONES (US 2018, violence, swearing, HD)

The Deadly Companions ★★★

1.55-4.00pm 5 Action PG

WESTERN Sam Peckinpah made his directing debut with this gripping film, which concentrates on its leads before bursting into violent life. Maureen O'Hara is great as the rose between three thorns, but it's the posturing between gunmen Brian Keith, Chill Wills and Steve Cochran that holds the attention. DAVID PARKINSON (US 1961, HD)

Strange Invaders ★★★★

3.00-4.50pm Legend 12

SCI-FI Michael Laughlin's affectionate update of and tribute to 1950s alien-invasion movies (such as It Came from Outer Space) sees professor Paul Le Mat team up with reporter Nancy Allen to investigate after his wife disappears from a small town. The special effects are marvellous and the amusing script is sharply observed. AJ (US 1983, may be edited for content)

Yesterday ★★★★

7.15-9.00pm BBC3 12

See review p49. (US/UK/Chi/Jpn 2019, edited for language, HD)

Save the Last Dance ★★★

9.00-11.25pm ITV2 12

DANCE DRAMA Flashdance meets Boyz N the Hood in this crowd-pleasing movie. Julia Stiles is the aspiring ballerina who gives up her ambitions after her mother dies. Moving in with her dad on Chicago's depressed South Side, she finds herself part of the minority in a mainly black school. An uplifting if maudlin fantasy melodrama. AJ (US 2000, swearing, some violence, HD)

The Bourne Identity ★★★★

9.00-11.25pm Great Movies 12

THRILLER In this cracking first film in the Bourne series, Matt Damon stars as an amnesiac who is unaware that he's actually a top CIA assassin. He sets off to Zurich to investigate, facing cops and government killers as his employers try to wipe out their renegade operative. The film is fast-paced, slickly executed and has an edgy sophistication. SLOAN FREER (US/CzRep 2002, violence, swearing)

Judy ★★★★

11.00pm-12.50am BBC2 12

BIOGRAPHICAL DRAMA Renée Zellweger gives a tour-de-force performance as Judy Garland in this drama focusing on the star's notorious engagement at London's Talk of the Town in 1968. Zellweger performs the songbook with astounding accuracy, and there won't be a dry eye in the house come the film's sensational Over the Rainbow finale. AJ (UK 2019, swearing, drug abuse, HD)

Booksmart ★★★★

11.40pm-1.15am BBC1 (starts 12.10am in Wales) 15

COMEDY Olivia Wilde made her directorial debut with this razor-sharp coming-of-age romp. Beanie Feldstein and Kaitlyn Dever play swotty students who want to have fun before graduation, but realise they don't know how to party. Wilde depicts their comic escapades with some neat creative flourishes and a killer soundtrack. TERRY STAUNTON (US 2019, swearing, sex scenes, drug abuse, HD)

The Darkest Minds ★★

12.05-1.50am C4 12

SCI-FI When a disease kills most of America's children, the survivors develop special powers and are put into prison camps, from which a few rebels escape to fight for their future. This is a modest echo of the X-Men and Hunger Games franchises, but young leads Amandla Stenberg and Harris Dickinson make for a hugely charismatic pair. TREVOR JOHNSTON (US 2018, violence, HD)

Love Birds ★★★ 1.35-3.50am Great Movies PG

ROMCOM This quirky love story stars Sally Hawkins as a veterinarian who catches the eye of recently single council contractor Rhys Darby. While she is raising an emotionally scarred son, he is tending an injured shelduck (a scene-stealer named Pierre) who teaches him to trust again. It's all very familiar, but the film is delightfully played by an amiable cast. DP (NZ 2011)

First Love ★★★

1.50-4.00am Film4 15

CRIME In this wild outing from film-maker Takashi Miike, an up-and-coming boxer (Masataka Kubota) and a sex worker (Sakurako Konishi) get caught up in a drug deal involving the yakuza and a corrupt cop. The film blends graphic violence with dark humour, resulting in an addled tone – but the action-packed third act is well worth a look. STEPHEN CARTY (Jpn/UK 2019, violence, swearing, sexual references, HD)

LOVE IS...

As Jan Etherington's marital comedy returns after ructions over a secret son at the end of series five, we put the compatibility of its stars, Joanna Lumley and Roger Allam, to the test

HAPPILY EVER AFTER
Joanna Lumley and on-air husband, Roger Allam

Conversations from a Long Marriage
Monday 2.15pm Radio 4

What would you say is the secret to a long marriage?
ROGER Probably a sense of humour. Laughing and giving each other room to be elsewhere and do things on your own or with other people, not having to be together all the time.
JOANNA A sense of humour helps navigate life full-stop. But complementary personalities can be a symbiotic yin and yang in a marriage.

What is your best trait?
ROGER It's a form of torture answering this! What is my best trait? Probably my self-delusion that I look like Cary Grant, but my bad eyesight means I don't notice that I don't.
JOANNA He's a sensational actor, with one of the best voices you could hear and he's heaven to work with.
ROGER Joanna has so many good traits. Perhaps her unfailing courtesy to everyone she meets – and also her interest and curiosity about the world.

What is your worst trait?
ROGER I can be bad-tempered sometimes. My worst trait is getting irritable when being interviewed about things!
JOANNA I seem to be a bit of a butterfly who flits from one thing to the next.
ROGER Joanna's worst trait? No idea. There's not a list. It seems to me she undervalues her great skill as an actor.

How would you deal with a serious betrayal of trust?
ROGER I don't know. It would depend. I mean, the presence of this son, it's not something that he's kept hidden from her – it's a huge surprise and shock for him as well. There's huge anxiety on both sides about destabilising what is a long and happy marriage. If it was something really treacherous, if he'd known about the son but kept it secret, then I think it would be completely justified for her to walk out. I wouldn't like to say if Joanna is like this in real life.
JOANNA I think he's more trustworthy than she is – she's definitely more economical with the truth. But I don't think either of [our characters] has ever done anything particularly bad – there's been no infidelity, I am sure of it. She sands over her tracks, certainly.
ROGER It would depend upon the nature of the betrayal. If it was something really cruel, that's a different matter to if it's something that happened when we weren't together. That's rather different.

What would be Joanna's luxury item on Desert Island Discs?
ROGER Oooh, I really don't know. Gosh. Maybe she'd take her cleansing routine.
JOANNA I've done Desert Island Discs twice so my luxuries are on the record, as it were. [They were a painting of her family and friends by the artist John Ward and the film, Monsieur Hulot's Holiday.] As I imagine I've got those luxuries stashed on my island already, I'd take another film – but I don't know what.

What would be Roger's luxury item then?
JOANNA I'd like to think he'd take me, but he wouldn't. He might want to take his dog, but he wouldn't be allowed. So, it would be something fantastically lazy like a big, comfortable chair with a huge screen with football on it. Or some good wine.
ROGER Could I take a good cooker? A log-burning one. I do most of the cooking and I tend to listen to music when I'm doing it.

What's your studio snack of choice?
ROGER Joanna's would be a carrot baton or a fingernail, I think.
JOANNA Having been a model in the 60s, I can go a whole day without anything except a cup of builder's tea. I don't like eating in the studio and I don't like eating at work. I don't like someone eating while they're on the phone to me and one of the reasons I don't love going to the cinema is the general rustling, eating and slurping that goes on. I don't know if you've noticed on Gogglebox, but they always seem to have food and drink in front of them and that seems very odd to me. I've been on Gogglebox, but that's not the way I live. I don't ever yearn for snacks.

ROGER I try to avoid biscuits, but sometimes I fail, so if it was a biscuit, it would be a dark chocolate and stem ginger one.

JOANNA Roger has to eat at certain times. He has to have his coffee at a certain time. He's very regimented in that respect.

Who corpses the most?

ROGER Oh, I think we're tied on that really. I wouldn't say one of us corpses more than the other.

JOANNA Roger doesn't really and I hardly ever do. We don't have time – we do one episode in a morning and one in the afternoon so we must rattle along. Corpsing comes from the fear that you're going to get it wrong, live, in the theatre. I like to think that we are both quite professional.

What's your favourite scene?

ROGER I can't remember anything about the series. Joanna's much better at this than me. You see I can't remember at all. It all goes out of my head. We meet for three days and do the whole thing. And it's gone, you know. I love doing it, I love seeing everyone and it's the most enormous fun, but I certainly don't know what Joanna's favourite scene might be. I can't put my finger on one, I'm afraid. My finger is unavailable!

The Patch first aired in 2018 and is now a fixture on Radio 4, with good reason. The format of a visit to a randomly generated postcode in the UK is brilliantly simple and intriguing, and in presenter Polly Weston's hands guaranteed to yield results. Today's discovery is among the best. The location is the military town of Bulford, Wiltshire, and what Weston learns about courts martial and the Army's legal systems is an eye-opener. SIMON O'HAGAN

"To walk the Camino de Santiago, you have to be emotionally prepared as well as physically fit," says Clare Balding to her walking companion, tour guide and author, Manni Coe. Ramblings returns with a series to mark Balding's 25th year as its presenter, with five episodes recorded at various sections of the 500-mile pilgrimage route in north-west Spain and two in the UK with people who have done it for different reasons. "Emotional" is the key word here, with Coe sharing deeply personal insights on why the walk is so meaningful for him.

Doctor Dolittle and the Exploding Trout

Sunday 7.15pm Radio 4

The musical Doctor Dolittle, starring Rex Harrison as the medic who talked to the animals, was shot in England in 1966, with the village of Castle Combe doubling as the fictional Puddleby-on-the-Marsh. But the production posed a threat to the trout in the local pond, prompting four youths to plot a protest. One of them, who grew up to be explorer Sir Ranulph Fiennes, went too far. Or did he? The phrase "recollections vary" is key to this amusing account of an odd footnote to film history.

TRAVEL

The World in 360 Minutes

The work of a radio station in Dunedin, New Zealand, this styles itself as a "sound project", though there's nothing that unusual about how local artist Ron Esplin recalls a lifetime of travel that began in his infancy when his family relocated from Scotland to New Zealand. Ron is a gentle soul and he needs some prompting from interviewer Julie Woods (who happens to be blind), but his tales – such as seeing elephants walking the streets of what was then Ceylon – have a certain charm. SIMON O'HAGAN

THE POWER OF MONEY

Billionaires may be loaded, but does having lots of dosh make you a good person?

PICK OF THE WEEK

BUSINESS

Good Bad Billionaire

Only the BBC World Service would set out to decide whether some famous billionaires are A Good Thing – or not. As a rule these people don't make their fortunes selling us things that are good for us. So it's not surprising that Simon Jack and Zing Tsjeng find that in weighing the contributions to our world of the likes of lifestyle queen Martha Stewart, Minecraft's Markus Persson, Big Brother inventor John de Mol and WWF's Vince McMahon they encounter an unwillingness to leave money on the table, a level of driving ambition and a strange unfamiliarity with the concept of shame that most of us would find vaguely embarrassing. Which is probably why they're billionaires and we're not. DAVID HEPWORTH

Pete Wicks: Man Made

Following in the footsteps of Rylan Clark, TV personality and Strictly breakout star Pete Wicks puts modern manhood under the microscope in this new series. He chats to his friend, popstar Tom Grennan, in the opener, bonding over their personal growth and love for women's jeans, while tough guy SAS: Who Dares Wins instructor Billy Billingham is on episode two. The conversations are incredibly thoughtful, with Wicks combining sweary charm with eloquence and sensitivity. EMMA SIMMONDS

HISTORY

Uncovering Roots: the Baron Hotel

If walls could talk there would be few buildings with a story quite as extraordinary as the Baron Hotel in Aleppo. Today an abandoned relic, another casualty of the Syrian civil war, the hotel once played host to Armenian refugees, archaeologists, spies, royalty and even Agatha Christie. Mary Momdjian, whose family built and ran the hotel, unravels its history in this new series that delves into lesser-known narratives from Southwest Asia and North Africa. TOM GOULDING

TRUE CRIME

Death County, PA

From its powerful title to its portentous script, something about this investigative podcast doesn't quite sit right. The subject is a worthy one: a series of unexplained deaths in Dauphin County Prison, Pennsylvania. And host Joshua Vaughn, a local journalist, leaves no stone unturned in his quest for justice. But his opening entreaty to "binge" listen, and over-emphatic narration – "Something very bad was going on in Dauphin County jail!" he tells us – makes it all feel a bit tabloid. MATT GLASBY

POPULAR CULTURE

Mildly Informed

Absolute Radio presenter Richie Firth and his producer Chris Skinner have been a podcast double act since 2019. For their new venture they promise to review anything and everything, beginning by assessing the Portuguese tart, pastel de nata. They are both entertaining and informative. At a time when podcast topics are becoming repetitive, this concept – enlivened by listener input – could be a winner. Naturally, I shall suggest they review Radio Times. DAVID McGILLIVRAY

So far, the subjects of this enthralling podcast have offered sobering testimony about the far-reaching impact of false accusations and misinformation. They include: a British lawyer who blew the whistle on an oil company and was slapped with an Interpol Red Notice; a leading activist in Hong Kong's "Umbrella Revolution", now in exile; an entrepreneur brought low by a smear campaign orchestrated by a mendacious business partner; and "snitching" culture in Putin's Russia.

The Big Smoke Variety Show

This relatively new podcast comes with claims as big as its ambitions: that it is "a variety show, the likes of which [listeners] have never heard". There are a few extras, but it's all about the chat, much of which focuses upon Bennett himself. ANNA JONES

COMEDY

The Neurotic Vaccine

Many comedians share their take on life's challenges, but this series goes further – asking listeners to turn therapists and contribute "advice". Its creator Andy Cowan (a glass half-empty man), has written for Seinfeld, Friends and Third Rock from the Sun. The original episodes featured Dr Scott Kopoian, a real (and glass half-full) therapist, but recent shows have an Artificial Intelligence Dr K. Streams of Consciousness

DAVID HEPWORTH

Going, going, gone... Is the term "podcast" on the way out?

I USED TO introduce items I had read in a newspaper or heard on a radio or TV programme with a reference to the actual source. Nowadays I increasingly find myself saying, "I was watching/listening to... a thing where this woman said..." Said "thing" may have begun life as a newspaper column or a podcast interview, but to achieve escape velocity it's increasingly likely it will have had to manifest itself in a clip for YouTube.

Which makes me wonder whether the term "podcast", which always seemed redolent of nerditude and two cocoa tins and a bit of string, is long for this world. Or will it slip into disuse, like other terms that were once the hot new thing? Things like "talkie", "gramophone record" and "wireless"?

Perhaps it will be one of those expressions that hangs on long after the thing they originally described has been subsumed by the march of tech. After all, it's a long time since "film" denoted a strip of celluloid and almost 100 years since "album" described the wallet in which people kept 78s. Few young people today could tell you that the initials DJ stand for disc jockey and most journalists working at the present time have never even seen the thing they used to call "the presses".

AND YET, THE media remains sentimentally attached to these and other anachronisms because they form part of the machinery of credibility. Indeed, there are few stranger sights on television than that of presenters leafing through actual newspapers in order to tell the viewers what few of them will be reading in the morning, unless it's a bunch of sports hacks contemplating a stale croissant while solemnly reviewing "what you'll be reading on the back pages tomorrow".

The words that hang on tend to be the ones that sound cool or classic. Good examples would be "movie" and "mixtape". The word "podcast", while it has sufficed to get us from 2003 to the present day, doesn't belong in such exalted company. I hope somebody's working on a replacement. Meanwhile, "thing" it is.

Opera on 3: Strauss's Salome

6.00pm Radio 3

As well as entrancing us, great opera can outrage and dismay. That's exactly what Richard Strauss's Salome, based on Oscar Wilde's sauced-up version of the Biblical tale, did in 1907. It was pulled from the bill at the New York Met when audiences were appalled by the portrayal of a 16-year-old girl's apparent sexual attraction for the severed head of Jochanaan (John the Baptist). Now Salome is back in town with the astonishingly talented South African soprano Elza van den Heever in the title role and baritone Peter Mattei as Jochanaan. Director Claus Guth's production, set in a stylised 1800s palace, uses themes of childhood sexual abuse to explain Salome's troubled state. Whether that works or not is almost by the by – what really matters here is Strauss's urgent, strange and utterly compelling music.

The Documentary: Women Warriors

12.05pm BBC World Service

By 2030, the British Armed Forces aims to increase its female personnel from 11.9 per cent to 30 per cent. Change is essential for "diversity of thought in action", one of the few female British officers tells presenter Victoria Hollingsworth in this report into the position of servicewomen. Attitudes to women's achievements in war also need a rethink, says historian Sarah Percy, whose figures show that combat creates political leaders out of returning men, while women tend to return to domestic life. More misogyny features in part two, which deals with dangers in action and the darker side of the Forces. FIONA HUGHES

TODAY'S CHOICES

Sunday Feature: Queer Gothic

7.15pm Radio 3

Horace Walpole's 1764 novel The Castle of Otranto was outlandish, transgressive, boundary-pushing and completely over the top – exactly like the home he designed from two cottages close to the Thames in London's Twickenham. Recorded on location at this extraordinarily camp building, Strawberry Hill House, the novelist Sarah Waters explores the queer routes of gothic literature, with extracts that will delight any horror fan – from Vincent Price in The Pit and the Pendulum, through James Whale's Bride of Frankenstein to readings from palpably erotic lesbian literature. Like Waters's writing, this is deliciously dark and Dionysian.

ANNA JONES

Drama: Underfoot in Showbusiness

3.00pm Radio 4

A 20-year struggle to make it on Broadway finally gave aspiring playwright Helen Hanff a hit once she wrote it all down in her witty 1961 memoir, dramatised here by Marcy Kahan. Hanff later wrote 84 Charing Cross Road, chronicling her long correspondence with a London bookseller, which then became a 1975 TV play and a 1984 movie, but here she brings to life New York's resilient creatives as they endure repeated knocks. Even Oklahoma! was first dismissed as a dud, she recalls.

12.00 Private Passions Michael Berkeley welcomes Philip Hoare, a writer whose books often describe the lure of the sea, the strange and beautiful creatures that live in it and the inspiration artists have found in its depths. His 2009 book Leviathan drew on his lifelong obsession with whales, and his most recent book, William Blake and the Sea Monsters of Love, traces Blake's enduring influence on numerous poets, writers, film-makers and musicians. He's also written about Noël Coward, British socialite Stephen Tennant and the Netley Military Hospital on Spike Island, near Southampton. His music choices include Prokofiev, Britten and Copland.
1.30pm Music Map Sara Mohr-Pietsch explores classical pieces in the context of their history, legacy and connections to other works. Following BBC Wellbeing Week, she discusses the history and legacy of Vaughan Williams's popular favourite, The Lark Ascending, which premiered in 1920. Along the way she finds inspiration from birds in the music of Mozart, Schumann, Rameau and Rautavaara, and works by Dowland and Chaminade that express consolation.
3.00 Choral Evensong Wednesday's service from the Chapel of Trinity College, Cambridge, on the Feast of Matthias the Apostle. Introit: Gaudeamus omnes (Byrd). Responses: Byrd. Psalm 80 (Marlow, after Gibbons). First Lesson: 1 Samuel 16, vv1–13a. Office Hymn: Let the Round World with Songs Rejoice (Deus tuorum militum). Canticles: Evening Canticles in A minor (David Maw). 6.00 Words and Music Poetry, prose and music evoking the history and landscape of Switzerland, including literary travellers such as William Wordsworth and Mary Shelly, early Thomas Cook tourists, and translations of writing by some key Swiss authors. With readings by Ellie Piercy and Peter Wight. The playlist includes Rossini's William Tell Overture.
7.15 Sunday Feature: Queer Gothic RT In a programme recorded on location at Strawberry Hill House in Twickenham in south-west London, Sarah Waters explores the queer roots of gothic architecture and literature. Not only was Horace Walpole the author of the first gothic novel (The Castle of Otranto, 1764), but he built Strawberry Hill House – his fantasy gothic villa. As Waters explores the house, she is joined by Dr Dale Townshend, professor of gothic literature at the Manchester Centre for Gothic Studies, and writer Holly James Johnston, who created the LGBTQ+ Strawberry Hill House tour project. Barnaby Edwards read extracts of radio productions from the BBC Radio 4 archive: Sheridan Le Fanu's Carmilla (broadcast in 2003), Samuel Taylor Coleridge's Christabel (2001), Matthew Gregory Lewis's The Monk (1985) and Walpole's The Castle of Otranto (1996). Producer Victoria Ferran
8.00 Brass Banding with Hannah Peel 4/10. Hannah Peel meets archivist Tim Mutum, who holds an impressive collection of brass band LPs. She also learns about New Zealand's thriving banding scene. The playlist includes a love song from composer Gavin Higgins, a recent work from Martin Green inspired by brass banding's strong mining history, and a rearrangement of Debussy's La cathédrale engloutie (Sunken Cathedral).
9.00 20th Century Radicals Kate Molleson explores the violent architectural music of Iannis Xenakis (1922–2001), leading to a full performance of his 1971 "abstract ballet" Antikthon. The programme travels from the war-torn streets of 1940s Greece to the heart of a 50s Paris riding the nouvelle vague. Along the way there's the heat and ritual of ancient Greece and Pythagorean theory, and a visit to the studios of architect Le Corbusier and musique concrète pioneer Pierre Schaeffer.
10.00 Ultimate Calm 5/12. Hania Rani presents music inspired by freedom and liberation, including Julius Eastman and recordings by singer Ganavya and trumpeter Arve Henriksen. Mary Bourke: Who Cares?

1.45pm Radio 4

Credit to Radio 4 for taking a risk and placing this across the week at 1.45pm, rather than squirrelling it away at 11pm where untested comedy with adult content usually sits. The Irish-born comedian Mary Bourke (above) delivers some brutally honest one-liners about living with and caring for her husband, fellow comedian Simon Clayton, who had a stroke in 2020 during lockdown. The occasional swear words are bleeped out, but the real strength of these shows lies not in the gags but in Bourke's impassioned portrayal of the realities of being a carer.

Radio 4 Extra

A charming credit-card caper from RD Wingfield, the creator of David Jason's long-serving Inspector Frost. A gang of would-be fraudsters led by Mr Shadbolt (played by John Rowe, Jim Lloyd in The Archers) includes the kind of caricature rogues and lovable losers you will know from the Carry Ons as well as Dad's Army, Porridge and all those very British classics. First heard on Radio 4 in 1977, now available on Radio 4 Extra for the first time. FIONA HUGHES

TODAY'S CHOICES

The Pigeon Whistles

10.30am/4.30pm R4 Extra

"Imagine hearing music flying around you." So says Nathaniel Mann, composer in residence at the Pitt Rivers Museum in Oxford. In its collection Mann discovered whistles traditionally attached to the tail feathers of pigeons (see above), mostly in China and Indonesia. "No other instrument physically moves around you in space, flying overhead," Mann says, "and that seemed like magic." To create new pigeon whistles, Mann enlisted the help of a pigeon fancier from Nottingham who travels with a portable "loft" strapped to the back of his scooter. Later Mann found a 3D printing company willing to take on the eccentric production job. It's probably not a spoiler to reveal that eventually we do hear the literally unearthly sound, something probably never heard before on radio when this programme was first broadcast in 2017. DAVID McGILLIVRAY

Crossing Continents

9.00pm Radio 4

Cocaine will always be Colombia's most infamous export. But there's also deep concern that half a million Colombian women are now working in countless webcam studios where adult content is streamed, mainly to the US and Europe. Sofia Bettiza asks whether this is pure exploitation or a pragmatic way for women to earn a living in a country where wages and opportunities are low. For one young artist/model, it is freeing; for a single mother of two, it is necessary but takes a toll. The debate has produced strange bedfellows, with socially conservative politicians in agreement with women's groups demanding the industry's abolition. JEREMY ASPINALL

TODAY'S CHOICES

Radio 3 in Concert

7.30pm Radio 3

Antonio Pappano leads the London Symphony Orchestra in a concert that tackles some big themes. Leonard Bernstein spent a chunk of the mid-1950s finishing the transcendent West Side Story but the sometimes self-consciously highbrow composer was also creating Serenade – his musical engagement with a Plato symposium, here featuring soloist Carolin Widmann (above). George Walker's Fifth Sinfonia (Visions) was the then 94-year-old's response to the mass murder by a white supremacist of nine African-Americans at a church in South Carolina in 2015. The result is a work that conductor Edward Gardner has described as "suffused with anger". Also on the bill, William Walton's by turns bright and brooding, Sibelius-tinged First Symphony – written in the wake of a failed love affair. MICHAEL HODGES

Poetry for Sale?

10.00am/4.00pm R4 Extra

"As a poet you're lucky if 500 people read something of yours," muses Portland-based Matthew Dickman. So it's little wonder that, historically, poets have turned to advertising to get ahead. Or that poetry is becoming more and more common in adverts. After all, argues host Rishi Dastidar, there are things to be gained by both sides. In the attention economy, every word counts, so who better to precision-engineer slogans than poets? Equally, it can be "great training", noted novelist Fay Weldon, who was herself a former copywriter. With extracts from Orwell's Keep the Aspidistra Flying and Clive James's memoirs, this is a fascinating guide to an oddly noble history. MATT GLASBY

TODAY'S CHOICES

The Matt Forde Focus Group

6.30pm Radio 4

Political comic Matt Forde (above) is rather well connected. Last year he casually mentioned watching England's Euros match against Serbia with Keir Starmer and Angela Rayner. He's had both of them – and an enormous number of other heavyweights – on The Political Party, his long-running podcast. So who could turn up on his new series for Radio 4? "As well as being a good laugh," he says, "it will be an antidote to hearing the same old voices having the same old arguments. I want to showcase intelligent, impassioned people who can also laugh at themselves." Where politics are concerned, this narrows the field considerably.

11.00am Radio 4

In the week of his 80th birthday, the Who guitarist Pete Townshend will be way past worrying that he did not emulate the lyrics of the band's era-defining My Generation ("Hope I die before I get old"), still the Who's biggest hit single in the UK having reached No 2 in 1965. Like fellow rock legend Keith Richards, Townshend seems in no hurry to hang up his guitar just yet, as he and Roger Daltrey prepare for another world tour later this year. His reflections on being a rock institution spanning the generations promises much.

TODAY'S CHOICES

Crowd Science

8.30pm BBC World Service

Bees are the focal point of many of our environmental concerns. As pollinators supreme, their numbers are of vital importance to humanity, but should we also care about them as providers of honey? Crowd Science listener Saoirse is a vegan who doesn't eat honey, in the belief that its production might be harmful to bees. But is that so? Could making honey actually be the making of bees? Presenter Anand Jagatia goes in search of the answer, examining the impact on bee health of industrial beekeeping practices, and meeting the researchers promoting new and old ways to improve bee welfare. People's awareness around ethical food production is ever-growing, and bees are surely as worthy of our attention as any other nutritional source, if not more so.

One of the strangest places on Earth is Musambwa Island, five kilometres from land in Lake Victoria, Uganda. Here around 100 fishermen (women aren't allowed) live in harmony with the world's largest colony of grey-headed gulls and around 2,000 venomous snakes. Presenter Zawadi Mudibo's main guide is 103-year-old Emmanuel Katongole, resident on the five-acre outcrop for decades. He shares the reasons for the ban on women and the apparent friendliness of the snakes. There is no killing on Musambwa and that rule includes birds and reptiles as well as men. This is a lifestyle we could learn from. Nevertheless Mudibo spends sleepless nights in a building with cobra under the floor.

Coffee Crisis: Why are Prices Breaking Records? At the end of 2024, the price for arabica beans, the world's most popular variety of coffee bean, topped $3.44 (£2.70) a pound, having risen more than 80 per cent over the course of the year. Meanwhile, the cost of cheaper robusta beans, used in instant coffee, almost doubled in 2024, with the price touching $5,694 a metric tonne in late November. Coffee consumers are beginning to feel the effects, so what's happening and why? Dan Saladino reports.

Face behind the voice Georgie Prodromou Bauer Media

Age 31
Current job Has been political editor for Bauer Media since 2024. She is heard on more than 100 stations throughout the UK. "Years ago, while I was at university, I did a couple of days working for Bauer and I thought if only they'd hire a London reporter… And now I'm doing it. I'm happy to be corrected on this but I think I'm the youngest political editor in Westminster. Just this week I interviewed the Prime Minister, tomorrow I'm with the Deputy PM. I never have a dull day but it's not for everyone; I have to be available all the time. I was actually on the beach when Rishi Sunak called the general election last year."
CV Georgina Prodromou was born in north London. She gained her master's degree in modern history from the University of London in 2015. "I did student radio [Insanity Radio] while I was there. Me and my friend Kat had a very late night slot. We loved it." After graduating, she worked in academic publishing. She then became a trainee on Bauer's journalism course, which included work on Radio City and Key 103. "It got me the experience I needed to work at Bauer. Eight years have passed and I'm still here!"
Social media – yes or no? "As a journalist it's incredible for making contacts. I find loads of stories on there. But I often feel pressure to be posting all the time."
Best moments "I had a great week last week. We were invited to Buckingham Palace so we got to meet the King, which was an amazing moment I'll always remember. But on the Tube there I found out I'd won Specialist Reporter of the Year at the Commercial Radio News Awards."
Worst moments "We cover pretty horrible things. My first year [2017] was a baptism of fire because it started with the Manchester Arena bombing. Soon after that was the London Bridge terror attack and the Grenfell Tower fire. But it's your job to be there and it's when the job is most important."
Off air "I live in north London along with every other Greek Cypriot! I live with my partner, Mat, and last year we rescued a cat, Hera, from a car park in Cyprus."
First radio memory "Me and my friends went to see Snow Patrol at the O2 Arena. We texted Absolute Radio that we were going and got a shout-out. We were so excited."
Favourite broadcasters "Can I name my friends? My absolute favourite is Aileen O'Sullivan, who does the news on all of our national stations. I always looked up to her. In terms of famous people I'd say Fearne Cotton and Clara Amfo. It's so great to see women in those roles."
Ambition/Dream job "I have my dream job. Everyone says, 'When am I going to see you on the telly?' And I say actually I love radio! Having a political podcast would be great."
Secret skills "I'm a bit obsessed with plants. I didn't have any interest in it until the pandemic. I bought about 30 and I've managed to keep them alive." DAVID McGILLIVRAY

Face behind the voice Georgie Prodromou Bauer Media

Age 31
Current job Has been political editor for Bauer Media since 2024. She is heard on more than 100 stations throughout the UK. "Years ago, while I was at university, I did a couple of days working for Bauer and I thought if only they'd hire a London reporter… And now I'm doing it. I'm happy to be corrected on this but I think I'm the youngest political editor in Westminster. Just this week I interviewed the Prime Minister, tomorrow I'm with the Deputy PM. I never have a dull day but it's not for everyone; I have to be available all the time. I was actually on the beach when Rishi Sunak called the general election last year."
CV Georgina Prodromou was born in north London. She gained her master's degree in modern history from the University of London in 2015. "I did student radio [Insanity Radio] while I was there. Me and my friend Kat had a very late night slot. We loved it." After graduating, she worked in academic publishing. She then became a trainee on Bauer's journalism course, which included work on Radio City and Key 103. "It got me the experience I needed to work at Bauer. Eight years have passed and I'm still here!"
Social media – yes or no? "As a journalist it's incredible for making contacts. I find loads of stories on there. But I often feel pressure to be posting all the time."
Best moments "I had a great week last week. We were invited to Buckingham Palace so we got to meet the King, which was an amazing moment I'll always remember. But on the Tube there I found out I'd won Specialist Reporter of the Year at the Commercial Radio News Awards."
Worst moments "We cover pretty horrible things. My first year [2017] was a baptism of fire because it started with the Manchester Arena bombing. Soon after that was the London Bridge terror attack and the Grenfell Tower fire. But it's your job to be there and it's when the job is most important."
Off air "I live in north London along with every other Greek Cypriot! I live with my partner, Mat, and last year we rescued a cat, Hera, from a car park in Cyprus."
First radio memory "Me and my friends went to see Snow Patrol at the O2 Arena. We texted Absolute Radio that we were going and got a shout-out. We were so excited."
Favourite broadcasters "Can I name my friends? My absolute favourite is Aileen O'Sullivan, who does the news on all of our national stations. I always looked up to her. In terms of famous people I'd say Fearne Cotton and Clara Amfo. It's so great to see women in those roles."
Ambition/Dream job "I have my dream job. Everyone says, 'When am I going to see you on the telly?' And I say actually I love radio! Having a political podcast would be great."
Secret skills "I'm a bit obsessed with plants. I didn't have any interest in it until the pandemic. I bought about 30 and I've managed to keep them alive." DAVID McGILLIVRAY

7.00am New Every Sunday
An act of worship with the Rev Dr Grant Barclay, a Church of Scotland minister serving in the Presbytery of Glasgow, focusing on the role the earth plays in Christian Scripture.

7.30 Our Story
Mark Stephen is in Dumfries and Galloway near Lockerbie to hear the story of the Hallmuir PoW Ukrainian Chapel. In 1947, almost 500 Ukrainian PoWs were interned and contracted to work in the local area in farming and forestry. Far from home and unable to return, the men created a chapel in one of the corrugated iron huts, and there have been regular services held there ever since. Seventy-five years on, in an echo of history, the tiny chapel has become a focal point for Ukrainians and their families who have recently come to Scotland having been displaced following the Russian invasion of their homeland.

Face behind the voice Georgie Prodromou Bauer Media

Age 31
Current job Has been political editor for Bauer Media since 2024. She is heard on more than 100 stations throughout the UK. "Years ago, while I was at university, I did a couple of days working for Bauer and I thought if only they'd hire a London reporter… And now I'm doing it. I'm happy to be corrected on this but I think I'm the youngest political editor in Westminster. Just this week I interviewed the Prime Minister, tomorrow I'm with the Deputy PM. I never have a dull day but it's not for everyone; I have to be available all the time. I was actually on the beach when Rishi Sunak called the general election last year."
CV Georgina Prodromou was born in north London. She gained her master's degree in modern history from the University of London in 2015. "I did student radio [Insanity Radio] while I was there. Me and my friend Kat had a very late night slot. We loved it." After graduating, she worked in academic publishing. She then became a trainee on Bauer's journalism course, which included work on Radio City and Key 103. "It got me the experience I needed to work at Bauer. Eight years have passed and I'm still here!"
Social media – yes or no? "As a journalist it's incredible for making contacts. I find loads of stories on there. But I often feel pressure to be posting all the time."
Best moments "I had a great week last week. We were invited to Buckingham Palace so we got to meet the King, which was an amazing moment I'll always remember. But on the Tube there I found out I'd won Specialist Reporter of the Year at the Commercial Radio News Awards."
Worst moments "We cover pretty horrible things. My first year [2017] was a baptism of fire because it started with the Manchester Arena bombing. Soon after that was the London Bridge terror attack and the Grenfell Tower fire. But it's your job to be there and it's when the job is most important."
Off air "I live in north London along with every other Greek Cypriot! I live with my partner, Mat, and last year we rescued a cat, Hera, from a car park in Cyprus."
First radio memory "Me and my friends went to see Snow Patrol at the O2 Arena. We texted Absolute Radio that we were going and got a shout-out. We were so excited."
Favourite broadcasters "Can I name my friends? My absolute favourite is Aileen O'Sullivan, who does the news on all of our national stations. I always looked up to her. In terms of famous people I'd say Fearne Cotton and Clara Amfo. It's so great to see women in those roles."
Ambition/Dream job "I have my dream job. Everyone says, 'When am I going to see you on the telly?' And I say actually I love radio! Having a political podcast would be great."
Secret skills "I'm a bit obsessed with plants. I didn't have any interest in it until the pandemic. I bought about 30 and I've managed to keep them alive." DAVID McGILLIVRAY

Face behind the voice Georgie Prodromou Bauer Media

Age 31
Current job Has been political editor for Bauer Media since 2024. She is heard on more than 100 stations throughout the UK. "Years ago, while I was at university, I did a couple of days working for Bauer and I thought if only they'd hire a London reporter… And now I'm doing it. I'm happy to be corrected on this but I think I'm the youngest political editor in Westminster. Just this week I interviewed the Prime Minister, tomorrow I'm with the Deputy PM. I never have a dull day but it's not for everyone; I have to be available all the time. I was actually on the beach when Rishi Sunak called the general election last year."
CV Georgina Prodromou was born in north London. She gained her master's degree in modern history from the University of London in 2015. "I did student radio [Insanity Radio] while I was there. Me and my friend Kat had a very late night slot. We loved it." After graduating, she worked in academic publishing. She then became a trainee on Bauer's journalism course, which included work on Radio City and Key 103. "It got me the experience I needed to work at Bauer. Eight years have passed and I'm still here!"
Social media – yes or no? "As a journalist it's incredible for making contacts. I find loads of stories on there. But I often feel pressure to be posting all the time."
Best moments "I had a great week last week. We were invited to Buckingham Palace so we got to meet the King, which was an amazing moment I'll always remember. But on the Tube there I found out I'd won Specialist Reporter of the Year at the Commercial Radio News Awards."
Worst moments "We cover pretty horrible things. My first year [2017] was a baptism of fire because it started with the Manchester Arena bombing. Soon after that was the London Bridge terror attack and the Grenfell Tower fire. But it's your job to be there and it's when the job is most important."
Off air "I live in north London along with every other Greek Cypriot! I live with my partner, Mat, and last year we rescued a cat, Hera, from a car park in Cyprus."
First radio memory "Me and my friends went to see Snow Patrol at the O2 Arena. We texted Absolute Radio that we were going and got a shout-out. We were so excited."
Favourite broadcasters "Can I name my friends? My absolute favourite is Aileen O'Sullivan, who does the news on all of our national stations. I always looked up to her. In terms of famous people I'd say Fearne Cotton and Clara Amfo. It's so great to see women in those roles."
Ambition/Dream job "I have my dream job. Everyone says, 'When am I going to see you on the telly?' And I say actually I love radio! Having a political podcast would be great."
Secret skills "I'm a bit obsessed with plants. I didn't have any interest in it until the pandemic. I bought about 30 and I've managed to keep them alive." DAVID McGILLIVRAY

THE NEW QUEEN OF HORROR?

Actor Jessie Elland is opening a new vein as a writer in the "femgore" genre

MY MUM DID check in with me after reading it. She wanted to know my childhood had been OK!" Ex-Emmerdale star Jessie Elland is explaining her mum's reaction to her rowdy debut novel The Ladie Upstairs. A delirious, ultra-visceral body horror, the book is not for the faint of heart.

"I reassured her that it was all in my imagination and she had nothing to worry about," laughs Elland. "And she loved it. She was my first reader, in fact: I wrote it in secret because I didn't know if I could write a full book, but very near the end of writing it, I had an operation, and I was on all sorts of stuff. I didn't know whether I was coming or going, and in this kind of haze I told Mum about it so I then had to give it to her. It's pretty dark and intense, but she's been my biggest champion."

The Ladie Upstairs takes a simple premise – lowly "scullery drudge" Ann toils away in the guts of a grand manor house, longing to ascend

> 'I was coming home covered in pig's blood' to her adored mistress Lady Charlotte's side – and twists it into a savage helter-skelter descent into violence and sickly excess. In Elland's macabre midsummer's nightmare, the house itself becomes a many-eyed villain occupied by gorgeous grotesques. Even the furniture is alive with malignant intent. A lesson in being careful what you wish for, the cloying secrets of the gentry are revealed in rich, queasy detail.

"I really wanted to build a dense, soupy, intense prose that makes the reader feel claus-

BLOODY BUSINESS
Inset, far left: Jessie Elland as Chloe in Emmerdale. Below: recent "body horror" favourites include Lucy Rose's book The Lamb and film The Substance starring Demi Moore trophobic," explains Elland, "because that's the situation that the protagonists are in, this really confined space that seems to close in and in."

As Chloe Harris in Emmerdale from 2021 to 2023, the Darlington-born actor/author played out some pretty harrowing plots, including being stalked and surviving a spectacular car crash. Did this help with her writing?

"It was high-octane stuff. I was coming home covered in fake blood – what's known in the industry as pig's blood, but is actually a kind of syrupy liquid. It was really disgusting. The first day was fun, but by day five you're still covered and it's awful. So I was primed, I was already at that pitch to get into writing the gory stuff after a day filming these kinds of things."

THE NOVEL TAPS into the surging popularity of "femgore", a genre fuelled by body horror films such as The Substance and Nightbitch and BookTok favourites like Lucy Rose's The Lamb, which have become wildly popular with a younger generation of women. Revelling in violence and disgust, femgore clearly taps into something profound.

So why has it hit such a raw and bloody nerve? "To be honest, I didn't know that much about it until I got published. I was a big fan of Gothic literature and horror, so that heavily influenced the book. I think it's a reflection of what we're seeing in society: the intense scrutiny of women's bodies. These stories express a kind of female rage that comes up a lot in horror. It's also something to do with how fast things are moving now, different experiences women have had growing up, and how that's influenced their relationship with their bodies, their food, with periods."

The story is a period piece in every sense. Ann's revulsion at her own carnal nature is expressed through graphic purging and her vivid obsession with purity and cleanliness. She perceives her periods as evidence of sin escaping her body, and much of the book's violence is turned inwards by Ann against herself.

"There is this violent underbelly of womanhood that is glossed over or not seen as part of being a woman," says Elland. "It's there in all the blood and everything physical that women have to deal with – and it's important to talk about.

"There's a scene I really like, that I wrote early on, where Ann and Lady Charlotte are talking about periods. And it's just not something we see much in art – but in life, I talk about it with my friends all the time. It's so bizarre to me that 50 per cent of the population experience this and it's just not discussed. This is why horror and femgore are so important. It seems shocking but it rips everything open so then the conversation can be had more freely. In reality, it's quite normal and natural. I'm lucky that I've grown up in this time that's a lot more open. Nowadays we see blood instead of blue liquid in tampon ads."

'A violent underbelly of womanhood is glossed over'

So has she had different responses from different age groups? "Yes, older women seem to pick up on different things, like the class theme. I've just recorded the audiobook, and my nan keeps saying she can't wait to listen to it." Elland smiles and her eyes go wide at the prospect. "She's absolutely determined." It must run in the family. JENNI DOGGETT

DIP MY BRAIN IN JOY: A LIFE WITH NEIL INNES
YVONNE INNES
To have been a member of cherished ensemble the Bonzo Dog Doo-Dah Band is worthy of celebration. But to have been a Python and a Rutle, too, makes you a comedy giant. One who left us too early in 2019. In Dip My Brain in Joy (Nine Eight Books, £22) musician and pasticheur Neil Innes is painted with loving brushstrokes by his wife Yvonne, who conjures the hilarious chaos but also the cruel vagaries of the creative business. John Cleese said he was "too nice for his own good". But that's why fans adored this gifted man. MARK BRAXTON

LONG BRIGHT RIVER
LIZ MOORE
Long Bright River
Sunday–Wednesday C4
Sisters Mickey and Kasey may walk the same streets, but one is a cop while the other is entrenched in the underworld. When Kasey goes missing, concurrent with a string of murders, Mickey has a personal stake in the game. Long Bright River (Windmill Books, £9.99) isn't just the sisters' story, however, as Liz Moore gives a vivid portrait of the opioid crisis in Philadelphia, making this thriller all the more unsettling for its realism.

THE ARCHERS: VICTORY AT AMBRIDGE
CATHERINE MILLER
Victory at Ambridge
Available via BBC Sounds
Every town has an eccentric and 1940s Ambridge is no different, with its very own mystic in a hermit's cave, supposedly leaving prophecies hidden around the area. As an academic takes interest, it appears the mystic may be the real deal – but if the prophecies are to be believed then a villager's death is on the cards... Catherine Miller's Victory at Ambridge (Simon & Schuster, £9.99) deftly joins whimsy with history as she melds Ambridgean life with the difficulties of a community coming out of war.

PAINTING WITH PLANTS

Even if you're confident about creating a colour palette, rules are there to be broken, says Joe Swift

Combining flower colours for a summer border can undoubtedly be an art form. Some people love this aspect of gardening and have the confidence to throw colours together as if they were adding ingredients to a cake mix without a recipe and still produce amazing results; others struggle and wonder why their garden looks like it got dressed by itself – in the dark!

Colour is so personal (what you like and what you don't) that you might prefer to ignore my tips, but some readers may like a few pointers. Either way, remember that once rules are put in place, they are there to be broken.

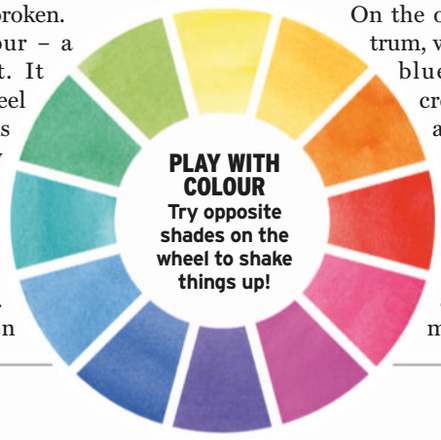

Firstly, green is a colour – a fabulous colour, in fact. It creates a calm, soothing feel in your garden, and works especially well in shady areas where leaf textures (such as ferns, hostas, Solomon's seal and shade-loving grasses) will combine effortlessly. Different shades of green (there are hundreds) almost always work alongside each other, and green makes a great base when you later add other colours.

Hot and spicy borders create a very different effect. They energise a space and can end up with that full-on exotic, holiday feel. They work especially well in small spaces, so if you have a medium or large garden, maybe try sectioning an area off into a separate "room". Oranges, reds and yellows work well alongside dark-purple foliage, so look for plants such as crocosmia, day lilies and dahlias, as well as daisies like rudbeckias, echinacea and heleniums, with some of the hotter achilleas and sedums playing a supporting role.

On the other hand, the cool spectrum, which is made up of whites, blues, purples and pinks, creates an elegant feel with a light touch – what some would see as a quintessentially British border. Roses, lavenders, salvias, nepeta, agastache, gaura, Verbena bonariensis and the like are the way to go. They are mostly sun-lovers and always work well beside silvery foliage.

Those are the basics, but to mix it all up a little, have a look at the colour wheel (below, left). Rather than sticking to just cool or warm, maybe throw some complementary colours in to shake it up. These colours lie directly opposite on the wheel, so orange and blue together, purple and yellow, or pink and green, perhaps? There you go: some simple recipes for those who may like to follow a foolproof method!

Joe Swift is a presenter of RHS Chelsea Flower Show, from Sunday BBC TV

IF YOU DO ONE THING THS WEEK...

plant herbs

Fresh herbs are delicious – much tastier than dried ones. Most are easy to grow, too. Many can be planted between ornamentals, in containers or raised beds, and now's a great time to put them in and even sow seed direct.

EVERGREEN HERBS Herbs such as bay, rosemary, thyme and sage are woody and evergreen, so become part of the garden's framework.

PERENNIAL HERBS These die back and return every year, such as mint (but grow it in a pot as it will spread), oregano and chives. Picking perennial herbs regularly keeps them productive.

ANNUAL HERBS Non-hardy: one-year wonders. Include chervil (aniseed-flavoured feathery leaves), French tarragon (buy a plant or get a cutting, as this variety can't be grown from seed), coriander (sow it directly where you want it to grow) and basil. When you buy a pot of basil it's actually lots of seeds sown together, which is a good way to go if you're sowing (then plant out into a container or border). Sweet basil is the most common, but why not try Greek or purple basil?

IN BORDERS Herbs generally love plenty of sun. A few, such as mint, parsley, lemon balm, coriander, chervil and golden oregano, will grow in partial shade, but if you want a good range, look to your sunniest spots. The sun brings essential oils to the leaves' surface for flavour.

IN CONTAINERS Use a loam-based, peat-free compost such as John Innes No 1 with around 25 per cent added grit. Keep the soil moist (watering in the morning is best) and use an organic feed such as liquid seaweed to promote foliage growth.

£24.99 plus p&p* – buy one, get one FREE!

Fuchsias are one of the most versatile of garden plants; their iconic flower colours and shapes decorating our summer gardens year after year. Voted as the UK's number one flowering bedding plant by Which? magazine, their beauty is unrivalled. One of the most spectacular types is the tall fuchsia tree (or column, as some like to call it), where a tall stem has been skilfully grown over the last winter, to get a head start this season.

Travels with Agatha Christie and Sir David Suchet
Wednesday 9.00pm More4

IN AGATHA'S FOOTSTEPS

Sir David Suchet is re-creating the Queen of Crime's grand tour and discovers she was a secret surfer!

SUPER SLEUTH David Suchet played Hercule Poirot for 24 years

You've previously described Hercule Poirot as "a dear friend", but what about Agatha Christie? Should Mrs Suchet be worried?
No, I don't think so! Sadly, I never met Agatha – though there was part of me when I was doing Poirot that was glad I didn't, because she was famously very uncomplimentary about anyone who played her characters. In fact, the nearest I got to a compliment was from her daughter. I visited the family a lot in the early days, and after a couple of sherries she said, 'I think I have to confess. I do believe my mother would have been pleased with your interpretation'. I became quite emotional.

It doesn't sound like Agatha would have made a fun travelling companion for you...
Well, that's her reputation as an elderly lady: rather severe and unsociable. But in 1922, when she was 31, she set out on a world tour with her husband, who was part of a delegation to encourage countries to bring their produce to the 1924 British Empire Exhibition at Wembley. And following in her footsteps introduced me to an Agatha I didn't know: courageous, independent, vivacious, who loved playing the piano onboard ship – and even surfing!

GUTSY Agatha Christie

Agatha Christie was a surfer girl?
Yes, her passion for it started when they visited South Africa, but they went on to Hawaii and really embraced it there. In the 1920s it was just becoming popular, but not among women, so she was brave to go for it.

And were you equally brave? You're only 79!
It was tempting, but my contract says I'm not allowed to do dangerous sports while filming! There was plenty else to do in Hawaii, though. I adore chocolate, so I went to a cocoa plantation – it was the first time I'd ever seen a cacao bean. Opened up, it looked like something from ET!

So you brought back a suitcase of Hawaiian chocolate rather than South African wine?
Oh, I'd definitely take the chocolate. I enjoyed seeing the Constantia vineyards in South Africa, and tasting the same wines that Agatha would have done, but the most extraordinary thing I saw there was the Big Hole diamond mine, in Kimberley, though mining has stopped now. In fact I was walking along in a completely barren place, when I passed a local woman and her child, and then from behind me I heard her cry, 'I don't believe it!'

You were mistaken for Richard Wilson?
Ha ha, no. But Poirot was so international, with more than 700 million viewers in over 100 countries, that on a deserted street in South Africa, I was asked for an autograph and it was the most extraordinary one I've ever signed.

You must have met a lot of interesting characters...
Yes. Spending time with New Zealand's Maori was fascinating. I got the hongi nose kiss, and they introduced me to pounamu stone, which is an important part of their spiritual beliefs. In fact, they carved one into the shape of a whale's tooth for me, because I was travelling and communicating, and they say the whale is the greatest traveller and communicator on our planet. It was one of the most emotional moments of my trip.

Any unpleasant bits?
In our Australia episode, we visited Hobart in Tasmania, which was a penal colony, with women sent from England for petty crimes like stealing a loaf of bread – months on board ship, never to return. And we were looking at a wall there, and discovered a bit of hair

GETTY; ITV/SHUTTERSTOCK

ALOHA!
Sir David Suchet on Waikiki beach in Hawaii.

MOUNTAIN HIGH
The gloriously scenic Rocky Mountaineer train in Canada between the bricks – a convict’s hair used as part of the mortar. It happened on camera, so you can see that I’m really disturbed by it.

Could you recommend something more holidayish?
Canada’s Rocky Mountaineer scenic train will be on a lot of readers’ bucket lists, and getting to do that was the most wonderful privilege. The landscape is such that I’d never witnessed anywhere else. Agatha herself went from Vancouver to Banff by train, and we stayed at the same spectacular castle of a hotel as her, the Fairmont Banff Springs.

Then the other highlight of Canada for me was going to the Prince of Wales’s ranch in Alberta. This was an earlier Prince – the ‘Mrs Simpson’ one – and he bought a ranch there that Agatha and the delegation visited. That’s how there ended up being a sculpture – in butter – of the Prince, on a horse, at the Empire Exhibition. But was I tempted to commission a butter sculpture of myself? I didn’t think anyone would want to see that…

MONEY FOR NOTHING

Help to Save is something to savour if you're a low-income household, says Paul Lewis

A Government scheme to help low-income households save has been extended and improved. Help to Save gives a bonus of 50p for every pound saved at the end of two years, and again at the end of four years. It is now available to anyone on Universal Credit who earned at least £1 in the preceding assessment period. (Until the change in April, earnings had to be equivalent to 16 hours at minimum wage.)

Individuals can deposit from £1 to £50 each month into their Help to Save account and can take the money out when they need it. At the end of two years, the Government pays a tax-free bonus of half the maximum amount in the account during that period. So, if you put in £25 each month for the first six months, you will have £150. You can then withdraw up to £149 – you must leave at least £1 behind – and even if you save nothing more, after two years you'll get a bonus of £75, which is half the £150 maximum deposited. At the end of the fourth year, you'll get another bonus of half the difference between the maximum amount saved in the first and second two-year periods.

> 'It gives a bonus of 50p for every pound saved'

That means that someone who puts in the maximum £50 a month for two years, and takes nothing out, will have £1,200 in the account and get a bonus of £600. If they continue to save £50 a month for another two years, they will have put £2,400 into the account and will get another £600 bonus – making a bonus total of £1,200. Bonuses are paid into the customer's current account.

Despite its generosity, the government says that only around 62,000 people opened a Help to Save account in 2023/24. With 2.6 million working people on Universal Credit, it hopes to boost that take-up figure, and says another 550,000 people will also be eligible.

If you already have some savings, be aware that if the Help to Save account takes you above £6,000 total there will be a deduction from your Universal Credit of £4.35 a month for the first £1 above, and again for each extra £250.

For more information, and to apply, search gov.uk for 'help to save', or apply through the HMRC mobile app.

FREE GUIDE

HOMEOWNER, AGED 55 OR OVER? ENJOY YOUR LATER LIFE WITH EQUITY RELEASE

Your FREE guide by RT's Paul Lewis can help you discover if equity release could be right for you

If you're nearing, or have reached retirement, and you're wondering how to supplement your later-life income, perhaps equity release could help. Maybe you're dreaming of a luxury holiday or planning some long-awaited home renovations.

If you're a homeowner aged 55 or over, then releasing the equity tied up in your home could provide you with a lump sum or a steady stream of income to help turn those plans into reality.

It's important to make sure equity release is right for you, as there are many alternative financial options available. Advice is required before proceeding with equity release and Radio Times has partnered with Age Partnership+, whose team of advisers will tell you everything you need to know and help you discover if it's right for you.

Initial advice is provided for free and without obligation. Only if your case completes would an advice fee of £1,995 be payable. Other lender and solicitor fees may apply.

Equity release requires paying off any existing mortgage, and any money released, plus accrued interest, would be repaid upon death or moving into long-term care.

Equity release may involve a home reversion plan or a lifetime mortgage, which is secured against your property and will reduce the value of your estate and impact funding long-term care.

Call 0800 464 0735 to request your FREE guide or visit radiotimes.com/unlock

DICTIONARY CORNER

Word of the week Moot point

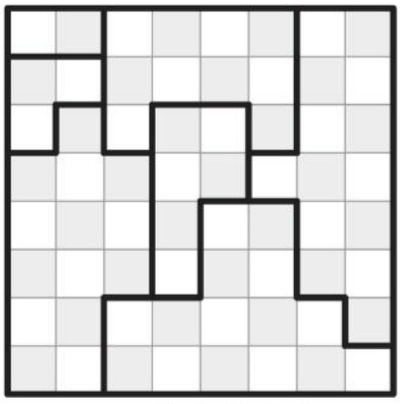

The word "moot" comes from the same family as "meet", and originally described a meeting or assembly where judicial or legislative issues would be discussed. Today, groups of law students might be given the exercise of debating a fictitious case to hone their skills. This training method dates back centuries, and the discussions are called "moots", while a "moot court" is a mock courtroom used to test imaginary cases. These legal assemblies lie behind the term "moot point", ie one that is open to debate. Increasingly, as the use of "moot" is unfamiliar to the layperson, it is written as a "mute point".

The word "thing" also once described an important assembly such as a court or council. The word broadened to mean a "matter brought before the court" and on to a point of concern, until it arrived at today's much looser sense where almost anything can be a thing.

SEVEN QUEENS

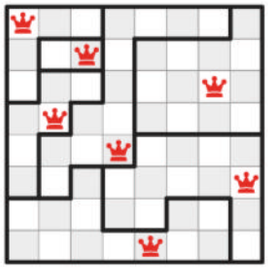

HOW TO PLAY Each grid contains seven realms and within each you must place one queen. Each row, column and diagonal can only contain at most one queen; there will always be one row and column that contains no queen.

REMEMBER THEM ALL
Fighting continued in Burma (left) while Britain partied on VE Day. Below: 80th commemorations

LETTER OF THE WEEK

Where the war went on

VE Day 80: We Were There (1 May BBC2) was excellent. But as it finished I realised that no one had mentioned the fact that there were still thousands of troops fighting in the Far East. My father (Harold Cottrell of 136 Field Regiment, Royal Artillery, 7th Indian Division) fought in Burma and I know that he felt, on finally returning home, that many people just wanted to forget the war and were not interested in the sacrifice the troops in the Far East had made.

I hope that this will not be the case this year and that a similar programme will be made about the forgotten armies when we get to VJ Day on 15 August.

WARTIME TRAGEDY

I read with interest in RT's VE Day issue (3 May) Ruby Currell's account of the air crash on her school in Freckleton, Lancashire, in 1944, which killed 61 people, 38 of them infants.

Aged ten at the time, I vividly remember this tragic event. My father, Henry Mallinson, who led the ambulance service in Blackpool, attended the scene and was in charge of the casualties. I later served in the Lancashire Ambulance Service for many years, retiring in 1994, and witnessed some tragic accidents. None was so traumatic, however, as this event. When he returned home that evening after what must have been a long, exhausting day, I recall him sitting down in his chair and simply crying. A sad day indeed.

MISSED THE MARK

Whatever happened to all the talented and experienced commentators we normally hear on such an eventful programme as The Nation Pays Tribute (5 May BBC1)? No proper research could have been done when a comment was made such as: "Here come the Marching Department". This was a reference to the RAF Regiment, for goodness' sake!

As an ex-member of the RAF, it was painful to listen to, and not at all professional from the BBC.

BRILLIANT BETTY

Antiques Roadshow: VE Day Special (4 May BBC1) seemed to be trying to be a documentary on the war, though some of the stories and objects shown were fascinating. But when Fiona Bruce was interviewing Dr David Kenyon at Bletchley Park, and then the screen cut away to several photos, we were not told that some of them weren't taken at Bletchley Park, but at Outstation Eastcote, one of five satellite codebreaking outstations, and run as a naval base by the Wrens.

I am in contact with an ex-Wren who actually set up codebreaking Bombes at Outstation Eastcote. Betty Hollingberry (née Vowles), who is 102 years young, is on the Bletchley Park roll of honour. I understand she was invited to attend the VE Day parade in London, and a reception at Buckingham Palace afterwards. Congratulations, Betty!

BEST EVER WHO

Of all the Doctor Who episodes I've ever watched, The Well (26 April BBC1) stands out as the best. A terrific, imaginative, gripping plot – I couldn't take my eyes off the screen. First-rate acting and what a gasp-inducing ending!

Bob Stock
Galashiels, Borders

Turn to page 12 for our feature on that episode's guest star, Rose Ayling-Ellis, who played Aliss Fenly, and to page 20 for a Doctor Who and Eurovision mash-up.

I TUNE TO BOOM

Mark Punter (Feedback, 3 May) wrote how sad it is that Ofcom has denied BBC a Radio 2 spin-off. May I suggest he listens to Boom Radio or Boom Light. He will be able to listen to all the music he mentions and much more. Also excellent presenters such as David Hamilton, Simon Bates, Judi Spiers and Fran Godfrey.

Martin Kemp

BONNIE KING CHARLIE

I was fascinated to see the headline (below) appear on the BBC News channel on bank holiday Monday (5 May). I wondered whether Queen Cammie, Prince Willie and Princess Katie would also be attending the events.

Our Dream Farm with Matt Baker (C4) was the highlight of my viewing so far this year, with a totally unexpected twist at the end (3 May). As long as there are folk like Sara, Ioan, Ryan, Lowri,

BROADCAST OF CHAMPS

Congratulations to the BBC on their excellent coverage of the World Snooker Championship. Every ball potted, no adverts between each frame, the sheer professionalism of Hazel Irvine, who is such a talented presenter, plus the dulcet tones of dear John Virgo ("where's the cue ball going?") and Dennis Taylor.

Plenty of nostalgia, too, in the great city of Sheffield.

HARMONIOUS PROMS

This Cultural Life, with cellist Sheku Kanneh-Mason (1/3 May Radio 4), was a great interview. And what Sheku said reinforced my own thoughts about the Last Night of the Proms.

The Proms are wonderful. I try to listen to most of them – except the Last Night because of its jingoistic content. Given the current political climate, why can't they choose pieces that celebrate global unity, since the music played and the musicians are of many nationalities?

If the Last Night makes a talented and loved musician like Sheku feel uncomfortable, it's not worth it!

SHIPSHAPE SCHEDULE

On Sunday 4 May, I noticed some scheduling that was perhaps by coincidence rather than planning. While Film4 showed Titanic at 5.10pm, Legend had already begun showing Raise the Titanic at 4.50pm. Perhaps the only time the vessel was raised before it had sunk!

The comedian laments the decline of the panel shows that made him

SUKI DHANDA/GUARDIAN/EYEVINE

What's the view from your sofa?
In Friends, after someone tells Joey they don't have a TV, he asks, "But what's all your furniture pointed at?" That's how I feel about my living room. Everything is geared up to face the TV. But it's been a while since I sat on my sofa. Usually, I'm immediately horizontal.

Who controls the remote at home?
I insist on controlling the remote, and it's a source of much tension between my partner and me! We've got a couple of remotes, including one for the TV, although you have to turn the PlayStation on if you want to watch a Blu-ray. It's become untenable. What's most shouted in the house is, "Where is one of the fing remotes?"

What have you watched recently?
The US comedy Abbott Elementary created by actress Quinta Brunson. I like that a lot. It reminds me of the US network shows that I grew up on, with 20 weekly episodes. I want more shows like that. There's something comforting about having a show and a group of characters you can dip into once a week.

What did you watch as a child?
Growing up, the biggest currency in my household was being funny, so we all bonded over watching old British sitcoms: Fawlty Towers, Only Fools and Horses, but also stuff from America, like Bewitched. My grandfather loved sitcoms. Eventually, I got him into The Fresh Prince of Bel-Air. There's something about South Asian grandparents and The Fresh Prince... they love it!

Did you ever watch comedians on TV?
I remember seeing Chris Rock's Bigger & Blacker special on Channel 4, and now my stand-up is a squeaky-voiced man of colour shrieking about the news. I suppose the apple didn't fall far from that tree...

Would you say panel shows were your "big break"?
There was a period during the 2000s where a good episode of Mock the Week could sell out your tour, so maybe I lived through the golden age of panel shows. They helped me learn how to be on TV. By the time I did Have I Got News for You, I knew loosely what to expect. They were a fantastic way of bringing through new comedians. If they disappear, it'll be a loss to British comedy.

There are fewer now – so is it harder for new comedians to break through?
People my age are like Indiana Jones's hat – the door was closing, a generation ahead of us slipped under and they reached back to grab us. Today, it's a lot more difficult because you need multiple skills. You need to film, edit and post on Instagram and TikTok. Those are skills we didn't need to have.

Who is currently making you laugh?
My support acts – Kemah Bob, Priya Hall, Sara Barron – are all phenomenal. My ex-flatmate, Rose Matafeo, is the figurehead of a boom in New Zealand comics, perhaps thanks to the legacy of Flight of the Conchords. James Acaster is a genius, much to my displeasure. And Amy Annette – but I'm obliged to acknowledge that she has been my partner of 13 years...

DOWN TIME

FILM
Black Bag*, a spy thriller with Michael Fassbender, who is very charismatic. I enjoyed it.

PODCAST
When I'm away The Guardian's Football Weekly is oddly comforting. I feel it connects me to my home.

Your tour has gone all over the world. What do you credit its success to?
I think I loosely have to thank Taskmaster. There's an international community of people interested in British comedy because of that show. There's also an interesting energy doing political comedy right now, especially in America. There's an appetite to hear what I'm saying, expressed in the manner I'm saying it.

Is it hard doing political comedy now?
It was harder in the mid-2010s. People are more engaged now. But I've also honed my audience. Wherever I am in the world, there'll be a person in their 20s at my gig with a cool haircut and a T-shirt that says something like "Unions Forever". I see that and think, "Fantastic, my work is done". JONATHAN WELLS
