From the Editor

Radio Times and Bafta go back a long way. Not long after I first started working at the magazine I had to come up with an idea for the cover for the issue celebrating the big TV industry bash. Which meant that I got to turn the 2001 host, Angus Deayton, into a human award in a fetching bronze colour (see below). I do wonder whether we'd be allowed to do that now, but he was a good sport, especially when the coloured hairspray didn't wash out.

This year we have talked to nine talented women who are nominated for an award. They were beautifully photographed by Rachel Louise Brown on a set built by Penny Mills (both of whom are new to working with RT) the project was conceived by our inspirational features editor Alexia Skinitis, orchestrated by our brilliant deputy picture editor Natalie Drewery, and the covers and feature inside were created by our equally brilliant senior designer, Ellie Field. It's an all-female production that we are very proud of and it starts on page 10.

Elsewhere in this issue, there's a fascinating piece by Chris Packham who in a new series of Inside Our Minds attempts to show viewers what life is like for someone who is either ADHD or dyslexic. A number of you might even recognise some of the patterns of behaviour in your own lives as it's claimed that 1 in seven of us is likely to be neurodivergent.

TEN QUESTIONS WITH

WALTON GOGGINS

Following his star turn in The White Lotus, the actor is "having a moment" and enjoying his sex symbol status

Over the course of his 30-year career, 53-year-old Walton Goggins – the self-described "journeyman" – has gone from TV shows The Shield and Justified to making movies with Steven Spielberg and Quentin Tarantino. But thanks to The White Lotus and sci-fi drama Fallout, the Alabama-born actor is finding new peaks of popularity on TV, and now stars in Hollywood satire The Uninvited...

You were directed by your wife Nadia Conners on The Uninvited – what was it like mixing business with the personal?
The adjustment was very difficult the first couple of days! We're both Scorpios. We are extremely independent people. We both have very specific ideas about things. She was the director and I had to listen to her the way that I listened to directors – but I had to push back on things that I disagreed with, for my story. But we did find a rhythm. And we did get to a place where we weren't taking things personally.

You play a Hollywood agent. Did that feel familiar?
I've had a number of agents over the years and I know quite a few of them. I've seen their lives and it's not an easy job, really. You have to balance an extraordinary ego with being egoless... a lot of people in this town walk around with a low-grade anxiety. That's just kind of the nature of any artistic endeavour.

The story sees your character throw a lavish showbiz party. Have you lived that glitzy Hollywood lifestyle?
I'm not machiavellian when it comes to socialising. I don't go to parties looking for something in exchange. No interaction with anyone is transactional for me. If you're asking me if I prefer a Hollywood party to a party at our home with Hollywood people, I would take the latter. Nadia and I have been throwing parties for a long time, and I quite like socialising with 20, 25 people at our home. It's a great way to spend an evening. I'm an extroverted introvert, right?

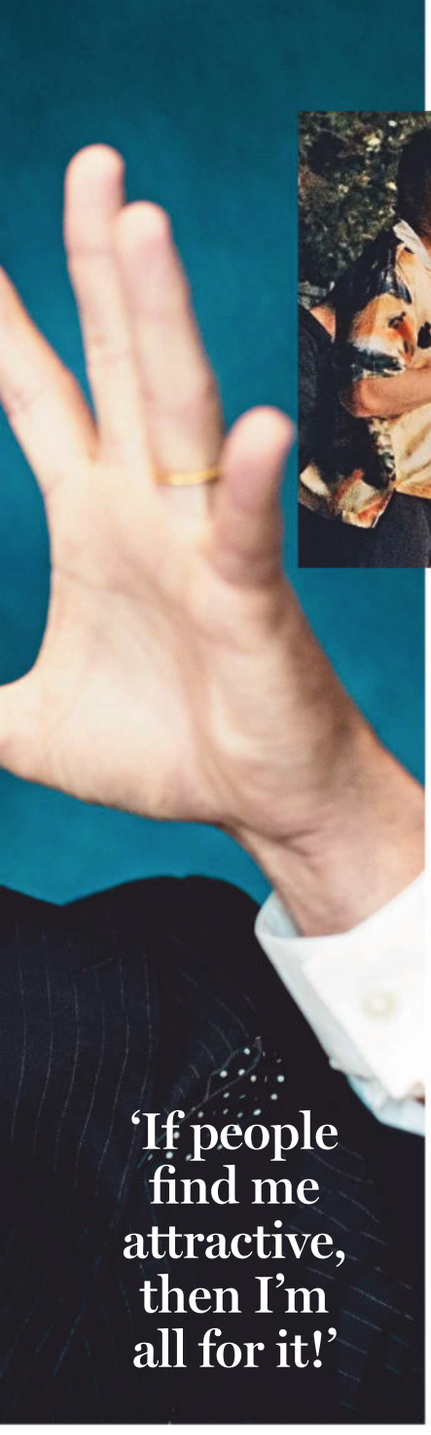

TALK-ABOUT TV
Co-starring with Aimee Lou Wood in The White Lotus

You and Nadia live in an old hunting lodge in the Hudson Valley, New York state. Is that to keep away from the showbiz madness?
It wasn't about being away from this business or away from Hollywood. I love Hollywood. I spent 30 years in Los Angeles. It's one of my favorite cities in the world. I went there when I was 19 and left when I was 49. Really, more than anything, I couldn't imagine living 40 years in the same place. So we were looking for an adventure. Who knows where this road will lead?

Do you worry about your career trajectory, and the very up-and-down nature of acting?
My career has been like a great stock. It never went up too high, and the dips were never too low. It just kept building over time. Everything is cyclical. Everything ebbs and everything flows. And whatever moment I'm having now, there will be another one on the other side of it. And it’s not defined by access to work for me, it’s defined by quality of life. I’ve been doing this a very long time. I never want work to go away, but fractionally speaking, a bigger part of it will be spent with my family and my friends and a cocktail on the beach in the Mediterranean.

GETTY; BUCKINGHAM PALACE/BBC

TINSELTOWN As a Hollywood agent, with Pedro Pascal, in The Uninvited

Everyone’s gone wild for your role in The White Lotus. How was it working with creator Mike White?
He is a unique voice in the world and writes an existential crisis like nobody else.

Thanks to the series you’ve become a bit of a sex symbol. What do you think about that?
Well, I think I’ve been around a long time. I live my life in a way I find attractive in other people. So if that is why people find me attractive, then I’m all for it. Yeah!

By contrast, you’re now shooting series two of Amazon Prime’s post-apocalyptic drama Fallout, where you are almost unrecognisable as the nose-less, mutated Ghoul. Do you like such transformations?
It just makes it easier to disappear! When we were filming The White Lotus, it was just me, but it may as well have been the Ghoul make-up, because I’m just stepping into the deep pain that this person has. So, whether you change yourself physically or you change yourself emotionally, they’re both new skins that you put on to tell a story.

You had two great experiences with Quentin Tarantino, on Django Unchained and The Hateful Eight. Would you like to work with him again?
Who wouldn’t want to get another invitation to work with one of the greatest auteurs to ever sit behind a camera? But what I have learnt in my life, regardless, is I got the golden ticket, and I got it twice.

So, do you prefer working in film or television?
I like both. I came into television at the nascent stage of this new golden era. It was The Sopranos first and then The Shield, which was my first experience on TV. No one, no actor, had ever experienced a serialised unearthing of a character that they were playing over such a long period of time. That was like doing an 84-hour movie! JAMES MOTTRAM

WHAT IT’S LIKE...

to bring live celebrations to TV

FLYING THE FLAG VE Day 80 launched in February

Paddington takes tea with the Queen in 2022

Claire Popplewell (below) was trained in live programming at the BBC’s Birmingham broadcasting centre, Pebble Mill Studios, and is the creative director at BBC Studios Events. They produced the coverage of King Charles III and Queen Camilla’s coronation, Queen Elizabeth II’s Platinum Jubilee and now VE Day’s 80th anniversary.

THE BIG DAY We had six months to work on the Platinum Jubilee and five for the King’s coronation. We started production on the VE Day events in February. It’s a fast turn-around. We’re not only on the creative side – we build the stage, book artists for the concert and liaise with the police, Westminster Council, the Royal Parks and the military. The 80th anniversary will probably be the last occasion that most of the veterans are still with us to do something on this scale.

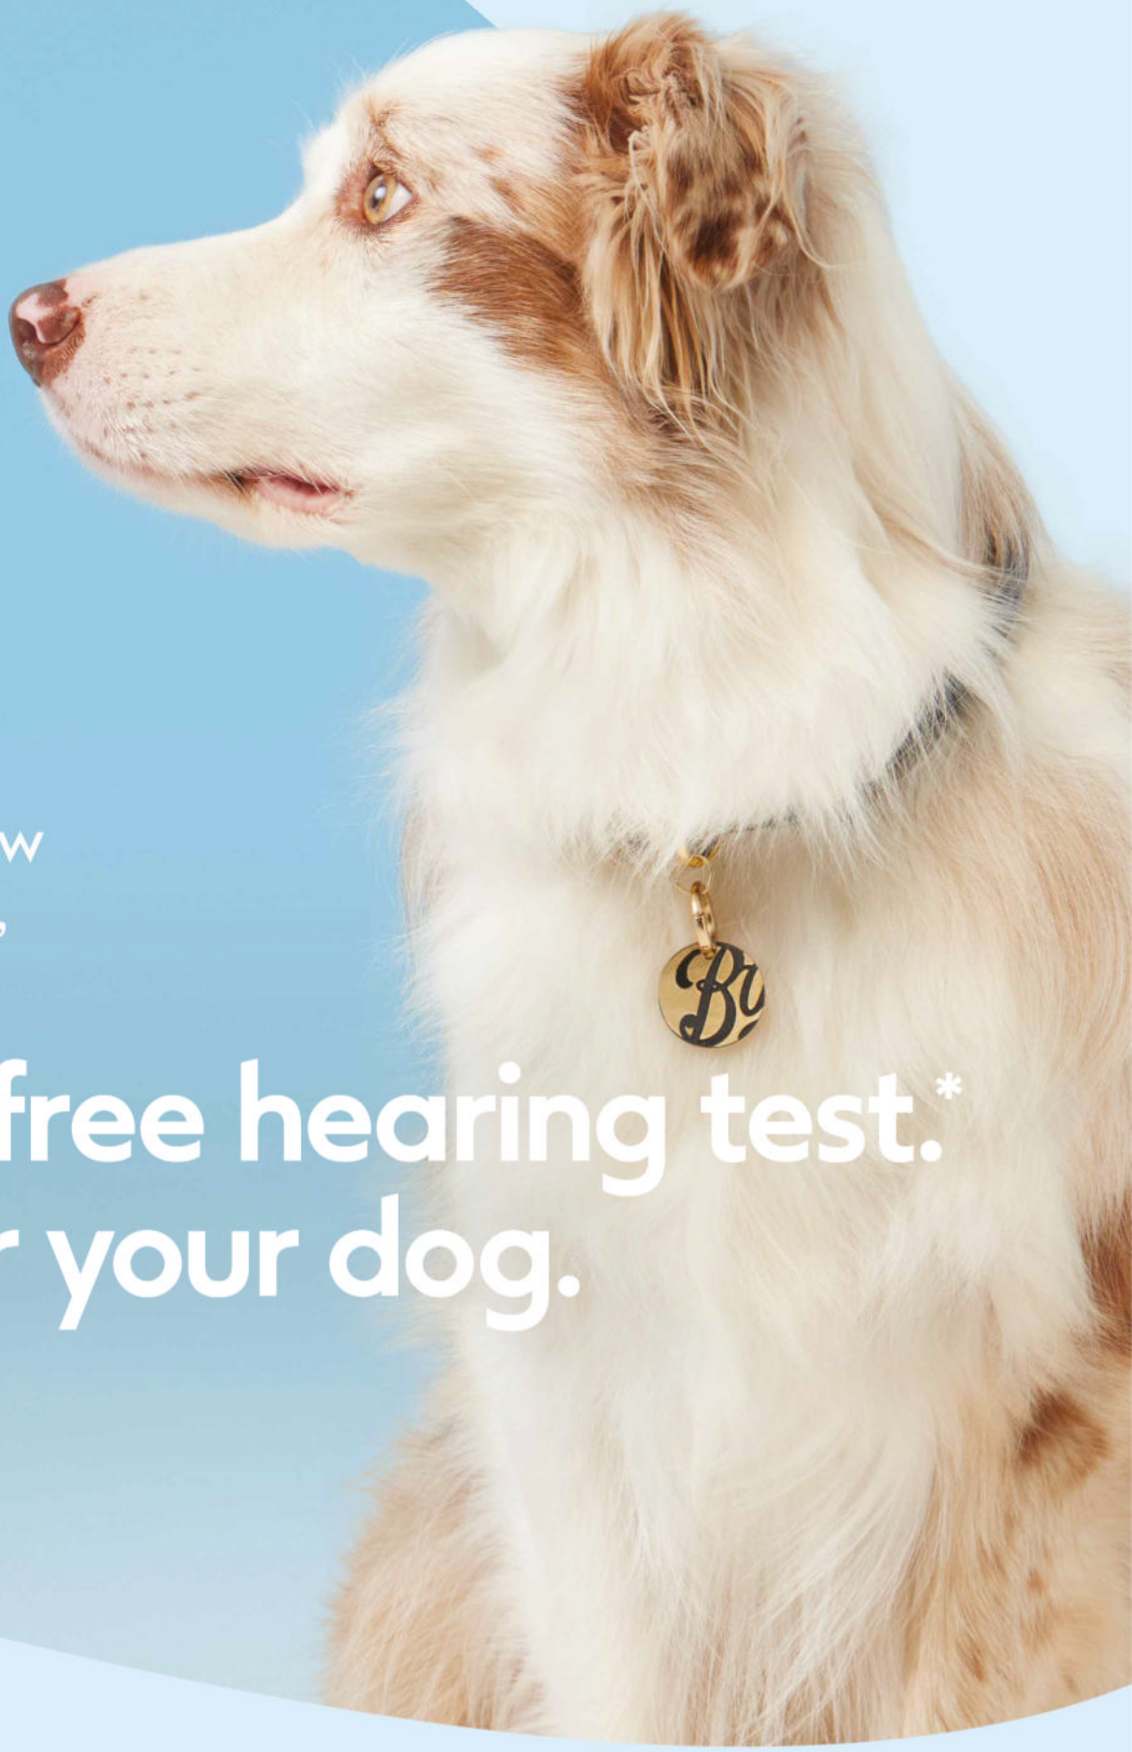

BEING DISCREET An audience’s experience at an event, whether it’s a parade, procession or concert, is paramount. Nobody should feel that if they go to Westminster Abbey, they’re in a TV studio. We are also careful where we rig microphones and cameras to not cause any damage. We have scaffolding in the roof and often use remote camera systems operated from outside. You never know what can happen on the day. There might be a protest, a soldier might faint... I get nervous every broadcast, but that’s the fun of it.

MAKING MA’AMALADE There are so many things we can’t rehearse, because every national newspaper would have a photo of it. One of the biggest secrets I’ve had to keep was the sketch where Paddington Bear met the Queen. We used a code word but it still got leaked. Somebody persuaded the person not to tell because it was going to ruin the surprise. Seeing the reaction of the public when it played was lovely.

ON THE RECORD Some may see it as television, but, for me, it’s far more than that. We went to a cinema in Chiswick to play the 1953 coronation for the Platinum Jubilee. I remember saying, “Wow, in 50 years, there will be people playing our coverage and doing the same thing.” EMILY JORDAN

VIEWPOINT

SHOULD WE BRING BACK THE DEATH PENALTY?

Dan Walker explores the reality of capital punishment

BEHIND BARS Dan Walker with Texas death row inmate Charles Thompson

The last official executions in the UK took place in 1964 but, like most people, I've had many conversations about the death penalty. I don't believe we'll be bringing it back, but the statistics are telling, suggesting 30-40 per cent of us support it – a number that doubles when you mention specific, particularly horrific crimes. One recent poll even demonstrated majority support for its return.

I personally struggle with the finality of a death penalty, making a decision that can never be reversed; the idea that we, as failed and flawed individuals, can determine the right of someone else to live or die. But it's something that people in many US States – 27 still have the death penalty – feel is the right thing to do. It's easy to judge from some 5,000 miles away and say this doesn't belong in a civilised society, which is why I set off to make a documentary about capital punishment in America.

The day before I left, my 15-year-old daughter asked me, "What's it all about, Dad? Who gives us the right to decide if someone lives or dies? How can it be right to murder someone for the sin of them killing someone else?" Her words stayed with me as I travelled to Huntsville, Texas, home to the most active death chamber in the US, with nearly 600 executions since 1982.

The nearest town looks like any other American community with diners, hairdressers, a pretty little square... Then one citizen told me that everyone's lights used to flicker when the electric chair at the prison was turned on. Another said, "It's part of life here."

Nothing prepares for you for a visit to a prison where you know people are put to death. The security is extremely tight, and the purpose of the place is reflected in the solemn faces of the people there. When I walked into a death chamber for the first time and saw the execution bench in front of me, it felt eerily quiet but also loud, as my brain screamed, trying to make sense of all the events that had taken place there. Then I noticed the public gallery, the other side of a glass window, where family members of both the victim and the prisoner gather in one small space to watch.

'A UK poll shows majority support for a return to executions'

What struck me most, however, was the impact this has on the people working in such places. I met two men whose job included strapping down the prisoner for execution, and the horrors those men have seen was evident on their faces. And I heard about terrible crimes committed by unrepentant prisoners.

One of the last people to be hanged in the US had raped a woman, then eight years later had gone back to kill both her and her daughter. He laughed and smiled as he gave his final statement before his death. The warden who attended told me, "I don't agree with the death penalty, but I also don't believe that man deserved to be alive." And I can understand that point of view.

Faith is a bigger part of American life than it is in the UK, and lots of the people I met lean on it to justify the death penalty. As a Christian, I think I believe in the same God, but I follow the message of Jesus Christ, one of forgiveness and the possibility of redemption. I understand people feeling passionately about justice, the idea of a life for a life, but for every eight people put to death, one is released through proof of innocence.

I found that immensely unsettling, particularly after I met Daniel Gwynn. He was released just over a year ago after spending nearly 30 years in jail, 23 of them in solitary confinement, on a first-degree murder charge. A troubled young black kid, forced into confession, he has spent more than half his life on death row for a crime he didn't commit. He could have been executed at any point during those 30 years, with very few batting an eyelid. Daniel's story is one of many that will stay with me.

Dead Man Walking: Dan Walker on Death Row is on Wed 7 May at 9pm on 5. Catch up on 5 streaming

What isn't clear from watching either of Monica Dolan's brilliant Bafta-nominated performances is how excellent she is at being Monica Dolan. Because she so immerses herself in the part, whether that part is a real person such as subpostmistress Jo Hamilton in Mr Bates vs. The Post Office, for which she's landed a Leading Actress nod, or a fictional one such as the venomous Ann Branson in Sherwood, for which she's been nominated as Supporting Actress, you lose sight of Dolan completely.

When I first interviewed her in 2018, I had no idea who to expect: a no-nonsense character like W1A's press officer Tracey Pritchard, or someone a little more menacing akin to Rose West, who she played electrifyingly in Appropriate Adult – for which Dolan won the Supporting Actress Bafta in 2012. "That was quite a while ago now," she muses on her win. "I think I'm due another one."

As, saying this, she can't quite manage to keep a straight face, the real Dolan emerges. Witty, warm and mischievous, she takes her work seriously. Herself, not so much. As demonstrated by the way she sweeps into the interview in an amazing gown – chomping on a cheeseburger. And when I compliment her on her décolletage in said gown, she replies giddily. "Who knew!?"

'Diversity is a massive resource – we need lots of different voices'

She may be dressed to the nines, but Dolan's feet are firmly on the ground. "When I've got this many people around me, looking at me, making notes, filming me, photographing me, it does make you feel successful for a day, but then you go home. You probably wouldn't be in a very good place mentally if you needed all this to be going on all the time to feel successful. One of the most unhealthy things you can suffer from is 'How am I doing?' syndrome. Unfortunately, the time we're in lends itself to constantly comparing and asking: 'How do I appear?' and 'How's it all going?' I think the antidote to that is to do something. To do some work."

Dolan is definitely doing the work. She says she was "massively surprised and utterly thrilled" to be nominated in two categories, but it's not all sunshine and lollipops. "I don't know what kind of night I'll have, because I'll be nervous to the end [when Leading Actress is presented] and I do like taking my shoes off at these things, but that's not going to be an option."

Of winning a Bafta, she says, "It's a bit of fairy dust, in that you get seen for more things and get more opportunities. Before I got a Bafta, people would thank me on the way out of an interview [for a part]. Once I had my Bafta, they'd thank me on the way in."

Dolan is not one of those actors who claims that "it's all in the script". As befits someone who hails from a family of engineers and scientists, she's methodical in her research and forensic in her attention to detail. "One of the reasons I like playing real people is that I'm quite lazy and a lot of the work is done for you with real people in terms of archive footage of them, or maybe their letters have survived."

But the 56-year-old actor, who was last nominated for a Bafta in 2019 for playing Marion Thorpe in A Very English Scandal, warns against elevating true stories and dramas based on real life above fictional ones. "We probably extol the virtues of something being true too much. It doesn't necessarily mean it's interesting. One of my favourites is Charlie Brooker and while his stories are coming true, they are 'what ifs'. Crucially, you don't know how the story ends."

Who writes the stories also occupies Dolan. In her ideal world, she says, scripts would be judged entirely on their own merit. But we don't live in an ideal world: of the 12 shows that are nominated for Drama Series, Limited Drama and Scripted Comedy, only three were created and written by women. "We definitely need more women writers," says Dolan, describing diversity as "a massive resource because we need lots of different voices in the room."

But it's not an issue confined to TV. "Certainly in theatre, I feel as if sometimes, if there's been a slot and the writer or creator has been a woman, they think, 'We've done that, so we don't need another for a while' – because we do live in a bit of a tick-boxy culture. I've seen some incredible plays by women, then wait for the next one, and I just don't think they get nurtured in the same way as male playwrights do. And, even though women are 51 per cent of the population, for some reason I think the male voice is seen as the objective voice."

Speaking of writing, has she prepared acceptance speeches and practised them in the mirror? "It's disingenuous not to think of something to say and who you'd like to thank, but I try not to practise things in the mirror. It gives you a third eye and I was told at drama school, 'self-consciousness is the enemy of involvement'!"

Before Dolan departs, I ask if she agrees with fellow nominee Sophie Willan (see page 18) that "winning a Bafta is like getting a penis". Dolan wrinkles her nose. "I think I'd rather have a Bafta." GARETH McLEAN

Marisa Abela

NOMINATED FOR LEADING ACTRESS, INDUSTRY

The 28-year-old stars as investment banker Yasmin Kara-Hanani in finance drama Industry. She also recently played Amy Winehouse in the film Back to Black and appeared in Steven Soderbergh's Black Bag.

How does it feel to be nominated?
I found out the news on set while filming Industry, so it felt like a win for all of us. Getting a third series of the show was such a triumph. I'm currently filming series four and I'll still be filming when the Baftas happen, so to take the win back to everyone would be really fun. It's definitely validating. It feels great that people appreciate your work.

Are the best roles in TV now female?
No, but I don't think men's parts are necessarily better, either. There is much more equity than there was, but there's that quote: "When you're accustomed to privilege, equality feels like oppression." There was always this idea that people didn't want to sit down and watch a show about women, but [the HBO drama] Big Little Lies changed the game.

Does working with female directors make a big difference?
I was 22 when I did the first series of Industry and it was incredibly exposing in a lot of ways. The way the public deal with women's bodies on screen over men's will always be different and when women are asked to do a lot on screen, they need a woman guiding them through that process. There were lots of articles about how naked I got, so having Lena [Dunham] talking me through that was really important. It was the same working with Sam [Taylor-Johnson] on Back to Black, because that story was told through a very specific female lens.

With the arrival of intimacy coordinators, do you feel like you have more agency?
Yeah, definitely – I'm fluent in intimacy coordinator language! There are people now starting out on Industry who are as young as me when I joined and I can say, "If you don't know what you want to ask for, I'm more than happy to talk to you about what helped me." It's always good to help others navigate that process. LAURA RUTKOWSKI

Jessica Gunning

NOMINATED FOR SUPPORTING ACTRESS, BABY REINDEER

It's been a little over a year since drama Baby Reindeer was released on Netflix, and actor Jessica Gunning has been riding the wave of its success. She's picked up an Emmy, Golden Globe, SAG Award and Royal Television Society Programme Award for her portrayal of stalker Martha Scott. Now she could be adding a Bafta to that already groaning shelf.

Gunning is smiley and giggly and uses the word "special" a lot to describe her involvement in Baby Reindeer – with good reason. It has been seen by 252 million viewers, making it one of the most-watched Netflix shows of all time. It came out of nowhere, based on Richard Gadd's one-man play of the same name from 2019, and then suddenly, it was all anyone was talking about.

So, it might seem like Gunning is an overnight success, but she has been working for the better part of 18 years. The 38-year-old from Holmfirth, West Yorkshire, has appeared in David Mitchell and Robert Webb's Back, the film Pride and Stephen Merchant's The Outlaws, where she was also in the writers' room.

She used to give talks at her drama school, Rose Bruford College in London, to third-year students. "I'd tell them, 'Think about the actors who you admire – they didn't necessarily graduate from drama school and work straight away. The things you love them in are probably things they did in their 30s or 40s. These things do take time.'

"It took 17 years for the part of Martha to come around," she continues. It's one of several answers she starts with, "I've said previously," which is understandable, as she's been interviewed about Baby Reindeer a lot. Although not all coverage since its release has been positive. Fiona Harvey, who claims to be the real Martha, has filed a $170 million defamation lawsuit against Netflix in the US, with a court date set for 6 May.

Did Gunning ever consider "the real Martha"? "As soon as I read the scripts, I was just playing a character. I never would have wanted to play Martha as a villain or a baddie, because I never saw her in that way. She's multi-faceted and nuanced."

'I never wanted to play Martha as a villain – she's nuanced'

Her next project is Simon Farnaby's film adaptation of Enid Blyton's The Magic Faraway Tree, where she'll be working with fellow Bafta nominee Nicola Coughlan, plus Andrew Garfield and Claire Foy. Gunning's rising star power is impossible to ignore, despite her desire to keep a low profile.

"I'm not on social media and I've never felt the pressure to join. I don't see myself as a celebrity and I don't think actors need to be in the public eye. Sometimes you can just do your job and that's that. I think there is a fascination with actors – I have it, too – where people want to know more about them. Somebody said the other day that people look at how many followers actors have in order to give them parts. I'm buggered if that's true!"

It feels unlikely that Gunning's reluctance to join Instagram will impact her career trajectory – her life has undeniably changed for ever. "It's been amazing to be a part of something that's felt really special." There's that word again, and perhaps it's really the only one that will do. LAURA RUTKOWSKI

Katherine Parkinson

NOMINATED FOR SUPPORTING ACTRESS, RIVALS

Katherine Parkinson's breakout role was in The IT Crowd, which earned her two Bafta nominations and one win. She's gone on to appear in Humans, Inside No.9 and Defending the Guilty. She's nominated for her performance as the lovelorn wife turned adorable adulteress, Lizzie, in Rivals.

You won a Bafta for Female Comedy Performance in 2014. How was that night?
I was pregnant and I had a cold so my abiding memory is feeling awful. Not that being pregnant isn't great, but it meant I couldn't have any medication for the cold. And it was bittersweet anyway because The IT Crowd was ending. Whereas we start filming the second series of Rivals the day after the Baftas – so that feels like riding a wave.

Lizzie is described as the moral heart of the show, yet she embarks on an affair...
Good people have affairs, too. And in her case, her husband is an absolute penis.

Rivals* looks like fun to make. Is it?
It is, and I have just read the first episode of the new series and it's terrific. Dominic Treadwell-Collins [Rivals' showrunner] leads with such integrity, joy and class and he sets the tone. The show is about how the TV world doesn't have to be full of arseholes – we're in a fun industry that's supposed to bring joy to people – Dominic is one of the few who really lives that.

According to research, only 14 per cent of primetime drama is written by women. Do you notice a difference between a script written by a man and one written by a woman?
As an actor, I have found that working with Laura Wade [a co-writer on Rivals] – who is the same age as me and the same gender – there is often a shared sensibility that can be lacking in some scripts written by some men. That we don't have equal representation in the people telling stories doesn't make sense to me.

How have you avoided being typecast?
I'd love to say it's planned, but no. People with a comedic bent are often drawn to extreme characters who vividly differ from each other. The times I've struggled were playing an everyday person, because I don't think I know how to be normal in real life. GARETH McLEAN

Lolly Adefope

NOMINATED FOR FEMALE PERFORMANCE IN A COMEDY, THE FRANCHISE

Best known for playing Kitty, the sweet, daft (and dead) aristocrat in Ghosts, Lolly Adefope cut her teeth as a stand-up comic. She has also appeared in Emerald Fennell's Saltburn and most recently The Franchise, Armando Iannucci's behind-the-scenes satire of superhero movies.

How does it feel to be nominated for a Bafta? It's undeniably amazing recognition, but what is really meaningful for me is that the show I'm nominated for was cancelled in January. The Franchise was such a fun show to make, we all got on so well and became kind of a family, and we didn't get to make it again. So this, for me, is just a very nice way to finish that story.

Have you changed at all as you've become more successful?
I have had success, for sure, but I don't know if I feel successful. I feel grateful to be an actor who works a lot, to have an element of choice in the things I do, and to feel aligned with the characters I play.

Growing up, what was the first thing you saw on TV that made you feel seen?
Little Miss Jocelyn. Except for her [Jocelyn Jee Esien], there wasn't much black female character comedy out there. She was definitely a pioneer. It means so much to see people who look like you, doing what you want to do. But I also had role models who didn't necessarily look like me. As a teenager, I watched and listened to so much comedy – Catherine Tate, Alan Partridge – because I think that's how you hone it. Take in as much as possible and work out what you like. GARETH McLEAN

Nicola Coughlan

NOMINATED FOR FEMALE PERFORMANCE IN A COMEDY, BIG MOOD

Derry Girls has won several Baftas and Bridgerton has received nominations, but as brilliant as Nicola Coughlan is in both, she's surprisingly never received an individual Bafta nod – until now, for Big Mood.

The dark comedy is about the friendship between Eddie (It's a Sin's Lydia West) and Maggie (Coughlan), who has bipolar disorder, and it's essentially been in the works for 16 years – ever since Coughlan and writer Camilla Whitehill met at the Oxford School of Drama.

"Camilla made me laugh so much. I remember seeing her first short play, and in that moment, I knew she was going to be famous," Coughlan says. "I was never asked to be in Big Mood. It was more, 'I'm making a show, and you're gonna be in it.' I was like, 'Right, OK!' It was never a doubt."

When Coughlan, 38, left drama school, she remembers roles for women being mainly "someone's girlfriend, or the woman who sits behind a desk". She found it difficult to find work in her 20s and moved to London three times in four years, each time returning to her parents in Galway, Ireland. "There were definitely lots of moments where I thought, 'Should I quit?' It's a difficult industry to break into and I didn't have any connections or money. It didn't seem sensible for me to keep going, but I got Derry Girls at 30, which was an amazing turning point."

Some of the Bridgerton shoot crossed over with Big Mood, with Coughlan filming one during the week and the other at the weekend. It took her two hours to get ready for Bridgerton, whereas no wigs or make-up were required to play Maggie. "We didn't want to present mental illness in a pretty way. In the scenes where Maggie's meant to look terrible, I said, 'I have to look terrible. If she has dirty hair, my hair will be dirty.'"

She adds, "I think we're getting braver with what's represented on television. There's certain things that have broken out, like Baby Reindeer and Adolescence, but it also strikes me that they centre on male experiences. I think men are still given a lot more chances in this industry than women. What would we have done without Michaela Coel [Chewing Gum, I May Destroy You] or Phoebe Waller-Bridge [Fleabag]?

"I hope there's more roles like Maggie for women to play. Maggie's not particularly nice or sweet, she's a bit abrasive. Viewers and reviewers massively struggle when a female character is unlikeable. Let them be terrible! I'd love to play a villain – a very unlikeable woman that has no redeeming qualities." LAURA RUTKOWSKI

Kate O'Flynn

NOMINATED FOR FEMALE PERFORMANCE IN A COMEDY, EVERYONE ELSE BURNS

Born in Bury and trained at Rada, Kate O'Flynn's television credits range from Death in Paradise to Brexit: the Uncivil War by James Graham. She has also appeared in three Mike Leigh films: Happy-Go-Lucky, Peterloo and Mr Turner.

How does it feel to be nominated?
I'm so thrilled! I got a call from my agent saying, "Have you heard the news?" And I was like, "What news?" It's been a whirlwind.

Has your agent's phone been ringing off the hook since?
Honestly, I have had such a quiet year of nothing. Then, I suddenly got a job in America. Then, I heard about this. It's like, you wait ages on a bus and then two come at once. I'll probably be at the next bus stop for a while, too. But I'll enjoy the journey in between.

Your character, Fiona, in Everyone Else Burns is a wife, a mother, a puritanical Christian and potentially an apostate. Tell us about her.
Fiona's been a subservient, repressed wife (to Simon Bird's David) for almost 20 years, so when she starts questioning the Order that's ruled her life there's a lot simmering underneath for her. And in that world, the stakes are really high. It's literally: are you going to burn in hell or are you going to be saved? That makes for a great magnifying glass for what are universal issues – and it's all done with a lightness of touch and sharp, quick writing.

Do awards matter?
It's lovely to get the nomination, and they're lovely to win, but they don't matter. Every actor wants it, and we'd be lying if we said we didn't, but it's not why we do it. Days like today are a cherry on top. I get to wear a fabulous gown, be made up, and chat to you. All of this is a gift. GARETH McLEAN

Sophie Willan

NOMINATED FOR FEMALE PERFORMANCE IN A COMEDY, ALMA'S NOT NORMAL

"Having a Bafta is like having a penis," says Sophie Willan. "It gets you treated like most average males." She pauses for a moment, employing the comic timing that she wields like a weapon in Alma's Not Normal. Then, deadpan, she declares, "So that's nice."

Willan is already well endowed. If she converts this year's nomination into a win, it'll be her third Bafta, to add to best comedy writer (2021) for the show's pilot, and 2022's best female comedy performance. The second series is also nominated for best scripted comedy, so Willan could be waking up on Monday with quite the package. "I'll be too powerful," she says. "They'll have to kill me. A woman with four knobs? Too dangerous."

A woman like Willan is certainly rare in television – but not, as she herself points out, that rare. "I'm an exec producer, writer and actress and, actually, in that respect, I'm no different from Phoebe Waller-Bridge. I just have bigger boobs and a northern accent." Willan again pauses for effect. "Have you noticed that posh women always have tiny breasts?" It's the accent more than the boobs that mark Willan out in an industry where less than ten per cent of workers are working class.

Much is made of the semi-autobiographical nature of Alma's Not Normal – Willan's mother's heroin addiction meant she spent some of her childhood in care, some in the care of her grandma – so was writing it cathartic? Nope. In fact, there was "many-a-time when I cried on the kitchen floor going 'I don't know what I'm doing. I can't do this.'"

She says she loves editing a script once she's actually got it written; it's the writing that she finds challenging. "It's horrific… like six months of staring into the abyss. When I was writing Alma, I was in Prestwich, smoking 20 fags and going for a chippy tea. The amount I smoked writing the second series, I'm sure I gave myself pulmonary disease."

As a cup of hot water and fresh ginger arrives for the 37-year-old, she tells me that she's signed a book deal, "a short-story-manifesto-memoir-y thing", and she's actually, almost content. Success suits her. "When you've had childhood trauma, you spend a lot of your 20s and into your 30s trying to make sense of it. Now I feel like I've got to a point where I've worked through most of it. I'm really happy with where my life is at. I've bought a house, I've moved to London, I'm securely attached, financially secure and things are going well. I've written a show about it, but I don't feel I'm carrying a bag of trauma with me."

Just as well. How else would she carry all her Baftas? GM

‘I’m no different from Phoebe Waller-Bridge – I just have bigger boobs and a northern accent’

Anjana Vasan

NOMINATED FOR FEMALE PERFORMANCE IN A COMEDY, WE ARE LADY PARTS

Indian-Singaporean actor Anjana Vasan, 38, plays lead guitarist Amina in We Are Lady Parts, about an all-female Muslim punk band. She’s also starred in Black Mirror, the film Wicked Little Letters and as Stella in a stage production of A Streetcar Named Desire, for which she won an Olivier Award.

How does it feel to be nominated for a Bafta?
We Are Lady Parts is a very special show and it changed my life. It was the first time I played a lead woman of colour on TV – but it’s not just me, it’s five women of colour leading the show, and that’s rare. I feel like TV is often catching up with real life. We Are Lady Parts isn’t the first time punk music has been represented, it’s not the first time women of colour have done punk, but there’s real power in seeing it on screen.

How important is it for the industry to trust diverse voices and female writers like Nida Manzoor (the creator, writer and director of We Are Lady Parts)?
People can be quite scared to make something different, but audiences aren’t scared. The biggest opportunities I’ve ever had have come from women. Bisha K Ali co-wrote the Black Mirror episode Demon 79 with Charlie Brooker, and her presence was a big part of how I came into the picture, and the same with Nida.

Any news on We Are Lady Parts series three?
I will ask Nida when I see her at the Baftas! I message her all the time – the WhatsApp group is still going very strong. The best thing that has come from the show is I found so many sisters that I never had growing up.

‘ADHD IS NOT A FAD’

After changing the conversation on autism, Chris Packham turns to ADHD and dyslexia

FOR NEARLY TWO years, on an almost daily basis, strangers have politely stopped me to say, “Thank you”. The focus of their quiet but almost boundless gratitude was, and still is, the two-part BBC2 series Inside Our Minds from 2023, which gave viewers a greater insight into the daily lived experience of autistic people. Whether I’m on the train or in an art gallery, I’m told by everyone from teenagers to grandparents that the series gave them a better understanding of themselves, or one of their relatives or colleagues, to the extent that it precipitated diagnoses, positive changes in their lives or a better societal understanding of the condition.

Healthcare professionals frequently assert that the programmes have become an invaluable asset in their work because they articulate, in real terms, things that otherwise have been so difficult to see, describe or feel.

So, although we still struggle to be heard and understood, I think the programmes made a difference to the autistic community. Applying the format – in which contributors work with film-makers, designers and animators to bring their internal worlds to life – to other neurodiverse conditions was the logical next step.

AS SOMEONE WHO once hid my autistic traits and struggled with my condition in my youth before being diagnosed in my 40s, it’s perhaps easier to see that progress is being made communicating our thoughts and needs to society, but I fear that same ongoing success has not been forthcoming for ADHD and dyslexic communities.

Indeed, there has been some vile and misplaced prejudice prominently voiced recently about ADHD – suggesting that it’s a fad and has been wrongly or overdiagnosed. That very urgently needs countering in this time of divisive culture wars, with assaults on inclusivity and diversity.

My stepdaughter Megan is dyslexic, so I have experience of the positive and challenging impacts of that, and thinking about ADHD is a bit like holding a misty mirror up to myself, because there is often an overlap between the traits of autism and ADHD – “double-diagnosis” is far from uncommon, so I was very keen to learn more and do what I could to help.

Except that in this series, as with our last, it wasn’t just me. I was part of an exceptional team, many of whom are neurodiverse themselves. They, our four new contributors and their friends and families, will, I’m sure, make the new series of Inside Our Minds a success, allowing a more empathetic understanding of those remarkable people who struggle and succeed with these simply different but equally wonderful minds.

Inside Our Dyslexic Minds is next Monday on BBC2

‘There has been vile prejudice recently voiced about ADHD… that very urgently needs countering’

PROF AMANDA KIRBY CHAIR, THE ADHD FOUNDATION

What exactly is ADHD and how does it present itself in the brain?
Attention Deficit Hyperactivity Disorder is a misnomer: it's a surfeit of attention, not a deficit. You may have difficulty in focusing and maintaining interest in things that don't interest you, while hyper-focusing on things that do. Switching from one task to another can be hard. People talk about ADHD as "time-blindness": you might not understand how long something's going to take, so you prevaricate.

What's the biggest misconception about ADHD?
That we overdiagnose it. We've actually been underdiagnosing. Until relatively recently, it was thought to be a childhood condition, blamed on bad parenting. But it's not something that disappears in adulthood.

We're now catching up with undiagnosed adults, particularly women and other marginalised groups.

In your experience, how do people respond when they learn they have ADHD later in life?
With mixed feelings of joy and disappointment. And sometimes grief: "What did I lose in not knowing earlier?" But putting in strategies to help can bring relief by acknowledging things were hard, but there is now a reason.

> 'No doctor is going to just diagnose you randomly'

Some people are still sceptical – Reform UK leader Nigel Farage recently said diagnosis was creating a "class of victims".
Talking of people with ADHD as "victims" is damaging and misinformed, and dismisses the real challenges faced by individuals and their families. No doctor is going to just diagnose you randomly – it's a rigorous assessment process.

ADHD HENRY, 23, TOUR GUIDE

You were diagnosed with ADHD as a teenager – what effect did that have on you?
Before being diagnosed, I was close to dropping out of my A-levels. I thought I was a bit stupid. The diagnosis gave me an understanding that I'm not broken. But it was so intense that I never really had a chance to digest it at the time.

Did taking part in this programme help your family understand you?
After getting my diagnosis, it was Project Henry: let's get Henry through school and university. I'm so grateful for their support, but what they didn't comprehend was that ADHD wasn't just about academia for me, it was omnipotent.

Making my film was cathartic – my family have a deeper understanding now. I feel I can tell them when I need a bit of space, or ask them to explain something to me differently. There's less of the frustration that led us to butt heads. It's given me a new language.

How would you describe your ADHD?
My ADHD feels like a tombola: my body will spit a random ball out and it feels unfeasible to reach for anything. Tombola Man's the one picking them out, but he's not really picking the balls that matter. It'll be stuff that I don't need to think about, projects that I want to start but haven't – and then I haven't eaten…

How would you like viewers to respond to the programme?
I hope people will feel less afraid and alone, because there are many of us out there. What Chris Packham has done in talking about ADHD, taking the stigma away, is just beautiful.

PROF JOEL TALCOTT, NEUROSCIENTIST

What's unique about dyslexia?
Dyslexia is a hereditary condition rooted in neurobiology. It emerges from underlying difficulties in cognitive ability, language processing, visual spatial processing and working memory. It's not just about difficulty in reading – in evolutionary terms, humans haven't been reading for that long – it can also include remembering simple verbal navigation instructions.

What do you hope programmes like this will achieve?
In certain political circles, we seem to be questioning whether these things exist. Establishing them as real can help us view them more holistically, as individual experiences with their own strengths and weaknesses rather than just limitations.

DYSLEXIA SUIKI, 35, SECONDARY SCHOOL COUNSELLOR

When were you diagnosed and what has it meant to you?
In lockdown in 2020 I started a Masters degree in psychotherapy. I had this inkling that I might be dyslexic: I was a bit clumsy with my words, my spelling and my memory, and I had low self-esteem. I got an assessment from the university's dedicated disability team, and it brought a lot of clarity.

How has making the programme affected your relationship with your family?
They've accepted that some things aren't straightforward for me. They understand that if I'm responding in a way that seems harsh, it's just because it can be tricky for me to communicate. Generally, I'm more assured to say it's because I'm dyslexic.

What positive impact does your dyslexia have in your daily life?
When I'm counselling someone, I often see a picture when they talk about their feelings. Describing these metaphorical pictures to them can then help us talk about their emotions and implement a plan.

What do you hope viewers will take away from the programme?
That dyslexia's not something you have to hide. If you have a loved one, or someone you work with, who's dyslexic, I hope it gives some insight into what they're going through – and that you can talk about it confidently.

DR JAVID ABDELMONEIM IS AN MSF DOCTOR WHO WORKED IN GAZA.

"At Nasser hospital in Gaza, we provide trauma surgery and burns care to patients. One Saturday early in my time there, we received hundreds of injured, as well as people who had been killed, following a missile strike.

It was chaos. Our team went to the emergency room. One of the injured was a three-year-old girl. She was breathing and looking at me – so she must be okay, I thought. But as I rolled down her dressing, I found that her entire left thigh was open to the bone.

Seconds later, the doors crashed open. Four to five injured people were brought in, most of them first-aid responders. Among them was a boy who wasn't breathing, so we tried to revive him, but the nurse looked at us and asked: 'Why are we responding to him if he can't breathe? We have to save other lives.' No one had the heart to call it and move on to the next person. He was someone's child. But we had to move on to the next, and then the next, and this continued for another four and a half hours.

In the emergency room, there was blood all over the floor. I had to kneel to see the patients, who were sprawled everywhere because there were no beds left. At the same time, more and more patients were coming in.

EVERY SECOND COUNTS

I've responded to mass casualty incidents around the world, and I know that whether we're working in Gaza, Ukraine or one of the many other conflicts going on globally, it's vital that we act fast.

As an MSF doctor, I may need to stop life-threatening bleeding, treat gunshot wounds or care for bomb blast victims, all in a matter of minutes.

That's why at MSF we don't waste any time. We're working in conflict zones around the world, making sure we're using every possible second to treat every patient we can reach. Your support means that we can be there, ready to act when there are lives to be saved.

Because with trauma care, every second counts. You can buy us vital time."

TRAUMA CARE IN CONFLICT ZONES

Around the world, MSF teams work in conflict zones where hospitals and other health facilities are not functioning or are difficult or dangerous to reach. When people are wounded and in urgent need of medical treatment, accessing timely trauma care can be a matter of life or death. Help our teams provide the emergency medical care that wounded people desperately need.

Every second counts. You can buy us vital time.

Please donate today to support our emergency medical teams.

UP IN FLAMES
The fire engulfing Valley Parade's wooden grandstand claimed 56 lives

Unforgotten: the Bradford City Fire
Sunday 9.00pm BBC2

FORTY YEARS OF HURT

It was one of football's worst tragedies, as a survivor of the Bradford City fire remembers

It wasn't unusual for smoke to drift over the stands at Bradford City's ground – this was the mid-1980s, when people would smoke at football matches – so, on 11 May 1985, Matthew Wildman ignored the plumes rising from the stands and concentrated on the match against Lincoln City, which was approaching the end of the first half. It was the final game of the season, and the team had already won the league, so the crowd was in a celebratory mood. "We were all swept up in the excitement," remembers Wildman, who was 17 at the time. But he and his friends couldn't ignore the smoke for long.

The fire – believed to have been started by a discarded match or cigarette – engulfed the wooden stand at the club's Valley Parade ground within minutes. It killed 56 people and injured at least 265 others. Wildman was the last person to make it out of the stand and survive.

Alongside first responders, other survivors and bereaved families, Wildman is interviewed in the new BBC2 documentary Unforgotten: the Bradford City Fire. The tragedy led to legislation banning new wooden grandstands at UK sports venues, but it has since largely faded from collective memory.

40 years on, Wildman remembers being near the back of the stand and headed towards the rear corridor, which was already full of people trying to get to the exits. The turnstiles, it would emerge, were locked.

Having been diagnosed with arthritis as a child, he struggled to pick up his crutches, crammed against bigger, older men. "The corridor was getting full of thick black smoke. And the crowd started to panic," he says.

His friends were carried along the corridor by the surge of people, but Wildman was pushed to the floor, with two men falling on top of him. "I would have stayed there if it hadn't been for a man tripping over me, hearing me shout, and digging me out." He helped him get away from the corridor and back to the stand.

The only way out was via the pitch, which was over a wall, with a drop on the other side. "I looked at my hands, the skin was bubbling up.

> 'The corridor was full of smoke, the crowd started to panic'

At that point, I knew there was only one direction to go, and that was over the wall." A man managed to catch him and drag him out.

Wildman was in hospital for around two months, with burns to 50 per cent of his body. In the first few weeks, he had multiple operations, including extensive skin grafts. Plastic surgeons from around the country came to help patients. "It was a case of being positive, seeing the small gains every day. My focus had to be on getting better."

It was his positive outlook and desire to move forward that helped Wildman cope. He remained in Bradford, setting up a computer business, and now lives in a village just outside the city. "Bradford has had its troubles, but things like this bring out the good in everyone, and everyone came together. It would be nice to think that spirit carries on and, in some cases, it absolutely does."

It has given him a sense of purpose: Wildman still raises money for the Plastic Surgery and Burns Research Unit at the University of Bradford, and attends conferences to show how his recovery is going, decades on. "The advancements made in burns treatments, which started with all the extra work that needed to be done at that time, were shared around the world and they continue to help develop new techniques."

With his love of the game undiminished, he went back to the stadium, where a new stand was built. "We were apprehensive when we did return," he says. "Looking over towards the stand was difficult, but it became easier over time." The 1985 Popplewell inquiry ruled that the fire had been an accident, but found the club had been warned of the risk (a later case, brought against the club and council for negligence, found both responsible).

For Wildman, there has always been a sense of overwhelming gratitude, rather than survivors' guilt. "There were 56 people who lost their lives, and I just feel so lucky that it wasn't 57." When he does think about it, he says, from the two men who saved him, to the medics and volunteers who cared for him, "it's with pure amazement and being thankful".

RICHARD GADD

TV100

Every year, RadioTimes.com celebrates the most influential figures in television, on screen and behind the scenes, with its TV 100 list selected by the panel of TV executives and RadioTimes.com staff. Previous winners include Ncuti Gatwa, Russell T Davies, Michaela Coel and last year's ensemble champions, the team behind Mr Bates vs the Post Office. This year, Richard Gadd tops the list following his global success with Baby Reindeer. Overleaf are the others who made the top ten. For the full list, visit RadioTimes.com/TV100.

1 RICHARD GADD

Richard Gadd bared his soul on Netflix drama Baby Reindeer (right) and was propelled to stardom across the globe, winning a bounty of prestigious awards. With a new BBC series on the horizon, the future is looking very bright for Gadd.

STALKING, STAND-UP COMEDY and sexual assault; it's not an obvious recipe for an international television sensation, yet that is exactly what Baby Reindeer was. "The world went crazy for it," says Richard Gadd of his ground-breaking 2024 Netflix series. "I thought it would be like an indie film, successful but perhaps as an art-house cult series." Instead, his life was irreparably changed. "Nothing can prepare you for becoming an obsession with the public and the papers and the internet," he says. "For that feeling of suddenly being seen."

We're in the east end of Glasgow, the day after Baby Reindeer is nominated for eight Baftas. These are not the show's first accolades. At last year's Emmys, Gadd won three awards – for acting, writing and executive producing the series. Alongside him Jessica Gunning, who plays Martha, the woman who stalks Gadd's character Donny Dunn, won best supporting actress and is also now nominated for a Bafta.

Today we're marking another public acknowledgement of his remarkable rise: the actor, writer, comedian and now showrunner is number one on RadioTimes.com's TV 100 (with Gunning ranked second), a list decided by leading figures in the television industry. "I've always felt outside of the industry in a lot of ways, always felt like I came up in a weird way," says the 36-year-old, who has broken off from filming his new BBC1 series Half Man in Glasgow to talk to RT. "I've never really felt a part of it until now."

Gadd was brought up, with his older sister Katie, in the Fife village of Wormit on the southern side of the Firth of Tay, opposite Dundee. Gadd's father, the microbiologist Geoffrey Gadd OBE, is a professor at Dundee University. His mother Julia worked in schools and had a fear of flying, so the family would holiday in North Yorkshire. He recalls fish and chips in Whitby and walks on the moors. It sounds a happy youth, but he says it wasn't entirely so. "I think every childhood has its struggles," he explains. "It wasn't plain sailing. Every child has problems, and even adolescence, coming of age, is a challenge in and of itself, trying to figure out the world."

In a pattern that would repeat through his life, Gadd buried himself in creativity. "I spent my whole childhood writing," he says. "I was always attempting to write comedy, trying to act and just doing silly stuff that would make my friends laugh." He excelled in drama lessons at his secondary school in St Andrews, playing the lead in what he calls "the Scottish play" and became "completely obsessed" with The Office. "I was such a Ricky Gervais fanboy. I said to myself, 'This is what I want to do, one day, to be in a show that I've written.'"

After studying English literature and theatre studies at Glasgow University, Gadd went south to London, where he struggled to make it on the stand-up circuit. This is the testing period of near breakdown that Gadd mined in Baby Reindeer. "I've had real low points in my life," he observes. "Numerous times where I thought, 'God, maybe I should just get a job, get some stability in my life.' I would call my parents and say, 'I can't do this any more.' They would tell me, 'No, keep going.' Which is remarkable, because it's not easy to know your son's living in London, impoverished and working in a bar."

What would Gadd say if I gave him a telephone and his own 25-year-old self was on the other end of the line? "Probably: 'It's going to be OK.' Twenty-five was a difficult time for me. It was the aftermath of everything that happened, and I was still reeling. It felt like I was in a darkness that would never lift."

Lest the darkness should settle again, Gadd continues to lose himself in writing. "You'll never see me at the private members bars or parties. I just work really hard all the time; I'm constantly doing stuff and there are exciting things happening right now that I'm working on."

HE NEED ONLY look at the effect of Baby Reindeer to see his labours have been worthwhile. "It was number one in Saudi Arabia and Lebanon, places where it broke cultural boundaries. That is the power of Netflix; the power of television. It's a hugely powerful medium, the most watched art form. Netflix now has a route to change lives around the world."

And while his early exposure to Ricky Gervais on BBC2, and plotting his own future television career, has left Gadd with an abiding respect for the Corporation – "I love the BBC," he says, as near to punchy as he will get, "I think it's hugely important as an independent voice in media, a fantastic institution and I'll always want to work with the BBC" – Gadd has a three-year writing deal with Netflix and an understandable affection for a company that, arguably, threw him a lifeline when they gambled on his unlikely project. "They took a chance on a story that was extreme," he admits. "There were times where I'd think, 'I can't believe I'm doing this' and worry they would realise it was such a risk and suddenly pull the plug. But they stuck by it, and I'll always be grateful for that."

NOT ALL THE attention Gadd has received for Baby Reindeer has been positive. The series was a fictionalised version of Gadd's earlier life, devised from two previous stand-up shows, but it was broadcast by Netflix with the tag: "This is a true story". Some viewers went online and claimed that a Scottish woman called Fiona Harvey was the real Martha. Harvey has since brought a $170 million defamation lawsuit against Netflix in the US. The case comes to court in California this May when, quite possibly, Gadd will be portrayed in an unfavourable light by Harvey's legal team. How is he preparing for a moment when his motives and actions will be publicly questioned?

"There are limits to what I can say," he observes, perhaps a little dazzled by the prospect. "It's such new ground for me I'm not sure you know how to prepare, I don't know how you'd want to be prepared." So, Gadd is losing himself in his new BBC series, which co-stars former Billy Elliot ▷

◁ star Jamie Bell. The two play half-brothers whose lives entangle to dramatic effect. “There’s a lot of themes like isolation and loneliness and shared trauma and generational trauma in Baby Reindeer. It’s similar with Half Man – it borrows from a world of broken people.

“It’s 24/7 pretty obsessive,” he adds. “I’m writing, acting and producing at the same time. I work pretty much day and night; I only pause to sleep. Maybe it’s not healthy but no matter how it’s received, whether people like it or not, well, I gave it everything.”

Gadd has a vulnerable, almost boylike, demeanour. Pale and quietly spoken, his wispy black beard and tufted black hair make him appear near translucent and I find myself wondering about the welfare of a man I have never met before but who says things to me like “I grappled with inner demons, the likes of which I never thought I would”.

It’s worth remembering that Gadd has been damaged; when Donny is repeatedly sexual assaulted by an older man in the entertainment industry in Baby Reindeer, it’s a version of something that actually happened. Does he look after himself, attend to his own psychological needs? “I sometimes put the work first,” he admits. “Self-care isn’t something that happens overnight, but I definitely look after myself a lot better than I used to. I lost a third of my body weight to do Baby Reindeer. I’m getting slowly better, maybe, but things are all-consuming.”

Now he has met with such success, is he less likely to be overwhelmed by memories of what happened to him? “Probably not,” he says. “And I would be worried about acting like success is a solution to any internal struggle or traumatic experience. I can’t say that fame provided any solutions for it at all. Because now so many people know about what happened, it almost brings a new set of neuroses around it.” Better get back to work then.

2 JESSICA GUNNING

Her disturbing performance as stalker Martha in Baby Reindeer captivated viewers, and while British audiences will have been familiar with her for years from hit series like The Outlaws on BBC1, it was about time she got the global recognition she deserves.

3 AMBIKA MOD

Ambika Mod truly ascended to star status with her hilarious and heartfelt performance as Emma Morley in Netflix’s life-affirming adaptation of the David Nicholls novel One Day. Once again lighting up the screen in Disney+’s crime drama The Stolen Girl, Mod has shown she is adept at both comedy and pathos – there seems no limit to her arsenal.

4 LEO WOODALL

Having made his mark in the second season of The White Lotus on Sky, Leo Woodall completed his transformation into leading man material as lovable bad boy Dexter Mayhew in One Day, then as maths genius Edward Brooks in Apple TV+’s Prime Target. This was further cemented in the film Bridget Jones: Mad about the Boy, with Hollywood now surely beckoning.

5 DOMINIC TREADWELL-COLLINS

If you didn’t watch Rivals in 2024, your year must have been seriously lacklustre. The bonkbuster of the year was brought to life by former EastEnders superhero Dominic Treadwell-Collins, whose passion for the soap genre was evident throughout the adaptation. Jilly Cooper? On Disney+? Treadwell-Collins proved that anything is possible.

6 RUTH JONES AND JAMES CORDEN

These writer/performers are quite used to breaking records, and they did it again in 2024 with the return of Gavin & Stacey for one last outing on BBC1. We finally saw a decisive ending for beloved Nessa and Smithy – with Ruth Jones and James Corden tying up the story with a glorious bow.

7 CLAUDIA WINKLEMAN

The Traitors (BBC1) simply wouldn’t be the same without Claudia Winkleman’s offbeat humour. Moments like contestant Alexander’s singing just wouldn’t go viral if Winkleman wasn’t fighting back her giggles. The outfits alone make her a worthy candidate for this power list.

8 CHRIS McCAUSLAND

Chris McCausland proved that anything is possible with a positive mindset when he won Strictly Come Dancing in 2024. The comedian, who is blind, had a wonderful partnership with Dianne Buswell, and challenged what it is to be a dancer. He is an inspiration to many.

9 MARISA ABELA

The third series of Industry on BBC1 was one of the greatest runs of television drama in recent memory and Marisa Abela was at the heart of it, bringing edge, vulnerability and brittle emotion to her turn as troubled banker Yasmin Kara-Hanani. See p13

10 DANNY DYER

Rivals largely focused on the power struggles at the top of an independent TV network, but it was the love story between Freddie and Lizzie that captured viewers’ hearts. Dyer became a heart-throb overnight, as the world discovered the charm Brits have known and loved for years.

IT'S GOOD TO TALK

It may be fascinating to follow people in therapy, but why do they put themselves on TV?

IN THERAPY Nicole features in the first edition of Change Your Mind, Change Your Life

All the time I was growing up, therapy was something rich Americans did or, more specifically, Woody Allen – who for many years channelled his real-life time spent on the couch into fertile film fodder, to be treated as something comedic, self-indulgent and ultimately futile.

Even when it was taken more seriously on TV, as a means of tapping into a character's thoughts like those of Tony Soprano in his mournful sessions with Dr Melfi, the understanding was that this was fictional entertainment; the idea of actual people laying themselves this bare for our viewing delight would have been unfathomable until reality TV altered our expectations of openness on screen. But now it seems everybody wants to talk, even if we Brits, with our slightly loose upper lips, still have nothing on our expressive Stateside counterparts.

For more proof if needed of Ricky Gervais's maxim that "people now get famous living their life like an open wound", look no further than Couples Therapy (iPlayer), which since 2019 has seen real-life patients take their problems into the New York office of the calm, compassionate Dr Orna Guralnik. Season four includes Molly and Josh arguing about doing the dishes. Molly: "I don't like to leave them, he says he'll take care of it." Josh: "I did them last night and every night for the last 20 years." I'm not a professional, but something tells me this isn't about the dishes. Couples Therapy is a global hit, and highly addictive – for reasons both noble (cheering at a communication breakthrough for a pair who have struggled for years) and slightly ignoble (the age-old delight in inspecting other people's washing).

Now the BBC's Wellness Week is the cue for a bunch of leading UK therapists to follow suit and invite the TV cameras into their consulting rooms. Change Your Mind, Change Your Life's first episode follows three people through their initial sessions: Nicole gets anxious when driving; Muna can't face being left alone; James is a former athlete who has issues at work. One therapist explains the challenge of dealing with a patient whose "stories and emotions don't match" and there's clearly a Columbo-like satisfaction in digging around in a client's childhood for the root of the problem.

Of course, such a TV format has its limitations. The very act of being filmed in such a sacred setting must raise questions about the motives of both patient and counsellor. Viewers versed in therapy-speak from a thousand podcasts will cringe at phrases like "you didn't have yourself back then, but you do now" as a TV-friendly over-simplification of complex issues. Conversely, those queuing for mental health support on the NHS might wonder at the prohibitive cost of such sessions as these, and the luxury of someone being able to question "What do people think of me?" when so many others are asking "Shall I pay for food or heating?"

SHRINK Tony Soprano (James Gandolfini) and Dr Melfi (Lorraine Bracco) in The Sopranos

> 'It raises questions about the motives of patient and counsellor'

But this is the stuff of people's lives. The terror of Nicole's panic attack is palpable, as is her relief after a few well-chosen therapeutic words. It's clearly good to talk, and no bad thing when we're told one in four people in the UK will experience a mental health problem each year. Meanwhile, much of the distress presented here would appear to boil down to one of three things: social anxiety, status anxiety and loneliness. Or, as one therapist puts it: "The story becomes – I'm a failure, I'm worthless, I'm not lovable."

Quite how we've created a society where so many people tell themselves such a story is probably the stuff of a bigger conversation.

SIMON'S PICK OF THE WEEK

MAJOR HURDLE OVERCOME
Rory McIlroy roars with joy, relief and pride after his play-off victory in the Masters

RORY'S GLORY

Winning the golf grand slam proved Rory McIlroy is great, says Simon Barnes, but there are heights still to scale

When Rory McIlroy won the Masters a few weeks ago, completing a grand slam of the four major tournaments in the course of his career, people declared he had at last become one of the greats. I have no quarrel with that – so long as we remember that there is a category beyond greatness. That's worth bearing in mind as we head into the year's second major tournament, the PGA Championship in North Carolina.

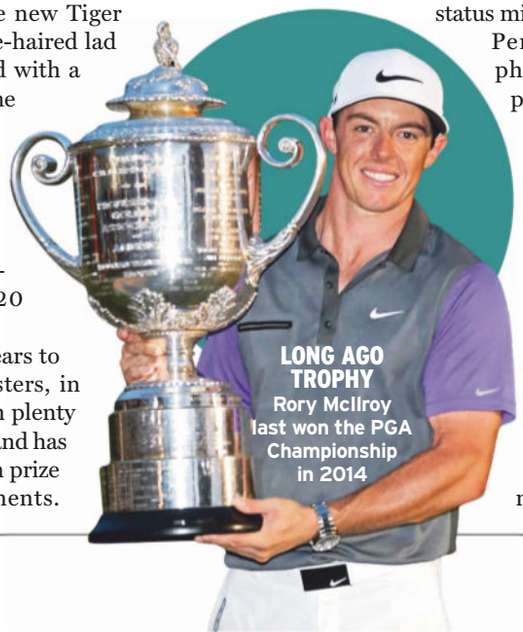

McIlroy starts as favourite, reflecting a belief that his win amid the azaleas at Augusta has liberated him from a decade of doubts and fears. Commentators are always telling us that it's all about who wants it most, but McIlroy has always been the person who wanted it rather too much. Perhaps we'll see Rory Unbound when they tee off at Quail Hollow.

The Northern Irishman is now a great, but Jack Nicklaus and Tiger Woods are at a still higher level. It's a phenomenon you find in every sport. There are the greats, and there are those who have shown themselves to be better still, those Beyond Mere Greatness – the BMGs.

Carl Lewis is a great; Usain Bolt is a BMG. Virginia Wade is a great; Martina Navratilova is a BMG. John Higgins is a great; Ronnie O'Sullivan is a BMG. It works in team sports, too. Graeme Swann is a great; Shane Warne is a BMG. Erling Haaland and Vinicius Junior are greats; Pelé, Maradona and Johan Cruyff are BMGs.

McIlroy has travelled a bumpy road to greatness – and yet it was all so easy at first. He won his first major, the US Open, in 2011, his second, the PGA, the following year, and two more, the PGA and the Open, in 2014. Here was the new Tiger Woods, a stocky, tousle-haired lad from Northern Ireland with a nice way about him. The only other male pros to have collected four majors by the age of 25 were Woods and Nicklaus. "I think Rory has the opportunity to win 15 to 20 majors," Nicklaus said.

But it took him 11 years to win his fifth, the Masters, in April. Sure, he has won plenty of lesser tournaments, and has amassed a fortune from prize money and endorsements.

LONG AGO TROPHY
Rory McIlroy last won the PGA Championship in 2014

> 'McIlroy's enduring trait is to recover from disaster'

However, in golf you measure greatness by majors, and to reach BMG status you must crack into double figures. We shouldn't chastise an athlete for achieving greatness, but on the other hand, we are entitled to wonder if McIlroy's journey towards a still loftier status missed its trajectory.

Perhaps there were physical reasons, the problems of adjusting to a maturing body, a physique changed by necessary gym work. An athlete's body also suffers a great deal of wear and tear, even in a sport as free of physical contact as golf. Or perhaps there was too much analysis of what had once come naturally. McIlroy was a prodigy, the son of a very good amateur golfer he was able to hit 40-yard drives when he was just two years old.

He has limitless talent, but McIlroy's enduring trait is to recover from what looks like career-defining disaster. In 2011, he was leading the Masters by four strokes after three rounds, but shot an eight-over-par 80 in the final round, including a triple-bogey seven on the 10th. However, instead of being scarred for life, he won his first major two months later.

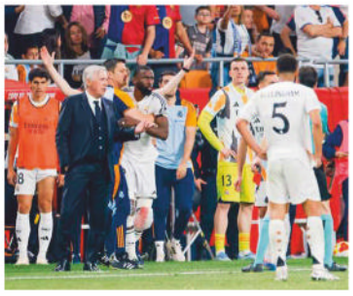

At the US Open last year, he was two up with four to play – and bogeyed three of the last four holes, missing two putts of under four feet. It was a classic choke, and that sort of thing tends to break players – particularly in golf, where there's far more time available for thinking than for action.

But no, McIlroy came back and won the 2025 Masters, not without a touch of the wibbly-wobblies and after a sudden-death play-off against Justin Rose, but certainly ending in triumph and enough tears to create a new water hazard on that funky old course.

He's just turned 36 and BMG status is probably now beyond him – though this is golf, so there remains the possibility of a re-run of those glory years a decade and more back, a second collection of majors garnered at sunset. The romantic in us all would approve of that.

FOOTBALL

La Liga: Barcelona v Real Madrid

Sunday 3.10pm (k/o 3.15pm) Premier Sports 1

A fiery El Clásico is rarely the most apt game for a sleepy Sunday, especially this one. Barça have won all three matches with Real this season, including a turbulent Copa del Rey final. Real's Antonio Rüdiger was sent off for reportedly throwing an ice cube towards the referee, while Jude Bellingham and Lucas Vázquez were also shown red after the final whistle (Bellingham's was later rescinded).

Adding to the tension, Barcelona could clinch the La Liga title today.

EQUESTRIAN

Badminton Horse Trials

Saturday, Sunday ClipMyHorse.tv/ Sunday 1.45pm BBC2

The pinnacle of horse eventing culminates in Badminton, with the cross country and jumping tests this weekend. Last year's runner-up, Lucy Latta and RCA Patron Saint, have withdrawn, though Caroline Powell returns to defend her title aboard Greenacres Special Cavalier (above). Saturday's four-mile cross country is the most physically demanding test of the week, before riders have one final chance to score with precision and agility in the jumping event on Sunday.

MOTORSPORT

MotoGP: Grand Prix of France

Sunday 12.15pm (race 1.00pm) TNT Sports 2/Discovery+

France's 2021 world champion Fabio Quartararo (right) races on his home circuit at Le Mans on the back of his first podium of the season, with an electrifying pole position and second-place finish last time out in Spain. After struggling for truly competitive pace in 2025, he has improved in five consecutive races. Alex Márquez, after a maiden win of the season in Jerez, has overtaken his brother, Marc, to lead the drivers' standings.

CYCLING

From Saturday 12 noon TNT Sports 3/Discovery+

The race continues in Albania until Tuesday, after which it moves into southern Italy, from Alberobello to Lecce – by which time event favourite Primoz Roglic will hope to be in firm contention. Riders will tackle a string of hilly trails this week, including the longest stage of the event covering 226km between Potenza and Naples. Friday's mountainous stage seven will test riders with their first uphill finish after climbing 3,500 gruelling metres from Castel di Sangro to Tagliacozzo.

FOOTBALL

Women's Super League

Saturday 12.15pm (k/o 12.30pm) BBC2/iPlayer, 5 Sports Extra

The curtain falls on another WSL campaign this weekend, but teams have one final opportunity to jostle for position. All 12 teams play in the Saturday lunchtime slot and BBC2 will show the pick of the games, depending on the situation going into the last day. Remaining matches will be shown on Sky Sports or YouTube. The expected hottest clashes include table-topping Chelsea against Liverpool, while Arsenal host Manchester United in a shootout to determine the final order of the chasing pack.

RUGBY LEAGUE

Challenge Cup Semi-finals

Saturday 2.00pm (k/o 2.30pm) BBC1, 2.25pm 5 Sports Extra; Sunday 3.45pm (k/o 4.15pm) BBC2, 4.10pm 5 Sports Extra

Hull Kingston Rovers – who last won the trophy in 1980 – face Catalans Dragons in the first of the semis, while on Sunday defeated 2024 finalists Warrington Wolves play 2023 champions Leigh Leopards. Lachlan Lam (below) and the Leopards may feel they will have the edge, following an 18–14 Super League victory over Wolves less than a month ago.

FOOTBALL

Premier League: Newcastle United v Chelsea

Sun 11.00am (k/o 12 noon) TNT Sports 1/Discovery+/Talksport

The Premier League title may have gone to Liverpool, but the battle for Champions League football next season rages on among a cluster of teams beneath them.

Newcastle, having clinched European football via their Carabao Cup victory, have struck another rich seam of form, while rivals Chelsea stumble towards the finish line. Nicolas Jackson (above) recently broke his 13-game Premier League goal drought.

YOUTH IN REVOLT
The students at Gallaudet University demanded to be heard

DOCUMENTARY

Deaf President Now! ★★★★ 15 Apple TV+ Available Friday

This illuminating documentary recounts the eight days of protests held in 1988 at Gallaudet University in Washington DC, the world's only higher-education institute for students who are deaf or hard of hearing. At the time, in its 124-year history, it had never had a deaf president. The board, made up of almost entirely hearing members, appointed a hearing woman, Elisabeth Zinser, as the university's president, bypassing two qualified deaf candidates – outraging the students. This film uses archive footage and some re-enactment to tell the story of what followed. Coming out shortly after 2025's Deaf Awareness Week (5–11 May), it's an engaging and empowering film that uses ingenious sound design to evoke the deaf experience, while shining a much-deserved light on this little-known but impactful youth movement. LAURA RUTKOWSKI

SCI-FI COMEDY

Murderbot Apple TV+ Episodes 1 and 2 available Friday

A sci-fi comedy that looks to tap into our fears about AI stars Alexander Skarsgard as the titular "Murderbot" – not that anyone else knows this is its name. The android has given itself a new moniker having hacked its programming to achieve autonomy. Now, bursting with free will and only pretending to be bound by its owners' instructions, it is part of a survey team scoping out alien planets. Everyone else is a fallible, emotional human, whereas Murderbot has the face and skin of a human but is a powerful, self-interested machine underneath. The show takes this idea and uses it for what you might call "voiceover comedy": the main character is deceiving everyone, and we get to hear its thoughts via Skarsgard's narration. In the first two episodes, the premise is too contrived for the joke to land. JS

TIME TO CHOOSE
Ralph Fiennes is the cardinal tasked with a major job

DRAMA

Conclave ★★★★ 12

Amazon Prime Video

Available now

With timing that's either genius or utterly morbid, last year's Oscar-winning Vatican drama arrived on Prime barely a week after the death of Pope Francis. Ralph Fiennes is tremendous as Cardinal Lawrence, who is tasked with overseeing the secretive selection process for the new head of the Catholic Church. Corruption and scandal figure into the twisty, exciting narrative as four main papal candidates emerge, including Stanley Tucci's liberal Bellini and John Lithgow's more conservative Tremblay. Beautifully shot and designed, the film pays due respect to the faith while asking deep questions of the Church as an institution. JAMES MOTTRAM

SCI-FI

The Assessment ★★★

Amazon Prime Video

Available 8 May

The black volcanic sands of Tenerife provide a stark backdrop for this austere, ideas-driven sci-fi. Elizabeth Olsen and Himesh Patel play a childless couple put through their paces in a brutal, week-long assessment designed to determine if they would make good parents. A mercurial Alicia Vikander plays their appraiser, whose battery of tests shoots from the mundane to the extreme. Olsen and Vikander are both superb, with the film's low-key action relying entirely on their skilful playing to create impact. Though overlong, this is still a cracking debut for director Fleur Fortune. STEVE MORRISSEY

Harry Wild

Acorn TV Ep 3 available Monday

Those who expect Harry (Jane Seymour) to offer up at least one literary analogy per episode will be disappointed this week. For despite her day at the races ending with a jockey being thrown from their saddle thanks to sabotage, the detective doesn't once reach for a Dick Francis paperback to help her solve the case. You'd have thought it'd be a dead cert, right?

Instead, it's love interest Harry B (Lochlann O'Mearáin) whose advice is sought – his dad owns the horse at the centre of the drama. When it comes to being a decent father, Duncan hasn't been faultless. So, are these grievances clouding Harry B's judgement? DAVID BROWN

Bangers and Cash: under the Bonnet

U Available Thursday

A third season of extra unseen bits from the smash-hit car restoration series kicks off with a project that didn't fit neatly into the show's usual format, because it took three years to complete.

A 1972 VW Fastback is purchased, looking rusty but full of potential. Then expert restorers Jonny May and Mark Juggins get the thing up on their ramp and it's a nightmare: as whole sections fall off at the slightest prodding, it becomes clear that a long process of finding parts and crafting components from scratch must begin. But the results are, of course, well worth all the sweat and tears – eventually. JACK SEALE

Episodes of this over-the-top crime saga have settled into a pattern. Something unbelievably callous or reckless is suddenly perpetrated by one of the two leaders of the Harrigan crime family, old married couple Conrad and Maeve (Pierce Brosnan and Helen Mirren, both fighting bravely to stop their characters becoming utterly ridiculous). Then their fixer Harry (Tom Hardy) has to dive in and clean up. Has anyone who was on the Antwerp trip survived? How will Harrigan nemesis Richie (Geoff Bell) respond to them having murdered his wife? Expect further narrative handbrake turns as the carnage intensifies. JS

COMEDY HORROR

Hysteria!

Paramount+

Episodes 1–3 available Friday

There's a heavy hint of Stranger Things about this comedy horror, although it takes its dabbling in the supernatural rather less seriously. It's 1989, and America's "Satanic Panic" is in full swing. When a popular young sportsman goes missing in a Detroit suburb, the nerdy members of an overlooked death-metal band tap into news reports that the disappearance may have had links to the occult: that's their brand! The laughs and the scares are in tandem as chaos starts to reign. JS

SERIES FINALE

This second series edges away from the dark world of spies and closer into something recognisably Star Wars in these final three episodes. There's a little more comedy, a few more starfighters, a sassy robo... and the final scenes lead directly into the events of 2016 movie Rogue One. But there's a poignancy to it as the shady world of Andor and its leading man (played by Diego Luna) become obsolete in a brighter new era of galactic history. HUW FULLERTON

Gladiator II ★★★★ 15 Paramount+ Available Monday

Director Ridley Scott returns to the arena of one of his most successful films with this satisfying sequel. Paul Mescal plays Lucius, long-lost son to the late Maximus, the enslaved general played by Russell Crowe in the first movie. When a vicious sea attack led by Pedro Pascal's general leaves Lucius's lover dead, the young man vows revenge.

Aided by some first-rate visual effects, Scott creates another indelible portrait of ancient Rome, with some fine battles. Mescal is a solid lead, while Denzel Washington brings real gravitas to the role of a gladiator wrangler. JM

The Secret Lives of Mormon Wives

Disney+

Season 2 available Thursday

This reality show ups the ante in comparison to similar series in the genre: yes, we're following a group of extremely well-groomed women as they gossip about their fragile fantasy lives and slag each other off, but the gang here are "MomTok", a collective of Mormon women in Utah whose approach to marriage and motherhood has made them stars online. The second season has plenty more arguments and scenes where the camera goes all wobbly and then the police arrive, but beneath all the strife the programme looks seriously at questions of faith, celebrity and relationships. JS

Play it by ear

Keep track of your hearing health by booking a free check-up at your local Specsavers store

You probably already know Specsavers for its expert opticians, but did you know it also offers hearing care? In fact, the team has been helping people across the UK with their hearing for more than 20 years (if anyone had seen that coming when Specsavers was founded 40 years ago, it might have ended up with a completely different name!).

So, whether you need a hearing check or know someone who might, you can book one for free at Specsavers. If needed, the team will offer you personalised solutions, and invite you back for another check every 18 months or so to make sure everything's alright and there haven't been any further changes.

What does it involve?

A hearing check at Specsavers is quick and easy. After asking a few initial questions about your history and symptoms, a hearing expert will use a small camera to examine the health of your ear canals and ear drums, ensuring there's a clear pathway for sound to travel through the middle and inner ear.

To check your hearing, they'll play sounds at different pitches through some headphones and ask you to press a button every time you hear one. Then, you'll wear a special headband to check how well you hear through vibrations. During both checks, the hearing expert will measure the quietest sounds you can hear.

At the end, they'll discuss the outcome with you and support you through any next steps you may need, whether that's another check, wax removal or a hearing device.

DO I NEED A HEARING CHECK?

If you notice a change in your hearing, it's worth having it checked out, no matter your age. Here are a few signs to look out for:

- You find it hard to hear conversations or the TV when there's background noise
- It's difficult to hear people on the phone, even in a quiet room
- You often ask others to repeat themselves, as it sounds like they're mumbling
- You struggle to keep up with group conversations, particularly in busy settings
- Loved ones tell you you're talking loudly, or the TV is too loud

HORROR

Saw X ★★ 18

Netflix Available now

Jigsaw killer John Kramer (Tobin Bell) returns for the tenth movie in the gore-soaked franchise, set between the events of Saw and Saw II. Hit with a terminal cancer diagnosis, Kramer pays for experimental treatment but finds he has been scammed. His elaborate revenge, naturally, involves cruel contraptions and grisly "tests". Bell's understated performance is a sly pleasure, and Shawnee Smith makes a welcome return as Jigsaw protégé Amanda. It's rather lacking in tension and mystery, but the overblown silliness and gallows humour will entertain fans. KEVIN HARLEY

FANTASY ADVENTURE

Black Adam ★★★ 12

Netflix Available now

Action juggernaut Dwayne Johnson plays a legendary warrior who reappears in the present after vanishing millennia ago. In DC comic-book lore, Black Adam is the nemesis of Shazam, but in this solo adventure, it's the Justice Society of America – led by Pierce Brosnan's Dr Fate – that's enlisted to take him down. A series of slugfests leaves little time for characterisation, but Johnson's brooding physicality and deadpan way with a witty line compensate hugely. JEREMY ASPINALL

Mission: Impossible – Dead Reckoning Part One ★★★★★ 12

Netflix Available Sunday

The nail-biting seventh entry in the series hits Netflix just in time for the cinema release of The Final Reckoning, on 21 May. IMF agent Ethan Hunt (Tom Cruise) tackles his most menacing threat yet: an AI weapon known as "the Entity" that has been causing disruption to the world's digital infrastructure. Aided by his pals – including a new recruit (Hayley Atwell) – Hunt races to obtain the key to control it. The high-octane stunts and anxiety-inducing moments are all present and correct, culminating in a fantastic cliffhanger ending. That next film can't come soon enough. PATRICK CREMONA

TRUE CRIME

Fred and Rose West: a British Horror Story

Netflix All three episodes available Wednesday

One of the most infamous and deeply disturbing murder cases in British criminal history is revisited by a comprehensive, sensitively constructed three-part documentary series, with previously unseen/unheard police materials from the time as its main selling point. As it tells its truly terrifying story, the programme is careful to make note of how many lives were changed for ever by even a loose connection to the case. JACK SEALE

A Deadly American Marriage

Netflix Available Friday 9 May

Irish father of two Jason Corbett was widowed in 2006. Two years later, he began a relationship with his American au pair, Molly. The couple, along with Jason's children, soon moved to North Carolina to begin a new life. But in 2015, Molly and her former FBI agent father, Thomas, beat Jason to death in what they claimed was self-defence during a fight in which they feared for their lives. The exact circumstances of Jason's death remain a source of mystery and disagreement. After what some people say was too short a prison sentence, Molly and Thomas are out and are interviewed here – as are Jason's children. JS

Untold: the Liver King

Netflix Available Tuesday

A classic story of internet fame unfolds as cameras follow Brian "the Liver King" Johnson, a fitness and lifestyle influencer who made millions by evangelising an "ancestral" approach to masculinity: men could cure anxiety and achieve their dream physique, he said, by eating raw liver, eggs and testicles, doing 1,000 press-ups a day – and consuming Johnson's own brand of supplements and bars. The documentary charts the digital celebrity's rise and fall, tapping into the past traumas that prompted the Liver King to be created, and exploring a world where anyone with a smartphone and a persuasive manner can potentially become a guru. JS

Having set her acting career aside to move behind the camera, Canada's Sarah Polley turns to her own family history for this engrossing portrait of unusual domestic circumstances. It had long been an in-family joke that Sarah didn't look much like her siblings, but what did that say about her parents' marriage? The film finds Polley trying to make sense of a situation further complicated by her mother's untimely death. Thought-provoking and affecting, this is exceptional on every level. TREVOR JOHNSTON

Calm with Horses

★★★ 15 Mubi Available now

Nick Rowland's well-crafted, Bafta-nominated debut feature follows "Arm" Armstrong (Cosmo Jarvis), an ex-boxer now working as an enforcer for a criminal family in rural Ireland. Needing cash to support his ex (Niamh Algar) and their young son, Arm agrees to murder someone for his employer (Barry Keoghan), only to become overwhelmed with self-loathing and guilt. What starts as a predictable crime tale ends in triumphant tragedy – and the hardest heart will have a hairline crack by the story's noir-like finale. KAREN KRIZANOVICH

HORROR COMEDY

Beetlejuice Beetlejuice ★★★ 12 Now Cinema Available Friday

Michael Keaton reprises the ghoulish character that first paired him with director Tim Burton for this enjoyable sequel to the 1988 fantasy comedy. Still hoping to marry Lydia Deetz (Winona Ryder) so he can cross over to the other side, Keaton's underworld-dwelling Betelgeuse spies his chance when Lydia returns to her home town for her father's funeral. Co-starring Willem Dafoe (as an afterlife detective) and Monica Bellucci (as Betelgeuse's vengeful ex), the result is certainly pleasing to the eye, even if it's not exactly Burton's finest hour. JAMES MOTTRAM

GAME OF THE WEEK

Revenge of the Savage Planet 12

PC, PS4, PS5, Xbox Series X/S

Available now

Boasting brightly coloured visuals inspired by films like Ghostbusters and Men in Black (and with the comedic flair to match), this sci-fi game immerses you in a series of wacky planets. There's heaps of humour at every turn, as you run into slippery goo and bizarre alien creatures. As the developers previously worked at Google, there's farcical corporate satire to be had, plus live-action spoof advertisements. ROB LEANE

MUSICAL DRAMA

The End ★★ 12

Mubi Available Friday

A wealthy family hunkers down in a bunker in this highly original but lengthy and often tedious post-apocalyptic musical. Two decades after environmental catastrophe has left the Earth's surface uninhabitable, the well-to-do clan (Tilda Swinton, Michael Shannon and George MacKay) and their small entourage live in underground luxury. But the dynamic changes when a stranger (Moses Ingram) penetrates their stronghold. This is certainly an intelligent piece of work, with a rich satirical streak and some fine performances. A shame, then, that the songs are lacklustre, and the pacing so sluggish. It all smacks a bit of self-indulgence. JM

ANIMATED ADVENTURE

Dog Man ★★★ U

To buy/rent Available Monday

Silly, chaotic and visually vibrant, director Peter Hastings's frenetic whizz-banger is RoboCop for kids. Based on Dav Pilkey's blockbuster series of graphic novels and set in the writer's Captain Underpants universe, it follows events after a cop and his canine sidekick are fused together following a bomb explosion. "Dog Man" must then make some unlikely allies in order to take down Flippy, a villainous telekinetic fish. The frantic action and absurdist humour calms down at points to deliver messages on friendship and parenting, but manic slapstick energy is the main driving force – youngsters won't be bored for a second. ALAN JONES

YOU KNOW IT'S TRUE..?
How Milli Vanilli's career came crashing down

FILM

P Milli Vanilli ★★★★

*10.05pm BBC2
Catch up via iPlayer

The title of smash-hit 1988 single Girl You Know It's True proved bleakly ironic for its supposed singers, Fabrice Morvan and Rob Pilatus. In 1990, the pair were outed as the frontmen for a pop fabrication: dancers by trade, they'd been hired by producer Frank Farian to lip-sync on stage and make-believe in interviews. In the wake of this scandal, the blockbuster success enjoyed by Milli Vanilli in the late 80s was immediately eclipsed by their new status: punchline.

This documentary relates how the hoax came together, and the effect it had on Pilatus – who died in 1998 – and Morvan, who is interviewed here alongside other key figures. There's fascinating insight into the sheer logistics of Farian's deception, while bounteous archive material reminds us just how big the act was for those 29 short months. Most memorable and moving, though, is the human story: whatever your opinion on these two young men and their role in a huge lie, it's painful to watch them being thrown under the bus. CALUM BAKER

This week's helping of retro game show giddiness is particularly chaotic and entertaining, thanks largely to the presence of Jedward on the panel (they count as one celebrity and are squished together on the bottom row). Unsurprisingly John and Edward are a handful, and their anarchic spirit rubs off as Judi Love starts questioning the rules and Aisling Bea attempts some Irish solidarity to keep the boys in check.

At one point Bea compares the unfettered atmosphere to being on a night bus – bemused Bradley Walsh really has his work cut out trying to maintain order. Kojey Radical, Josh Widdicombe and Michelle Collins round out the famous faces on the edge of escalating hysteria. JOHNATHON HUGHES

As Denmark is officially dismantled due to rising water levels, many Danes are being relocated to eastern Europe. Understandably there's panic and uncertainty about the future. In this tense double bill, Henrik (Magnus Millang) and Nikolaj (Esben Smed) defend their estate from angry workers, Laura (Amaryllis August) is conflicted as her family heads for different destinations and Lucas (Max Kaysen Hoyrup) is distraught at being parted from his mother.

It hammers home the heartbreak of saying goodbye to loved ones who are settling in a different country, the reality of being uprooted, the nightmare of untangling bureaucratic red tape and the dangers of trusting migrant smugglers. JR

A Life among Elephants

4.25pm C4 Catch up via C4 streaming

For six decades Iain Douglas-Hamilton, now 82, has been obsessed with elephants. It all started with his research project in Kenya, but he later became deeply involved with fighting the trade in ivory. "We were in the middle of a war – we were shot at several times," his wife Oria says about their time in Uganda. Since then, he has worked tirelessly to secure a safe future for elephants.

This absorbing documentary contains as many upsetting images as it does wonderful ones (as well as alarming footage of elephants charging), but what's so charming is seeing the bond Iain has with these majestic creatures and hearing his daughters, Saba and Mara, talking so lovingly about him and his work. JR

FILM REVIEWS

FILM OF THE DAY

P Milli Vanilli ★★★★

10.05-11.50pm BBC2

MUSIC DOCUMENTARY From Grammy award winners to global pariahs, the rise and fall of pop duo Milli Vanilli is legendary. Their crime? Lip synching. Fab Morvan and Rob Pilatus didn't sing a word on their debut album. But as this eye-opening documentary reveals, the European dancers-turned-pop-puppets may not have been the villains. It's a story of hubris, with former Boney M producer Frank Farian painted as the mastermind of a scam that spiralled out of control. It's a compelling tale of how an entire industry can buy into a lie if there's profit to be made. DAVE GOLDER (US 2023, swearing, HD)

High Society ★★★★

2.50-4.35pm BBC2
(starts 3.05pm in Wales) U

MUSICAL A remake of 1940 film The Philadelphia Story, this was a smash hit in its time, particularly in Britain. It offers many joys, notably the teaming of Bing Crosby and Frank Sinatra for the number Well, Did You Evah?, while Grace Kelly and Celeste Holm play their roles to perfection. TONY SLOMAN (US 1956, HD)

Traffic ★★★★

3.35-5.30pm
Talking Pictures TV PG

See review p75. (It/Fr 1971)

ABBA the Movie ★★★

3.50-5.45pm Sky Arts U

DOCUMENTARY DRAMA This record of the Swedish superstars' 1977 Australian tour shows why they were billed as the most popular group in the world and became the pinnacle of kitsch glam. The film does also have a story involving a roving journalist, but it's really just an excuse to hear the hits. ALAN JONES (Swe/Aus 1977, HD)

In the Heights ★★★★★

4.35-6.50pm BBC2
(not N Ireland; starts 4.50pm in Wales) PG

MUSICAL This movie takes the Broadway hit and turns it into something joyously cinematic. Set in New York City's Washington Heights, it tells the story of a bodega owner (Anthony Ramos) and his love for a local hairdresser (Melissa Barrera). The dance routines are to die for in a sure-fire spirit-lifter from Jon M Chu (Crazy Rich Asians, Wicked). EMMA SIMMONDS (US 2020, edited for language, HD)

Waterworld ★★★★

6.20-9.00pm 5 Action 12

FUTURISTIC ADVENTURE Think Mad Max on jet-skis and you have the measure of Kevin Reynolds's sci-fi fantasy, which is set in the future after the ice caps have melted and flooded Earth. Kevin Costner makes for a charmingly surly hero as the half man/half fish who takes on Dennis Hopper and his bandits to help Jeanne Tripplehorn on her quest for dry land. AJ (US 1995, may be edited for content, HD)

Insurgent ★★

8.30-10.15pm BBC3 12

SCI-FI ADVENTURE Picking up events after Divergent, this is a visually impressive if bland sequel to the dystopian hit. Shailene Woodley and Theo James return as heroes Tris and Four, who are now on the run from leader Jeanine (Kate Winslet). Woodley gives a spirited performance, but Robert Schwentke's movie is bogged down by its plodding plot. VICTORIA LUXFORD (US 2015, edited for language, HD)

Highlander III: the Sorcerer ★

9.00-11.00pm Legend 15

ACTION FANTASY It is not often on Freeview, so fans of the cult original may want to take a look at this risible second sequel that sinks the series in diluted caricature and empty rock video flash. This time immortal Christopher Lambert must battle Mario Van Peebles over the fate of his adopted son in a flaccid fantasy that makes a big noise but little sense. AJ (Can/Fr/UK 1995, violence, swearing, sex scenes)

Mission: Impossible – Ghost Protocol ★★★★

10.05pm-12.40am C4 12

SPY THRILLER In this fourth entry in the franchise, Ethan Hunt (Tom Cruise) and his team are blamed for a botched mission and are officially disbanded, forcing them to work in secret to prevent a rogue scientist (Michael Nyqvist) from causing nuclear armageddon. A scene where Cruise scales the Burj Khalifa tower in Dubai is among the many highlights. AJ (US 2011, violence, HD)

Speed ★★★★★

11.10pm-1.15am ITV1 15

ACTION THRILLER Keanu Reeves stars as the LAPD officer who comes to the aid of Sandra Bullock and her fellow bus passengers after crazed extortionist Dennis Hopper primes the vehicle to explode if its speed falls below 50mph. Director Jan De Bont's adrenaline-pumping film will make you wish your sofa came equipped with seat belts. AJ (US 1994, violence, swearing, HD)

Little Monsters ★★★★

11.20pm-1.10am Film4 15

HORROR COMEDY This joyously irreverent movie bursts with barbs, gags and gore galore. A delightful Lupita Nyong'o is the ukulele-playing teacher trying to keep her kids safe during a zombie outbreak. There's plenty of tension and carnage in a film that plays like Shaun of the Dead meets School of Rock. JEREMY ASPINALL (Aus/US/UK 2019, violence, swearing, a sex scene, nudity, drug abuse, HD)

AWARDS

Bafta Television Awards

7.00pm BBC1 Catch up via iPlayer

Will this year's Baftas end up being, quite literally, a two-horse race? Horses (albeit slow ones...) are up against a reindeer in what could be the hardest-fought contest between ungulates since last month's Grand National. When it comes to forging ahead with the most nominations, Richard Gadd's Netflix drama Baby Reindeer has pipped Apple TV+'s spy thriller Slow Horses to the post – but it's a photo finish with the juggernaut that is Mr Bates vs the Post Office.

Given that the ITV1 drama is already being recognised tonight with Bafta's Television Special Award, you wouldn't bet against it landing a clean sweep – including for Toby Jones and Monica Dolan in the leading actor and actress categories.

Presenter Alan Cumming (enjoying a moment due to hosting The Traitors US) will be bringing his dandyish charm to proceedings – perhaps with the odd impish quip about some of this year's biggest snubs. Gavin & Stacey's Christmas finale has been overlooked, while Strictly Come Dancing has also failed to be recognised in any of the main categories. FRANCES TAYLOR TV PREVIEWS EDITOR

70s TV We Loved and Lost

7.30pm 5 Catch up via 5 streaming

This fun social study is a retro Gogglebox that aims to re-create the communal joys of old-school scheduled content. For the older generation it's nostalgia; for the TikTok youth... more like bemusement. But what better way to win them over than the exasperating escapades of Frank Spencer, followed by a Cliff Richard number and an Open University course on "bilinear transformations". At least they don't subject them to the test card. Still, everyone perks up when Kojak comes on.

To emulate this experiment at home, simply tune in to That's TV – and then try discussing the night's Rising Damp around the photocopier the next day. GARY ROSE

DOCUMENTARY

Unforgotten: the Bradford City Fire

9.00pm BBC2 Catch up via iPlayer

A powerful documentary marks 40 years since fire swept through the main stand at Bradford City's football ground, killing 56 people. 11 May 1985 was meant to be a day of celebration, the final match of a season in which the club had just clinched the Third Division championship. The trophy was to be paraded after the match.

But just before half time, perhaps from a cigarette end dropped through floorboards, a small fire broke out and within minutes became an inferno. Survivors, photographers and former players recall the horror of that day, as does one woman whose husband and two sons lost their lives: "It isn't like you get over it," she says. "You get used to it." DAVID BUTCHER See page 23

Malpractice

9.00pm ITV1
Full series available via ITVX

A warning for anyone in the late stage of a pregnancy: this penultimate episode won't exactly calm any nerves. There's screaming, mention of a ventouse, a fair amount of pulling with forceps, and then a whole lot more screaming. Granted, it's all there to highlight the tensions within the obstetrics department, which is the focus of this medical negligence thriller. But it sure is a gruelling sequence to sit through.

Arrogant Trust boss Eric Sawyers also continues to throw his weight around – actor Rick Warden giving us a variation on the Napoleonic NHS bigwig persona he perfected while playing Ciaran Coulson in Casualty. Matters come to a head tomorrow at 9.00pm. DAVID BROWN

ENTERTAINMENT

The Piano

9.00pm C4 Catch up: C4 streaming

Mika and Jon Batiste have been holed up in poky, overheated back offices all series. No wonder the air hasn't always felt the clearest. This week, their breezier demeanours match the airy location – a bright, spacious mezzanine at Heathrow's Terminal 5.

The setting is befitting of the players, too, who include an airline pilot. Even now, as auditions draw to a close on series four, there are still surprises. "It's probably the most original take on Chopin that we've had ever since we've started doing The Piano," notes Mika of one pianist.

So, after next week's concert, where else will The Piano go? Now they've had trains and planes, surely automobiles will follow. Motorway service stations for series five, anyone? FT

REALITY

I Kissed a Boy

9.00pm BBC3 Catch up via iPlayer

It's series two of the UK's first gay dating show and Dannii Minogue is back playing Cupid for ten single men hoping to meet their Romeo. The premise is simple: they meet their matches and lock lips on first sight – no Dutch courage, no preamble, nothing. Coupled up, they then have a chance to get to know each other under the Italian sun while navigating various challenges including, at the big gay gala mixer, the chance for one of them to ditch their partner to check out the hot newcomer waiting in the secret garden. Ouch. As always, the success of these shows lies in the casting, and they have a pleasing mix this year. KAY RIBEIRO

DOCUMENTARY

Katie Piper: Locked Up in Louisiana

9.00pm U&W Catch up via U

America is in the grip of such a terrible opioid addiction epidemic that 80% of the women in this New Orleans jail have a substance abuse disorder, which prisons aren't equipped to deal with. Katie Piper meets several inmates including Kimberley, who comes from an ordinary, church-going family and has never been in trouble before but is facing a life sentence for murder. Kimberley blames her out-of-character violence on the misuse of prescription medication, but Piper decides to talk to her mother to learn more. JANE RACKHAM

DRAMA

This City Is Ours 9.00pm BBC1 Full series on iPlayer

SERIES FINALE

If you gave an episode or two of this drama a go but decided not to stick with it, I wouldn't have blamed you. It was easy to write off prematurely and jettison quicker than Davy Crawford was ditched off that cliff in Spain. Those who persevered have been rewarded with not only a knotty patchwork of flawed antiheroes, whose underworld dealings, backstabbings and actual stabbings have made for a fine gangland piece, but also a fun dance routine to The House of Bamboo. What an earworm.

It's been dubbed the "Scouse Sopranos" – this image only heightens that comparison – and while that might be a bit of a stretch, this proves a sometimes unbearably tense finale. As the ghost of Ronnie (Sean Bean) still looms large, Jamie (Jack McMullen) feels more in his shadow than ever. His feud with Michael (James Nelson-Joyce) spirals and escalates, until both men overplay their hands with the dirtiest of tricks. FT

The Assembly 10.00pm ITV1 Catch up via ITVX

Gary Lineker is this week's guest/victim. "I don't really get nervous at all," Lineker has claimed. "Didn't as a player, don't as a presenter..." Maybe, but I tell you what: he certainly looks on edge as he walks into the gathering of neurodivergent interviewers, to answer whatever they fire at him.

You get the feeling he'd be more relaxed taking a penalty in a World Cup final. That might be more straightforward than revealing who the worst person he has ever worked with was, or talking through how he felt when his baby son got cancer. But Lineker is a pro and he rises to the occasion. And at one point he manages an impressive exchange in what sounds like fluent Japanese. DBu

Bibaa and Nicole: Murder in the Park

9pm, 10pm Sky Documentaries/ Showcase Catch up via Now

NEW SERIES

It was one of the saddest and most infamous cases of Covid lockdown. In June 2020, friends gathered in a London park to celebrate social worker Bibaa Henry's 46th birthday. As darkness fell, just Bibaa and her 27-year-old sister Nicole remained, dancing in the park. The next day, their bodies were found by Nicole's partner.

Shockingly, constables posed for selfies at the crime scene and shared images on WhatsApp. This three-part documentary pieces together the sisters' final hours, the hunt for a serial killer and subsequent Met misconduct investigation. MICHAEL HOGAN

FILM REVIEWS

FILM OF THE DAY

Brooklyn ★★★★

10.30pm-12.15am BBC2 (not N Ireland) 12

ROMANTIC DRAMA This crowd-pleasing tale is adapted by Nick Hornby from the novel by Colm Toibin. Saoirse Ronan stars as Eilis, a young woman who becomes torn between two worlds and two loves during the austere 1950s. Leaving her small Irish community, Eilis journeys to Brooklyn, New York, to take up a job arranged by the church. Surviving both homesickness and the jibes of others, Eilis eventually finds romance – only for a tragedy to occur back home. This may break no new territory, but it's a hugely likeable movie. DAVE ALDRIDGE (UK/Ire 2015, swearing, a sex scene, HD)

Dunkirk ★★★

11.35am-1.45pm BBC2 PG

WAR DRAMA Director Leslie Norman's reconstruction of the Dunkirk evacuation is impressive in its scale, but slightly disappointing in its writing and execution. There are tailor-made roles for soldier John Mills, reporter Richard Attenborough and Home Front cynic Bernard Lee, but the movie is too eager to inspire rather than inform or engross. DAVID PARKINSON (UK 1958, BW, HD)

Peter Pan ★★★

1.35-3.45pm ITV1 PG

FANTASY ADVENTURE In this spirited take on author JM Barrie's children's classic, Peter (Jeremy Sumpter) and Wendy (Rachel Hurd-Wood) trifle with each other's hearts as they tussle with Captain Hook (Jason Isaacs). Director PJ Hogan gives the tale an eye-catching makeover, while also retaining the Britishness of the source text. TOM HUTCHINSON (US/UK/Aus 2003, may be edited for violence, HD)

Paddington 2 ★★★★★

3.55-5.35pm BBC1 (starts 2.55pm in Wales) PG

COMEDY Paddington Bear returns in this triumphant sequel, which sees our hero (voiced by Ben Whishaw) framed for the theft of a valuable book and sent to prison. The cast is once again led by Hugh Bonneville and Sally Hawkins as Mr and Mrs Brown, but Hugh Grant steals the show as egotistical actor Phoenix Buchanan. VICTORIA LUXFORD (UK/Fr 2017, HD)

Madagascar: Escape 2 Africa ★★

4.40-6.25pm ITV2 PG

COMEDY ADVENTURE Alex the Lion, Marty the Zebra and the rest of the menagerie return in this first animated sequel. After they fix up a plane in an attempt to return to New York, the craft goes down in Africa, where Alex meets his long-lost family. There are enough gags and cute animals to keep both the kids and the grown-ups happy. DA (US 2008, HD)

The Bodyguard ★★★

9.00-11.40pm ITVBe 15

ROMANTIC THRILLER Whitney Houston and Kevin Costner play a singer and her protector who fall in love amid a charged atmosphere of jealousy and death threats. The stars throw themselves into the well-staged set pieces, and Houston's inspired rendition of I Will Always Love You went on to become a huge hit. SUE HEAL (US 1992, violence, swearing, a sex scene, HD)

Mallrats ★★★ 10.00-11.55pm Comedy Central 18

See review p95. (US 1995, swearing, a sex scene, drug abuse, nudity, HD)

Taken 2 ★★★

10.45pm-12.20am ITV1 15

ACTION DRAMA This sequel hardly deviates from the successful formula of the first film. The only twist this time is that it's former CIA agent Liam Neeson himself who gets snatched along with his ex-wife (Famke Janssen), leaving it to their daughter (Maggie Grace) to free them. Director Olivier Megaton ensures that the action moves along nicely. DA (Fr 2012, violence, swearing, HD)

Wild Men ★★

12.15-1.55am BBC2 15

CRIME COMEDY This Danish jaunt follows a man in the grip of a mid-life crisis (Rasmus Bjerg) who goes on the run with a drug smuggler (Zaki Youssef), pursued by a world-weary cop (Bjorn Sundquist). There are laughs along the way, but there's also a disconcerting focus on violence and gore. The result is an unsettling mix of comedy and horror. JAYNE NELSON (Den 2021, violence, swearing, drug abuse, HD)

P Rodeo ★★★★

1.00-2.50am C4 15

DRAMA The dynamic feature debut of French writer/director Lola Quivoron stars Julie Ledru as a working-class tearaway who latches onto a dirt-bike crew and engages in high-risk criminal activities. Ledru is terrific, and Rodeo confidently fuses realism, wheelie-pulling thrills and an almost western-style fatalism. KEVIN HARLEY (Fr 2022, violence, swearing, sexual references, drug abuse, HD)

Happy as Lazzaro ★★★★

1.10-3.50am Film4 12

FANTASY DRAMA The unwitting antihero at the centre of this beguiling Italian fable is Lazzaro (Adriano Tardiolo), a farm hand whose life dramatically changes when he is befriended by the local marchioness's rebellious son. Writer/director Alice Rohrwacher's third feature is challenging, compelling and exceptionally played. DP (It/Swi/Fr/Ger 2018, some violence, swearing, HD)

CHANGING PERCEPTIONS
Chris Packham says ADHD is more a difference than a disorder

DOCUMENTARY

Inside Our ADHD Minds

9.00pm BBC2 (Wednesday 9.00pm in Wales) Catch up via iPlayer*

Just as he did with his 2023 documentary about autism, Chris Packham is out to change perceptions, this time with a focus on ADHD, which he feels has been misnamed. What's been labelled a "disorder" is, in his words, more of a "difference". And rather than suffering from a "deficit" in attention, the reality is that those who live with this form of neurodivergence can find it difficult to regulate their ever-jumping minds.

To highlight this, the compassionate Packham gets to know 23-year-old tour guide Henry and 51-year-old council worker Jo, two people at very different stages of life who share an instinct to conceal the daily organisational challenges they face for fear of upsetting loved ones.

Now, though, the pair have reached a point where they'd like to gain insight into their diagnoses and let the mask fall in front of family members – their method of communication being a short film that each hopes will result in greater understanding of what is an often misunderstood condition. Next week, two people with dyslexia aim for the same. DAVID BROWN See page 20

Malpractice

9.00pm ITV1 Full series on ITVX

Medical thrillers generally conform to type, and Malpractice has been no exception. There's been a conspiracy, the cover-up, doctors in suits whose actions are deadly, and lowlier medics in scrubs being silenced by their superiors. Oh, and naturally, the hero who's fighting a rotten system.

In the 1970s, that was Geneviève Bujold in Coma. In the 1990s, we had Hugh Grant in the underrated Extreme Measures (seek it out; the late Gene Hackman is terrific as the villain). And here, it's actor Tom Hughes, whose alter ego Dr James Ford is attempting to take back control after finding himself the victim of a frame-up. Help is potentially coming in the form of the MIU, but they sorely need a whistle-blower willing to speak out. DB

Virgin Island

NEW SERIES

Just when it seemed reality TV couldn't sink any lower... welcome to Virgin Island! This "unique experiment" (a phrase that's become shorthand for "avoid like the plague") sees 12 British virgins visit a retreat with sex therapists to learn about sex, intimacy, and potentially leave their virginity behind for good.

All eyebrow-raising enough, but when the methods are laid bare – literally – the tawdriness is dialled up to 11. Some participants are given a "surrogate partner", described as "a highly trained therapist able to have sex with a client". Yes, really.

It all feels very exploitative, and I can only hope these young people aren't left feeling utterly traumatised afterwards. FRANCES TAYLOR

DRAMA

The Last of Us

9.00pm (also 2am early Monday) Sky Atlantic Catch up via Now

Forget the terrifying fungal apocalypse – the power of this show has always rested in the touching dynamic between surrogate father/daughter duo Joel and Ellie, as played by Pedro Pascal and Bella Ramsey. So how the story can continue following (spoiler alert!) Joel's violent death three episodes ago has been the big question of this second run.

Arguably, the show lacks a certain power without that core relationship, but Ramsey makes a strong showing this week. Ellie is now firmly set on a mission of revenge, tracking Joel's killers to an abandoned hospital while dodging hordes of infected monsters. In an already brutal show, what comes next might be the most unsettling chapter yet. HUW FULLERTON

Elsbeth

9.00pm Sky Witness Catch up via Now

Those who thought season one of this US import was playfully ironic haven't seen anything yet. In fact, it's almost as if lawyer-turned-sleuth Elsbeth Tascioni (Carrie Preston) has heard those comments and is responding with a cry of "Camp? Hold my pink-striped tote bag!"

This opener to season two begins with a real flamboyant flourish, thanks to the casting of Nathan Lane as Philip Cross, an opera obsessive who murders a fellow theatre-goer because of his boorish behaviour. Naturally, he believes he can outsmart the bubbly Elsbeth, despite her clinging to him like a soprano to centre stage. But she isn't about to let this pompous lover of high art get away with a high crime. DB

SCIENCE

The Sky at Night

10.00pm BBC4 Catch up: iPlayer

Of all the Solar System's planets, Mars has always elicited the most intrigue and speculation. In this Sky at Night special, there's a report on the mysterious movement of hefty boulders across the Red Planet's surface. But before you cry "aliens!", researchers at Utrecht University have apparently attributed it to a new geological phenomenon.

There's also a trip to Pulsar Fusion, a UK start-up working on rockets that could speed up the interstellar commute, plus the inevitable update regarding David Bowie's age-old query: is there life on Mars? GARY ROSE

HISTORY

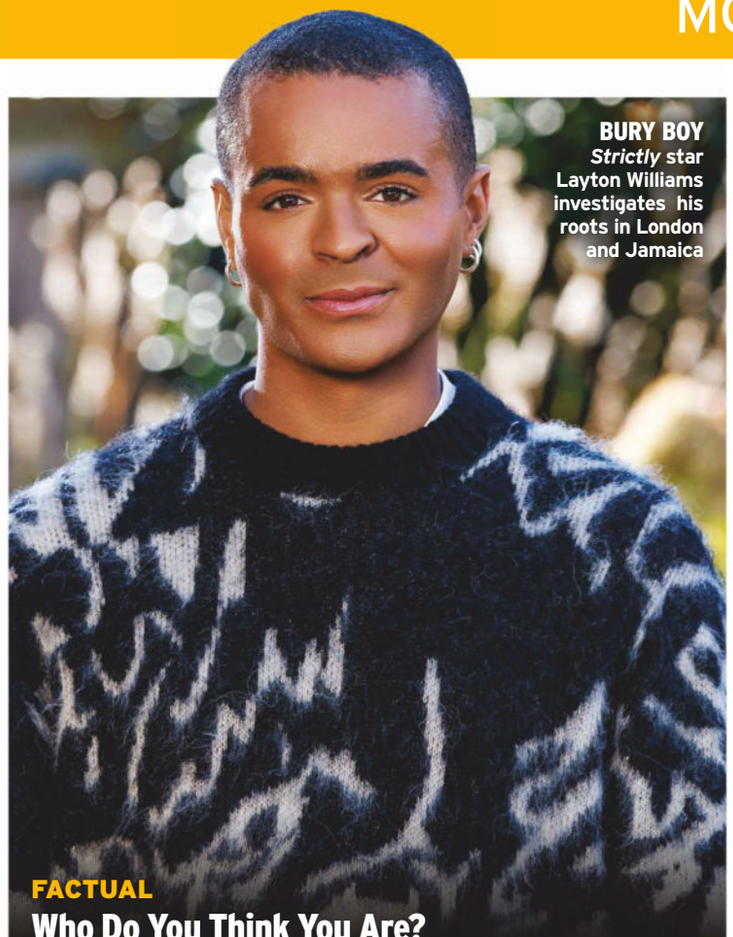

Andrew Roberts Remembers... AJP Taylor's The War Lords

10.30pm BBC4 Catch up: iPlayer

AJP Taylor was the celebrity historian of his day. Yet, even by 1976 standards, The War Lords was basic, as the 70-year-old delivered a lecture to camera without visual support or notes.

With an introduction by Andrew Roberts, what could be a recipe for drear proves thoroughly absorbing, as Taylor unfurls the personality-based sagas of Benito Mussolini (10.45pm) and Adolf Hitler (11.15pm).

Taylor's Mussolini is a slothful showman, while Hitler is portrayed as more rational than many accounts. Controversial then and now, but still fascinating. JOHN AIZLEWOOD

BURY BOY Strictly star Layton Williams investigates his roots in London and Jamaica

FACTUAL

Who Do You Think You Are?

9.00pm BBC1 (9.00pm BBC2 in Wales) Catch up via iPlayer

Although he was brought up in Bury, musical theatre star and Strictly Come Dancing finalist Layton Williams has always felt that London was his true home. He's thrilled to discover a long line of Londoners among his ancestors as well as one with a connection to music.

Layton's also proud to be part Jamaican (on his father's side), although he says Jamaica's attitude toward the LGBTQ+ community makes it "hard to love a place when they don't love you back". But his investigations there reveal why his family are such hard workers and why they place so much importance on their homes.

It's sadly inevitable that he also discovers evidence of slavery in his family tree. JANE RACKHAM

DRAMA

The Game 9.00pm 5 Catch up via 5 streaming

NEW SERIES

Detective Huw Miller (Jason Watkins) takes early retirement after becoming so obsessed with an unsolved serial-killer case that he had a breakdown. He's still haunted by the Ripton Stalker, so when a seemingly friendly chap, Patrick (Robson Green), who's just moved into the street, uses the Stalker's catchphrase "Catch you later", Huw becomes suspicious. But everyone else – including Huw's wife (Sunetra Sarker) – likes Patrick, while his ex-colleagues on the force dismiss his allegations as paranoia.

It's a great edge-of-seat start to Tom Grieves's tense psychological drama, showing in four parts across this week, with both Watkins and Green giving strong performances. JR

Assisted Dying: the Final Choice

11.00pm BBC2 Catch up via iPlayer

As MPs this week consider legislation to introduce assisted dying in England and Wales, Fergus Walsh reports on how similar laws have played out in Canada and California.

He hears views from both sides and meets Wayne, 80, a retired landscape gardener in San Diego, whose illness and pain have become too much. He wants a peaceful death with his family: "I just don't see any merit in dying slowly and painfully."

One in 300 deaths in California is now medically assisted; in Canada, the figure is one in 20. In a touching final scene, the cameras, at Wayne's invitation, film him as he drinks lethal chemicals and slips away, saying "Goodnight." DAVID BUTCHER

9.00 Who Do You Think You Are?
RT 4/8. Layton Williams. The actor and musical-theatre star sets out to explore his family history, starting in Bury, Greater Manchester, where he grew up. He begins by learning that his great-grandfather served in both world wars, surviving the 1940 Dunkirk evacuation in France and later working in a PoW camp in north-west England. Meanwhile, research in London uncovers some musical roots – his six-times great-grandfather was a piano tuner and agent for a prestigious instrument maker. In Jamaica, Williams learns more about his great-great-grandparents from documents found in a church, with further digging revealing his three-times great-grandfather was born into slavery, and his four-times great-grandmother was brought from Africa, prompting the actor to reflect on how strong his family must have been to survive their ordeals. FILM REVIEWS

True Things ★★★★

11.40pm-1.15am BBC2 15

DRAMA This unflinching look at the destructive nature of a toxic relationship stars Ruth Wilson as Kate, a 30-something dreamer stifled by her job as a benefits officer, and Tom Burke as the ex-con who saunters into her world. Kate quickly develops an unhealthy obsession with the man she calls "Blond", but his unpredictable behaviour – he takes her on wild dates and then disappears for weeks – leaves her questioning his intentions. The movie often feels uncomfortably real, and Wilson gives an elegant yet raw performance. KELLY-ANNE TAYLOR (UK 2021, swearing, sex scenes, drug abuse, HD)

The Delavine Affair ★★★

10.45am-12 noon

Talking Pictures TV PG

MYSTERY Peter Reynolds plays a maverick reporter who is suspected of the murder of an old contact. This B picture is full of familiar faces, with Reynolds's wife played by Honor Blackman and Gordon Jackson cropping up as the smoothie trying to lead her astray. The mystery is hardly demanding, but the likeable Reynolds keeps it moving. DAVID PARKINSON (UK 1954, BW)

Anzio ★★

11.00am-1.20pm Film4 PG

WAR DRAMA In this epic Second World War tale, Robert Mitchum stars as an American war correspondent covering the Allies' landing in Italy and their bloody march on Rome. This is one of those war movies that poses huge moral questions at every turn and gives ordinary Joes statements rather than dialogue. A long haul, in every respect. ADRIAN TURNER (It 1968, edited for content, HD)

The Professionals ★★

12 noon-1.15pm

Talking Pictures TV U

CRIME This quota quickie follows small-time crooks Stratford Johns, Edward Cast and Charles Vance as they carry out a city bank job with William Lucas's safe cracker. Director Don Sharp handles the heist with some finesse, as the gang makes its way through the sewers, and writer Peter Barnes comes up with a novel dénouement. DP (UK 1960, BW)

The Enemy Below ★★★★

1.20-3.20pm Film4 PG

WAR Based on a real story, this is a stunning drama about a German U-boat and the US destroyer stalking it. Curt Jurgens and Robert Mitchum turn in a pair of fine performances as the respective skippers, while the special effects won an Oscar. But it's Dick Powell's direction that really stands out – his taut handling of the action is a fine achievement. TONY SLOMAN (US 1957, HD)

13 Rue Madeleine ★★

3.20-5.15pm Film4 U

SPY This is one of several documentary-style dramas produced by newsreel pioneer Louis de Rochemont. A narrator intones, the images look snatched from real life... and a Hollywood star gives the game away. In this case it's James Cagney, slightly miscast as an American agent training spies for service in occupied Europe. AT (US 1946, BW)

The Chronicles of Riddick ★★ 9.00-11.25pm

Great Movies 15

SCI-FI Vin Diesel's grunting antihero from Pitch Black returns in this visually impressive first sequel, which opens up the action to present a fully realised universe populated by sleek spacecraft and war-torn cities. Sadly, for all its sense of scale and impressive set pieces, this space opera comes across as overblown and pompous. GARETH MOSES (US 2004, violence, swearing)

Hot Seat ★★ 9.00-11.00pm

Legend Xtra 15

THRILLER This humdrum thriller stars Kevin Dillon as a computer whizz with a shady hacker past who is made a captive in his bomb-rigged office chair. Explosives expert Mel Gibson and police chief Shannen Doherty watch from the sidelines, unsure whether the villain is acting alone. There's little tension and Dillon fails to convince as a man in jeopardy. TERRY STAUNTON (US 2022, violence, swearing)

Pulp ★★★

Talking Pictures TV 12

COMEDY THRILLER Michael Caine stars in this knowing film about a hack author who is hired to ghostwrite a celebrity's memoirs. Reteaming with his Get Carter writer/director Michael Hodges and producer Michael Klinger, Caine is deceptively brilliant, and there's sterling work from Hollywood icons Mickey Rooney and Lizabeth Scott. ToS (UK 1972, violence, swearing)

The Recall ★★ 11.05pm-1.05am

Great Action 15

HORROR Five teenagers at a remote lakeside cabin find themselves in the wrong place at the wrong time as an alien invasion shatters their rural idyll. Could survivalist Wesley Snipes be there to help or to hinder? War of the Worlds, Predator, and The Matrix are among the films excavated by illustrator-turned-director Mauro Borrelli in this meandering mosaic of genre clichés. JEREMY ASPINALL (Can 2017, violence, swearing, brief nudity)

Eurovision Song Contest Semi-Final

8.00pm BBC1 Catch up via iPlayer

Good or bad, it doesn't seem to matter how the UK fares in Eurovision. Our collective love for the contest only seems to grow. It wasn't that long ago that these semi-finals (the second is on Thursday at 8pm) aired on BBC4. Now, they're pride of place in primetime BBC1.

Scott Mills and Rylan host as 15 of this year's entrants vie for votes, performing on stage in Basel, Switzerland (the host city for this year's contest) with the hope of making it to Saturday's final.

Among the contenders are favourites Sweden, Slovenia's heartfelt ballad and a techno pop duo who look (and sound) like Iceland's answer to Jedward. Not forgetting some deft lyricism from Croatia ("tasty, tasty, yum, yum, tasty" runs the refrain in their song, Poison Cake).

Thrown in for good measure (but excluded from the vote) are performances from two of the "Big Five" – Spain and Italy, who both automatically qualify – as well as Switzerland who, judging by their sluggish entry, have no interest in winning two years on the trot. FRANCES TAYLOR

SOAP

EastEnders

7.30pm BBC1 Catch up via iPlayer

Hypocrisy is rife in soaps, as communities criticise others' mistakes while conveniently forgetting their own flaws. Cindy is currently the local pariah due to her infidelity wrecking several lives, so when she spies Kathy kissing Harvey, newly engaged to Jean, she's thrilled to have some ammunition against her judgmental mother-in-law. Cindy records the clandestine moment, unbeknown to the couple who've been conducting a secret affair for months, so what will she do with the footage? She'll no doubt relish the opportunity to expose Kathy's fling publicly and take great delight in watching her squirm. At least it would give the locals something else to talk about other than Cindy's endless indiscretions. JOHNATHON HUGHES

Shock and Awe: Trump's Return

9.00pm ITV1 Catch up via ITVX

Each news cycle, it feels as though the world collectively grips a handrail to cope with the next jolt from the White House. But what has been the experience for those living in the United States?

We recently witnessed Donald Trump's 100th day in office dawning with stats about America's economy contracting for the first time in three years. Not his doing, but Joe Biden's legacy, argued the President. Those who may need convincing are the ones who voted him back into office. Yet some still feel that their leader has the wisdom of a messiah. And so, to take the political temperature of a nation, journalist Robert Moore is meeting citizens whose lives have been impacted. DAVID BROWN

ART

Simon Schama Remembers... Simon Schama's Power of Art

*9pm, 9.15pm BBC4
Catch up via iPlayer

The 2006 series Power of Art found historian Simon Schama at his wry peak, dissecting the lives of eight artists. Today, the creator, writer and narrator's reminiscences precede the gripping first episode which dissected the mononymous Italian, Caravaggio. Revolutionary in the late 16th and early 17th centuries, his brutal but beautiful paintings were "an attempt to make something sacred out of the lives of the squalid". But Caravaggio's work was overshadowed by his tumultuous life. He was a drinker, a dueller, a brawler and a murderer. Or, as Schama has it, "a psycho". JOHN AIZLEWOOD

DRAMA

The Game

9.00pm 5 Catch up via 5 streaming

Huw's (Jason Watkins) obsession with the identity of the Ripton Stalker reaches new heights – or maybe depths – with some very dodgy behaviour including snooping around his new neighbour's house, contacting the Stalker's only surviving victim and haranguing anyone who will listen with his suspicions. Even his loving wife Alice (Sunetra Sarker) has had enough and finally snaps.

However, it's impossible for us not to have doubts about Patrick (Robson Green) too, who, while charming, does behave in a rather creepy way at times. Is he playing some kind of cat-and-mouse game as the title suggests? Or is Huw on the verge of another breakdown? There's more tomorrow. JANE RACKHAM

Our Farm Next Door: Amanda, Clive and Kids

9.00pm More4
Catch up via C4 streaming

Winter draws on at Anty John's and with the festive season approaching, Amanda Owen dreams of assembling the family inside their partially converted farmhouse, which reaches a crucial stage in the renovation just as the Yorkshire temperatures plummet. It's not quite ready to host a houseful, but Amanda vows to enjoy at least some of the Christmas period in front of the fireplace. It's a time for making new traditions, however unconventional: only in this programme could you hear the sentence: "Christmas isn't complete without a goat in the living room." JH

Olympia's facing multiple betrayals. First, there was the shock that Julian strayed during their marriage, which was followed by the unmasking of Matty, who tonight explains that Olympia's husband is the employee she suspects of burying the crucial WellBrexa paperwork.

Olympia outlines her demand: that Matty give her a month to exonerate Julian if pivotal evidence can't be found against him. But with next week's episode being the series finale, it feels as though events are moving at a faster pace than Olympia would like. DB

Change Your Mind, Change Your Life with Matt and Emma Willis

11.00pm, 11.50pm (11.50pm, 12.40am in Northern Ireland) BBC1 Catch up via iPlayer

NEW SERIES

From the stark realities of Couples Therapy to the fictional constructs of In Treatment, therapy has long been fertile territory for television. The latest contribution may have celebrity couple Matt and Emma Willis in the title, but the real stars are the therapists and their clients, whose interactions shed light on problems both specific and universal.

In tonight's opening double bill, these include anxiety, low self-esteem and the impact of childhood bullying, each exchange underlining therapist Owen O'Kane's characterisation of his job as detective work where "nothing is ever as it seems", couched as they are in worries over driving, illness and solitude. Even for those still concerned about the fading stigma around therapy, the series preaches compassion to oneself above all. Who could honestly argue with that? GABRIEL TATE

Joe Lycett's United States of Birmingham

9.00pm Sky Max Catch up via Now

LAST IN SERIES

There have been plenty of differences highlighted between the Birminghams of North America and Joe Lycett's native Brum throughout this travelogue. But there are some similarities to home at the final Birmingham in Alabama, including a section of motorway reminiscent of Spaghetti Junction, called the Malfunction Junction. As with many of Lycett's endeavours, there's an earnest end goal. He has a palpable sense of pride as he cements the Brummie union with a cultural day celebrating Birminghams. FT

Convicting my Ex

9.00pm BBC3 Catch up via iPlayer

In 2022, Ellie Wilson's ex-boyfriend Daniel McFarlane was convicted of raping her twice during their relationship. Having secretly recorded his admission, Ellie went to the police and Daniel was found guilty. Since the trial, she has waived her right to anonymity to highlight how Daniel's defence lawyer crossed the line in his questioning, and has campaigned to improve the criminal justice system for survivors of rape and sexual abuse.

Now, as Ellie discovers that Daniel is up for parole halfway through his five-year sentence, this doc examines the impact this trauma has had on her, including being the target of social media trolls. KAY RIBEIRO

FILM REVIEWS

FILM OF THE DAY

P Driven ★★★★

9.00-11.30pm Great Movies 15

THRILLER Inspired by real events, Driven depicts the downfall of car designer John DeLorean, who created the cool gull-winged sports car featured in Back to the Future. When former drug smuggler turned FBI informant Jim Hoffman (Jason Sudeikis) involves the cash-strapped DeLorean (Lee Pace) in a lucrative drug deal, what could go wrong? The morally dubious Hoffman is still likeable, and his friendship with DeLorean is at the core of an enjoyable story of betrayal, ambition and the coolest car in the history of Hollywood. STEPHEN CARTY (PRic/UK/US 2018, swearing, drug abuse)

Child in the House ★★★

9.10-10.50am

Talking Pictures TV U

DRAMA With her mother in hospital and her father (Stanley Baker) on the run, 11-year-old Mandy Miller is sent to live with her sniffy aunt Phyllis Calvert and rigid uncle Eric Portman, and her presence has an unexpected effect on all concerned. It's a modest British-made drama, co-directed by Cy Endfield (Zulu), and features acting stalwarts Dora Bryan, Joan Hickson and Alfie Bass. ROBYN KARNEY (UK 1956, BW)

Traffic ★★★★

Talking Pictures TV PG

COMEDY In Jacques Tati's final narrative film, Monsieur Hulot takes the vehicle of the future to an Amsterdam motor show. The critics were expecting more than some loose observations on motoring and modernity, but Tati's film is filled with astute musings, such as the way owners resemble their cars or have windscreen wipers in tune with their personalities. DAVID PARKINSON (It/Fr 1971)

Bullet for a Badman ★★★

2.20-4.00pm 5 Action PG

WESTERN Audie Murphy has a decent role here, playing the former compadre of Darren McGavin, who has turned bad. As Murphy joins a posse to bring McGavin to justice, both men vie for the affections of Ruta Lee. Photographed by the great Joe Biroc and with a fine support cast, this is a pleasure to watch. TONY SLOMAN (US 1964, may be edited for violence, HD)

San Demetrio London ★★★

2.45-4.45pm Film4 PG

WAR DRAMA Charles Frend's wartime morale-booster is based on the true story of an oil tanker that was attacked by a German battleship in the Atlantic in 1940. Boasting a fine cast (including Walter Fitzgerald, Gordon Jackson and Mervyn Johns) and authentic-looking action, this Ealing production served as an effective allegory for the state of the nation's fortunes at the time. DP (UK 1943, BW, HD)

Fisherman's Friends ★★★

6.45-9.00pm Film4 12

COMEDY DRAMA Based on a true story, this likeable tale sees a grizzled bunch of Cornish fishermen and sea-shanty singers in line to land a recording deal. James Purefoy plays the leader of the group, with Daniel Mays as the record-company man trying to reel him in. It's as comforting as one of Purefoy's pullovers. DAVE ALDRIDGE (UK 2018, edited for content, HD)

The Intruder ★★★

8.10-9.50pm

Talking Pictures TV U

DRAMA Jack Hawkins stars here as an ex-colonel who finds a former member of his regiment (Michael Medwin) burgling his home. The central concept is an intriguing one – why would a wartime hero become a peacetime thief? – but talented director Guy Hamilton (Goldfinger) was still honing his craft here and pulls it all together rather mechanically. TOM HUTCHINSON (UK 1953, BW)

Men in Black: International ★★

9.00-11.15pm Film4 12

SCI-FI COMEDY Marvel stars Chris Hemsworth and Tessa Thompson team up as MIB agents in this fourth movie in the hit series. Their mission is to protect visiting alien royalty in London, but the assignment goes drastically wrong. This may lack the spark and wit of the earlier Will Smith and Tommy Lee Jones films, but there are a few enjoyable scenes. ALAN JONES (US 2019, some violence, swearing, HD)

Ted ★★★★

9.00-11.00pm

Comedy Central 15

COMEDY Family Guy creator Seth MacFarlane writes and directs this hilariously vulgar offering about a man and his potty-mouthed teddy. Despite Ted's interference in the life of his owner (Mark Wahlberg), his devotion is genuinely endearing. Mila Kunis co-stars as Wahlberg's partner, while Giovanni Ribisi darkens the humour as Ted's stalker. STELLA PAPAMICHAEL (US 2012, swearing, drug abuse, brief nudity)

Bad Lieutenant ★★★★

Legend Xtra 18

CRIME DRAMA This brutal, controversial tale see a corrupt cop (Harvey Keitel) get a chance at redemption when he investigates the rape of a nun. The problem is that she has forgiven her attackers and refuses to name them. Keitel gives one of the best performances of his career as the lapsed Catholic in serious debt and even worse moral and ethical chaos. AJ (US 1992, violence, swearing, drug abuse, nudity)

David Frost vs... Richard Nixon

9.00pm Sky Documentaries Catch up via Now

It's one of the great political interviews. We see a string of vivid clips from David Frost's famous 1977 conversations with former US president Richard Nixon, and get a sense of their prickly charisma, two alpha beasts colliding.

Frost had landed the exclusive by promising Nixon $600,000 and 20 per cent of the profits. But would there be any? One of the things we learn from this engaging look back (which is more solid with facts than the Frost/Nixon film) is that Frost was winging it. US networks had declined the show, so he had to sell it to local TV stations one by one. He was a salesman, hustling like mad, even as he also had the job of coaxing a confession from the rambling, shifty Nixon.

The backdrop was the Watergate scandal. Could he lure Nixon into an admission of wrongdoing? Frost subsequently explained his technique: he relied on the Aesop fable about the wind and the sun competing to get someone's coat off – and his warm approach worked. DAVID BUTCHER

The Great House Revival

7.00pm BBC2 Catch up via iPlayer

"It'll be grand," declare nurse Mary-Claire and carpenter Sully to amiably appalled architect Hugh Wallace in this property refurb show that aired on RTÉ last year. Drawing liberally from its property-show precursors, it pits voice-of-reason Wallace against a couple who have bought a Georgian wreck – rotting staircase, damp walls, fascinating history – in rural Cork and intend to turn it into a dream home.

Plans and budgeting aren't for everyone, and when a clock starts ticking loudly – and not in the usual "insertion of artificial jeopardy" manner common to similar shows – it's hard to credit that Wallace ends the episode happily eating his words. GABRIEL TATE

Interior Design Masters with Alan Carr

8.00pm BBC1 Catch up via iPlayer

It's Mary Portas week – or, at least, the part of the competition where the remaining novice designers pair up to make-over a couple of shops. This time they're in the East Sussex town of Rye, tackling a women's clothing and accessories boutique and an Indian hand-made paper shop. One pair of interior designers drenches the space in a warm beige to allow the products to take centre stage, the others go full-on colourful.

While the owners appear pleased with the transformations of their shops, Michelle Ogundehin still wants to be seduced by the decor.

Alan Carr, meanwhile, gets dressed up as a mermaid – and nobody will be seduced by that. JANE RACKHAM

Our Little Farm on the Prairie

NEW SERIES

5 ventures further afield than Yorkshire for its latest farming series. This four-parter follows the Doan family – who have been running the vast 17,000-acre Black Leg Ranch in North Dakota for six generations – through one all-American summer. As they herd bison and corral cattle on the great plains of the Midwest, it's a long way from the Dales, but with plentiful parallels.

This opener follows rodeo-riding Jayce as he rides out to tag kicking calves. Meanwhile, his irresponsible elder brothers Jeremy and Jay struggle to mount a prized buffalo head above the lodge's fireplace. Full of rugged rural characters, this is whip-cracking fun. MICHAEL HOGAN

Race across the World

9.00pm BBC1 Catch up via iPlayer

The next checkpoint is Varanasi in India and the race leaders (no spoilers here) are now almost 24 hours ahead of their rivals. First – and none of them was expecting this – they are allowed to fly to Kathmandu and then have to cross Nepal, at the mercy of its poor road system and frequent landslides. It is, they discover, very different from China – buzzing and colourful –but some of the racers find the chaos of India overwhelming.

They are starting to open their hearts, talking about personal matters such as their upbringing or disabilities. While a few are challenged by their travel experiences, it's lovely to see others embrace their adventures, whether that's a zipwire ride or spiritual moments at a holy site. JR

Genius Game

9.00pm ITV1 Catch up via ITVX

When even the contestants need to use a pen and paper to keep tabs on what's going on, what hope do viewers have? Admittedly, not all the conundrums in this series of strategy and logic have been hard to follow, slow or dull – but tonight's amply manages to be all three.

Safari Race sees the seven remaining players using poker chips to back models of animals in a bid to be first across the finish line. Whispered conversations around the table, including exclamations of "split the crocs!" and "flamingo – one!", ring out in a puzzle that truly puts the bored into board game. Continues tomorrow at 9pm. FRANCES TAYLOR

9.00pm 5 Catch up via 5 streaming

Former detective Huw is more sure than ever that his neighbour Patrick is the Ripton Stalker, although nobody believes him. However, when the police make a gruesome discovery, it's obvious the stalker is still at large. Meanwhile, several unexplained events on the street lead everyone to suspect that Huw is responsible. We're learning how much Huw's obsession has damaged his family and friends. You'll find yourself holding your breath at Jason Watkins's portrayal of a man falling apart as he deals with his suspicions, guilt and paranoia. It gets a lot worse before tomorrow's conclusion. JR

HOUSE MATES Kirstie Allsopp and Phil Spencer are celebrating 25 years of property hunting

PROPERTY

Location, Location Location Night

from 8.00pm C4 Catch up via C4 streaming

Astonishingly, Kirstie Allsopp and Phil Spencer have been helping people locate, relocate, love and list their properties for a quarter of a century. The particulars of this celebratory night to mark Pip and Kirstle's milestone include two documentaries: 25 Years of Location, Location, Location at 9pm, followed by a compilation of the bits they probably didn't want us to see in Kirstie and Phil: Bleeps, Bloops and Best Bits.

These are top-and-tailed by a brand-new run of Location... at 8pm and, unmissably at 10.30pm, a repeat of the first ever episode, from 2000. The pair, as fresh as a new-build, stride about breathlessly as they search for a two-bed flat in London's Hackney for, gasp, £100,000. The queasy guerrilla-style film-making is charmingly reminiscent of the era; as is Phil having to phone London Travel Information to ascertain the time a commute would take. How quaint. FT

Garbo: Where Did You Go?

9.00pm Sky Arts Catch up via Now

Greta Gustafsson grew up in poverty, became the most famous actor in the world, and then, at the age of 36, disappeared. This profile makes sense of Garbo's unlikely journey and (despite laboured touches, including a papier-mâché mask that keeps appearing) includes enough luminous footage to convey the heavy-lidded mystique that made her a sensation arriving in Hollywood in 1925.

Garbo was scathing about her own films, few of which are much appreciated today. But boy did she crystallise the power of the Hollywood close-up. And you get a sense that maybe, after her disappearing act, she found peace. DBu

Alison Steadman Remembers... The Singing Detective

10.00pm BBC4 Catch up via iPlayer

By the time The Singing Detective aired in 1986, Dennis Potter was no stranger to controversy. But Alison Steadman recalls here being upset to find her picture in a tabloid beneath a headline about a BBC sex shocker.

That scene, in which Steadman's Mrs Marlow fornicates in the Forest of Dean, is a key but brief sequence, but it did, for a while, overshadow the series now seen as Potter's masterpiece. To mark what would have been the writer's 90th birthday on 17 May, we get to rejoin mystery author Philip Marlow (Michael Gambon) in his hospital bed, as his mind takes a hallucinatory journey back into the past... DAVID BROWN

FILM REVIEWS

FILM OF THE DAY

Carol ★★★★★ 11.20pm-1.45am Film4 15

ROMANTIC DRAMA Happy birthday Cate Blanchett, who turns 56 today. Film4 are celebrating with a showing of Charlotte Gray (see review below) and then this beautiful adaptation of Patricia Highsmith's lesbian novel The Price of Salt. Trapped in a marriage of convenience, uptown Cate Blanchett begins an affair with naive shop girl Rooney Mara, but this is early 1950s Manhattan and scandal beckons. With its two high-calibre leads exercising coiffed poise in every fabulous frame, this is a poignant masterpiece. It is followed by an interview special in which Blanchett discusses making the film. ALAN JONES (UK/US 2015, swearing, sex scenes, HD)

The Great Northfield Minnesota Raid ★★★

2.05-4.00pm 5 Action 12

WESTERN This foray into American folk-hero territory concerns the bank heist carried out by Jesse James and his gang, with Robert Duvall as James and Cliff Robertson as his cousin Cole Younger. The film lacks pace, but looks so authentic that you expect the brown-hued edges to curl like a vintage photo. TOM HUTCHINSON (US 1972, may be edited for content, HD)

The Admirable Crichton ★★★

2.50-4.40pm Film4 U

COMEDY ADVENTURE This is a fine version of JM Barrie's comic play about a butler who shows his leadership skills when his aristocratic family becomes shipwrecked. Kenneth More's genial urbanity shines through as Crichton, while Diane Cilento and Sally Ann Howes play the women vying for his affections on a desert island. TH (UK 1957, HD)

The Sundowners ★★★

3.00-4.45pm
Talking Pictures TV U

WESTERN Director George Templeton's agreeable film rests on the roguish charm of Robert Preston, playing a hellraiser who upsets the life of his rancher brother (Robert Sterling) when he steps in to help with cattle rustlers. Alan LeMay (The Searchers) scripted and produced, as well as appearing uncredited as one of Preston's companions. ALLEN EYLES (US 1950)

Charlotte Gray ★★

6.30-9.00pm Film4 15

WAR ROMANCE Cate Blanchett plays the young Scot who volunteers as a spy and parachutes into France to find her lover in Gillian Armstrong's unconvincing adaptation of Sebastian Faulks's wartime novel. Blanchett is a class act, but she is let down by the movie's emphasis on romance rather than derring-do. TH (UK/Aus/Ger 2001, edited for content, HD)

Lucky Number Slevin ★★★

9.00-11.20pm
Great Movies 18

COMEDY THRILLER In this playfully convoluted film from Paul McGuigan (Film Stars Don't Die in Liverpool), Josh Hartnett plays a young smart mouth caught between rival gang leaders (Morgan Freeman and Ben Kingsley), who each appear to be employing the same hitman (Bruce Willis). The script provides Hartnett with some zingy one-liners. ADAM SMITH (US 2006, violence, swearing)

Trespass ★★

9.00-11.00pm Legend Xtra 15

CRIME THRILLER Known for his muscular direction in films such as Southern Comfort, Walter Hill seems to have lost his touch with the years. Here two firemen (Bill Paxton and William Sadler) discover a map that points to a cache of gold in a disused factory that is the base of a local drug gang. The unlikely premise is buoyed up by standard thrills and scattershot humour. JOHN MARRIOTT (US 1992, violence, swearing, drug abuse)

Alien: Resurrection ★★★★

10.45pm-12.50am ITV4 18

SCI-FI ACTION Set 200 years after the events of *Alien*³, this fourth film in the franchise sees Ripley (Sigourney Weaver) cloned because she's carrying an alien queen foetus. The film boasts some scintillating set pieces, while the cast includes Winona Ryder and Ron Perlman. It's tense, mordantly funny and bloody, with Weaver on great form. ALAN JONES (US 1997, violence, swearing, nudity, HD)

Radio Days ★★★★

Talking Pictures TV PG

PERIOD COMEDY This underrated entry in Woody Allen's canon is a delightful examination of childhood and the process of memory. Evoking Allen's own formative years, the story cuts from a crowded family home in Brooklyn to the empty glamour of Radioland. Mia Farrow heads a splendid cast, which includes a 13-year-old Seth Green as Allen's young alter ego. DAVID PARKINSON (US 1987, some swearing, nudity)

Proxima ★★★

1.45-4.00am Film4 12

DRAMA In this pensive, poignant slice of sci-fi, an astronaut and single mother (Eva Green) faces a tough choice when a mission to a space station demands she be parted from her daughter for more than a year. Green is a powerful presence, while young Zélie Boulant-Lemesle pulls at the heartstrings as her more pragmatic offspring. TERRY STAUNTON (Fr/Ger 2019, swearing, brief nudity, HD)

JUST THE FACTS
Zoe Kazan and Carey Mulligan play the journalists who exposed Harvey Weinstein

FILM

P She Said ★★★★ 15

9.00pm Film4 Catch up via C4 streaming

This sharply directed 2022 film dramatises the New York Times investigation that resulted in the 2017 downfall of movie mogul Harvey Weinstein. Carey Mulligan and Zoe Kazan give believable turns as the reporters whose work would lead to scores of women going on the record with allegations against the producer and Miramax founder. But the screenplay, adapted by Rebecca Lenkiewicz from the journalists' 2018 book, really sings when giving space and voice to the accusers and their experiences.

One-time Miramax stars Ashley Judd and (in voice only) Gwyneth Paltrow lend weight to proceedings playing themselves, while fellow Weinstein accuser Sarah Ann Masse pops up to play a reporter. Angela Yeoh and Jennifer Ehle provide standout contributions with sensitively handled but rather gripping interview scenes, as does Samantha Morton – who has known the woman she plays, Zelda Perkins, since the 1990s. "I told her I'd only do it if she was happy," said Morton. "It was all about Zelda." CALUM BAKER Film reviews: page 95

Eurovision Song Contest Semi-Final

8.00pm BBC1 Catch up via iPlayer

After the first semi-final on Tuesday, Rylan and Scott Mills return to commentate on the second batch of entrants in Basel, Switzerland. It's another pick 'n' mix bag, including Australia with the part-hilarious, part-downright creepy Milkshake Man ("I've got chocolate, vanilla and lactose free!") and one of this year's favourites, Austria's JJ, with a blend of pop, house music and opera that features a few notes only dogs will be able to hear.

Also on stage will be the UK's entry: girlband Remember Monday with What the Hell Just Happened? As part of the "Big Five", they won't be reliant on votes to get to Saturday's final. Which is possibly, er, just as well. FRANCES TAYLOR

This week's star patient is Marge the tortoise, whose large overgrown shell means that she's struggling to retreat back inside it. Julian Norton must perform a delicate procedure, which involves using an oscillating saw to cut the shell back down to size. He must be careful, however, not to catch Marge's neck, or his own finger.

Peter Wright treats a working spaniel with a nasty toe injury. Matt Smith (not that one) is put through his paces while dehorning some lively cows. And Rohin Aojula must operate on a pregnant goat who has been rushed to hospital after struggling to give birth to her twin kids. He must act fast to save both mother and babies. STEPHEN KELLY

Marie Antoinette

9.00pm BBC2 Full series on iPlayer

You might like to alternate episodes of this smart historical drama with the excellent Carême on AppleTV+. In that series, the French monarchy has fallen, but in this one, it's only 1784 and the palace is merely cracking at the foundations. This week, an event looms that is more fraught with danger in 18th-century France than at perhaps any other time and place: plans are afoot to stage a comic play.

Louis XVI (Louis Cunningham) is assured that it will be "a frivolous entertainment of no consequence", but the backstage backstabbing soon threatens to be lethal. The king ends up embodying one of the iron rules of the court: if you're having to shout "I AM KING!" at your nearest and dearest, the wheels really are starting to come off. JACK SEALE

LAST EPISODE

Oh, that sly wink Patrick (Robson Green) gave Huw (Jason Watkins) at the end of last night's episode was creepy. He's proved himself to be a master at messing with people's heads, slipping in and out of their homes and playing mind games with them... all the while maintaining a charming, friendly persona. "Well, it's got to end somehow," says Huw when the pair finally confront each other. And it does – in a very dramatic way.

Tom Grieves has given us a psychological thriller that isn't so much a whodunnit as a will-they-ever-catch-him, while Green and Watkins as the cat and mouse playing this deadly game have been terrific. JANE RACKHAM

Poker Face

9.00pm Sky Max Catch up via Now

You may have heard of Cocaine Bear, but watch out, because here comes an even deadlier threat – Meth Gator. Yes, this week's killer is a large reptile with a taste for Oreos and high on amphetamine who's eaten her owner, a Florida-based cop and TikTok star played by guest actor Kumail Nanjiani.

But detective Charlie (Natasha Lyonne) believes that a human hand must have influenced the actions of Daisy the Alligator. And now that the Mob are no longer on her tail, she can take some time to sink her teeth into this mystery. DAVID BROWN

Murdoch Mysteries

9.00pm U&Alibi Catch up via Now

There's not so much a nudge as a shove this week when it comes to the parallels the writers are hoping we'll find between period drama and modern-day reality. Picture the scene: a speechmaker stoking anger is almost assassinated while at the podium and, following this attempt on his life, raises a defiant fist to the crowd. Remind you of anyone?

Here, though, it's not an election being fought but rather a depiction of the conflict between Protestants and Catholics, who are at odds over a ban on a St Patrick's Day march. Yet the sometimes-heavy-handed points made about bigotry and division apply, of course, to so many areas of our current political discourse. DB

HOME HELPS Patrick Bradley and Helen Skelton head to Wales

Forever Home

7.00pm (8.00pm Wales) BBC2 Available now on iPlayer

Grand Designs* with a twist... How many TV pitches must have used that line over the years? And here, it's not really a full-on twist, more a half-twist, and with two presenters instead of one – Helen Skelton and architect Patrick Bradley in the cabin of a quirky vintage truck.

The nice young couple they follow rebuilding a house have relocated from London, where they met, back to the Welsh countryside – because returning home from the big city is the theme of this well-screwed-together pilot. The house is more or less derelict, but Jess and Colin have grand, er, plans for it. Not terribly sympathetic plans, if you ask me, but big and impressive. And of course, they have a madly optimistic timeframe. The caption on the opening sequence is October 2021. DAVID BUTCHER

Taskmaster 9.00pm C4 Catch up via C4 streaming

The editors on Taskmaster distil hours of pre-filmed and chaotic task attempts into slick, funny packages to play out in the studio for Greg Davies and Alex Horne's amusement. But over the years, many a contestant has been lulled into a false sense of security by some apparently impressive footage of a challenge they've completed, only for Horne to suggest they "play a bit more" to reveal what really happened.

I bring this up because this happens twice in this week's episode, which includes a hunt for a "cheese phone" and a cape-based puzzle. One contestant's solution to a task is revealed to include a surprise rule-break; another's race to the finish is unmasked as a slow plod to the solution. Basically, don't believe everything you see – those rascally editors can't be trusted. HUW FULLERTON

Penelope

10.00pm, 10.35pm Sky Atlantic Catch up via Now

SERIES FINALE

What, if anything, will finally force teenage runaway turned skilled forest survivor Penelope (the brilliantly still and calm Megan Stott) to give up her solitary life?

If you'd guessed that the onset of winter in Washington state's remotest woodland might be hard to take, you'd be right – but there's a bigger calamity coming, in a scene with a sudden energy that jolts us out of our bucolic daze. And although you might have guessed the basic shape of events that see Penelope reluctantly interacting with buildings, humans and technology once again, the final episode of this extraordinary drama ends in a way that you certainly won't predict. JS

FILM OF THE DAY

P She Said ★★★★ 9.00-11.35pm Film4 15

DRAMA This tense drama depicts the true story of how two New York Times journalists (played by Zoe Kazan and Carey Mulligan) broke the story about Harvey Weinstein, leading to dozens of women coming forward to reveal they were sexually abused by the Hollywood producer. Maria Schrader's methodical, moving film feels like a spiritual cousin to such investigative classics as All the President's Men and Spotlight. Ashley Judd, the first star to go on the record, plays herself, while Samantha Morton and Jennifer Ehle excel as two ex-employees who share their experiences. JAMES MOTTRAM (US 2022, swearing, sexual references, HD)

Nell Gwyn ★★★

10.00-11.25am Talking Pictures TV U

HISTORICAL DRAMA Herbert Wilcox's bawdy movie about Charles II's mistress offended the US censors but was a box-office smash back home. Cedric Hardwicke has a rare old time as Charles, but Anna Neagle is just a touch too refined as Nell and comes off second best to Jeanne de Casalis as the Duchess of Portsmouth. DAVID PARKINSON (UK 1934, BW)

The Return of the Man from UNCLE ★★

11.00am-12.50pm Legend PG

SPY ADVENTURE Nostalgia rules in this resurrection of the 1960s TV show. Napoleon Solo (Robert Vaughn) and Ilya Kuryakin (David McCallum) are lured out of retirement to stop an evil THRUSH agent from holding the world to nuclear ransom. Ray Austin's direction is a bit lacklustre, but Vaughn and McCallum still have great chemistry. ROBERT SELLERS (US TVM 1983)

Undefeated ★★★★★

12 noon-2.15pm Sky Documentaries 12

DOCUMENTARY In a run-down corner of Tennessee, a volunteer football coach battles to help a high school team overcome over 100 years of underachievement. It sounds like the stuff of too many sports dramas, but this Oscar-winning documentary is the real thing. It's an inspirational film. TREVOR JOHNSTON (US 2011, swearing)

The Tall T ★★★★ 1.00-2.45pm Great Action PG

WESTERN Cowpoke Randolph Scott hitches a stagecoach ride with wealthy newlyweds John Hubbard and Maureen O'Sullivan, who are held up by outlaw Richard Boone. The film is superbly shot – almost entirely outdoors – by director Budd Boetticher, and the vivid landscape greatly enhances the drama. ALLEN EYLES (US 1957, may be edited for violence)

The Devil at Four o'Clock ★★★

4.05-6.40pm Film4 PG

DISASTER ADVENTURE Park your brain and enjoy Hollywood lurch into the 1960s – exploding volcano and all – in Mervyn LeRoy's Pacific island-set hokum. Cast as an agnostic convict, Frank Sinatra gets a chance to act with his idol Spencer Tracy, who never turned down an opportunity to play a priest, his original calling. It's compulsive viewing. TONY SLOMAN (US 1961, HD)

The Texas Rangers ★★★

4.15-6.00pm Great Action

WESTERN This brisk film sees outlaw Johnny Carver (George Montgomery) given a chance to redeem himself by fabled Texas Ranger John B Jones (John Litel). Factual accuracy isn't a priority, but director Phil Karlson packs his story with real-life frontier figures, including John Wesley Hardin and Dave Rudabaugh. DAVID PARKINSON (US 1951)

Brooklyn ★★★★

7.30-9.10pm BBC4 12

See Film of the Day, p55. (UK/Ire 2015, swearing, a sex scene, HD)

Mallrats ★★★ 10.00-11.55pm Comedy Central 18

COMEDY Director Kevin Smith's follow-up to Clerks is an underrated comic look at pop Americana, junk culture and adolescent angst. It focuses on a pair of slackers (Jeremy London and Jason Lee) mooching around the local shopping mall after being dumped by their girlfriends. ALAN JONES (US 1995, swearing, a sex scene, drug abuse, nudity, HD)

In the Heights ★★★★★

10.15pm-12.30am BBC4 PG

See review p45. (US 2020, swearing, sexual references, HD)

I Am Bruce Lee ★★★★

1.40-3.40am Sky Arts 15

DOCUMENTARY This appreciation of the martial arts icon is both fresh and revealing. Rarely seen archive footage (including Lee teaching James Coburn in his back garden) dovetails with judicious footage from TV interviews and unforgettable film performances. Soundbites from family, friends and admirers add to the all-round interest. JEREMY ASPINALL (Can 2012, violence, swearing, HD)

Trespass against Us ★★★

1.45-3.55am Film4 15

CRIME DRAMA Brendan Gleeson and Michael Fassbender play the father/son leaders of a lawless "traveller" tribe. After Gleeson asks his son to ram-raid a high-ranking official's house, police pressure mounts on the rag-tag bunch. The story has pace and vigour, but some may struggle with the dialect-heavy dialogue. DAVE ALDRIDGE (UK 2016, swearing, HD)

Hidden Treasures of the National Trust

*9.00pm (9.30pm Wales) BBC2
Catch up via iPlayer

A winning mix of history and restoration, this series returns with a peek inside the retreats of three literary legends. The first is Hill Top, the Lake District cottage where Beatrix Potter wrote 13 classic children's books, including The Tale of Two Bad Mice. In Dorset we see inside Clouds Hill, where TE Lawrence wrote Seven Pillars of Wisdom. It's remarkably spartan, with little furniture and no toilet or sink. The final place is Henry James's much-loved, grand Georgian home – Lamb House in Rye.

However, this isn't just about interesting buildings and the people who look after them. We also get to see the painstaking and fascinating work that goes on in the National Trust's conservation studios: the shabby furnishings of Potter's doll's house that inspired her story about the naughty rodents, a Henry Tuke painting that features a familiar-looking figure in the foreground; and James's writing desk, which needs patching up. It's a bit like watching The Repair Shop... without the current owners' emotional stories. JANE RACKHAM

COME ON IN Beatrix Potter's Hill Top home. Inset: a peek inside the writer's doll's house

CURRENT AFFAIRS

Political Thinking with Nick Robinson

12.30pm BBC2 Catch up via iPlayer

The Today presenter's reflective interview series – "a conversation with, not an interrogation of" political figures, as he always reminds us – has been a Radio 4 fixture and BBC Sounds podcast since 2017. Now, the extended studio encounters are being regularly televised. Robinson probes those who shape our political thinking about what shaped their own. As well as MPs, guests include campaigners, trade union leaders and diplomats, and the occasional archbishop and influencer. As the host says: "Now, more than ever, there's a need to get beyond soundbites and shareable clips to understand the views of those who shape our lives – their backgrounds, their stories, their values." MICHAEL HOGAN

SOAP

Emmerdale

7.30pm ITV1 Catch up via ITVX

Stag and hen parties can easily get out of hand, but with best man Mack eager to expose groom John's sinister secrets, the stakes were always higher than someone ending up tied to a lamppost in their underwear. Mack is convinced that John is not to be trusted, and he's right: the medic killed Nate (accidentally) and disposed of the body, among other misdemeanours. John is gripped by a saviour complex, which has led to a serious incident resulting in his nephew Harry being poisoned. If Mack continues to push his buttons, John's compulsion to do good may go out the window. Aaron remains oblivious to his fiancé's true colours. All he wanted was a fun day of paintballing and pints. JOHNATHON HUGHES

SOAP

Coronation Street

8.00pm ITV1 Catch up via ITVX

EastEnders gave us Jaime Winstone as a 1980s iteration of Peggy as part of Phil's psychosis; Emmerdale revisited the 1990s for Ruby's traumatic 16th birthday party. Now, Corrie jumps on the flashback bandwagon and takes us back to 2007 (anyone else feel like that was only a few weeks ago?) in order to shed some light on Kit's mysterious past. Since the mercurial cop was introduced last year as Bernie's long-lost son, little has been revealed about his pre-Weatherfield life. The blanks are filled in tonight during a series of scenes set 18 years ago, when the teenage Kit – who was inexplicably tall even then – knocked about with Mick and Lou, and we discover some dark secrets that still link the three of them today. JH

TRAVEL

Cruising with Susan Calman

8.00pm 5 Catch up via My5

In an episode first shown in February, Susan Calman checks a hugely popular trip off her "cruise bucket list", sailing around Greece and Turkey to take in some of the most visited places on the planet. "So, my challenge," she chortles happily, "is to balance the iconic with the tranquil." Her introduction to life on board – taking part in a frenzied dance session – looks anything but tranquil, though.

She also has fun flirting with the captain and enjoying a food tour of Thessaloniki (cue a lot of face-pulling), but she loves seeing the ancient ruins of Ephesus, learning about Santorini's surprising treasure, partying in Mykonos and finding a hidden gem on Milos. JR

Martin Clunes's Islands of the Atlantic

LAST IN SERIES

The Faroe Islands, an archipelago of 18 islands midway between Scotland and Iceland, are home to more sheep than humans but Martin Clunes finds plenty of people to talk to. They're tough but friendly, and Clunes happily chats to a female farmer (but grimaces when trying her fermented lamb), dives for horse mussels, creeps up on Atlantic puffins and rocks out with a Viking heavy metal band. Then he's off to Greenland where his mind is blown by the spectacular icy landscape.

No matter what Clunes is asked to do, he does it with a cheery openness, genuine interest and a big grin. JR

COMEDY DRAMA

Hacks *9pm, 9.40pm Sky Max

Catch up via Now

If there's ever a Hacks spin-off, one set in the office of agents Jimmy (Paul W Downs) and Kayla (Megan Stalter) would be a hoot. The pair are reliable comic relief amid the clashes between Deborah (Jean Smart) and Ava (Hannah Einbinder), Deborah and daughter DJ (Kaitlin Olson) and Deborah and, well, everyone. The christening of DJ's baby son is days away, and the reason she wants Ava to be godmother is devastatingly touching. Also tonight, HR rep Stacey (Michaela Watkins) could be out of a job now Deborah and Ava are chummy again. FRANCES TAYLOR

Alison Hammond's Big Weekend

NEW SERIES

After Stacey Solomon and Joe Swash's recent reality show, BBC1 continues its mission to become Heat magazine made flesh. Now, Alison Hammond is spending a weekend with "your favourite celebrities" to "get all the gossip".

If you were wondering who your "favourite celebrities" are, the series will feature Jimmy Carr, Luke Evans, Mel B, Lenny Henry, Tony Bellew and, in tonight's first episode, former Little Mix singer Perrie Edwards. She welcomes Alison into her home for a show that could easily be mistaken for a half-hour segment on This Morning.

After rifling through the garage, Alison draws out of Perrie that she no longer speaks to former bandmate Jesy Nelson and that she has a panic disorder. The singer also opens up on the multiple operations she had as a child. FT The view from Alison Hammond's sofa: page 146

Gardeners' World

*8.00pm (8.30pm Wales) BBC2

Catch up via iPlayer

The RHS Chelsea Flower Show begins next week, and Gardeners' World viewers are waiting eagerly to see what impact Monty Don's dog-friendly garden will have. But of Chelsea's riches there is no end, and tonight GW brings us the Alpine Garden Society and what's involved in creating their colourful containers for the big event.

Meanwhile, colour is the order of the season at Longmeadow, with Monty planting foxgloves and sowing cosmos for cut flowers, as well as planting out his tomatoes. Ashley Edwards visits Cumbria's magnificent Holker Hall and its grand gardens. SIMON O'HAGAN

SITCOM

Austin

LAST IN SERIES

One of many curious aspects of this misfiring comedy is the way characters come and go. Austin's mother and grandfather (Gia Carides and Roy Billing) have followed him to the UK but, since they've done so in secret, they don't have a dramatic function. In this episode, they're just chatting in their car while visiting Stonehenge.

Ellie McKay has hardly been in it so far as Julian and Ingrid's daughter Florence and it's too late for her to save the series, but she brightens it instantly here, enjoying believable, funny, touching screen chemistry with Ingrid (Sally Phillips) and Austin (Michael Theo). The big event is a screening of the film about Austin and his long-lost family. JACK SEALE

FILM OF THE DAY

Scream ★★★ 11.05pm-1.10am C4 18

HORROR The fifth entry in the horror saga, and the first without Wes Craven in the director's chair, brings the series full circle with a "requel" (reboot/sequel) that embraces the past while setting out its own bold new vision. Twenty-five years after the events of the first movie, Ghostface is back terrorising a fresh set of Woodsboro teens, which inevitably prompts the return to action of perennial survivors Neve Campbell, David Arquette and Courteney Cox. Jenna Ortega is excellent in this film's take on the signature phone-call scene; her latest film, Hurry Up Tomorrow, is in cinemas from today. JOSH WINNING (US 2022, violence, swearing, HD)

Those People Next Door ★★ 9.25-11.00am Talking Pictures TV U

COMEDY There's an attempt to discuss class relations in this adaptation of Zelda Davees's play Wearing the Pants, yet it feels more like the pilot for a sitcom. It's set in 1941, and the initial focus is on the friendship between working class neighbours Jack Warner and Charles Victor, whose performances are better than the flat direction. DAVID PARKINSON (UK 1952, BW)

The Blue Lamp ★★★★ 11.00am-12.45pm Film4 PG

CRIME DRAMA Shot in documentary style, Basil Dearden's movie offered a realistic depiction of the austere times that pushed some people into crime. A pre-stardom Dirk Bogarde is outstanding as the petty crook whose confrontation with genial bobby Jack Warner produced one of the most memorable – and shocking – scenes in British film history. DP (UK 1949, BW, HD)

The Lawless Breed ★★★ 2.15-4.00pm 5 Action PG

WESTERN This biopic about outlaw John Wesley provided a star-making role for Rock Hudson. It follows Wesley as he takes to gambling in an attempt to escape his home life, but after killing a cardsharp, he goes on the run from the police. Hudson elicits sympathy, and the flashback structure elevates the film above the average B-feature. TONY SLOMAN (US 1952, may be edited for content, HD)

This Happy Breed ★★★★★ 3.35-5.50pm Talking Pictures TV U

DRAMA Adapted from Noël Coward's play, David Lean's film provides a fascinating picture of the way we were. The action is largely confined to a Clapham home and charts the ebb and flow of events during the interwar years. Celia Johnson is superb as the sensible housewife to Robert Newton's sound-as-a-pound hubby. DP (UK 1944)

Highlander III: the Sorcerer ★ 9.00-11.00pm Legend 15

See review p45. (Can/Fr/UK 1995, violence, swearing, sex scenes)

Bloodshot ★★ 9.00-11.10pm Film4 12

ACTION This run-of-the-mill Vin Diesel vehicle sees the star playing a special forces operative who is killed by a group of mercenaries and resurrected as a super-soldier. There's zero chemistry between Diesel and on-screen ally Eiza González, and the star only comes to life during the film's many so-so action scenes. VICTORIA LUXFORD (US/Chi 2020, violence, swearing, HD)

Woman Who Came Back ★★★ 10.10-11.30pm Talking Pictures TV

HORROR After surviving a bus crash, Lorna (Nancy Kelly) experiences visions of a wizened, black-veiled woman. When flowers start wilting at her touch, she begins to think she is cursed. With its echoes of Edgar Allan Poe, this is a well-staged chiller that excels in depicting the undercurrents of misogyny and hysteria of the time. DP (US 1945, BW)

Around the World in 80 Days ★★ 10.45pm-12.55am ITV1 PG

ADVENTURE Phileas Fogg (Steve Coogan) and his valet Passepartout (Jackie Chan) must circumnavigate the globe in record time to win a wager in this laboured take on Jules Verne's classic tale. Chan delivers his trademark martial arts rough and tumble along the way, while big-name cameos help to pass the time. GARETH MOSES (US/Ger/Ire/UK 2004, some violence, swearing, HD)

Bodies Bodies Bodies ★★★★ 11.30pm-1.00am BBC1 (starts at 12 midnight in Wales) 15

BLACK COMEDY A group of 20-somethings (including Rachel Sennott and Maria Bakalova) gather for a party at a mansion, only for things to descend into chaos when one of their number is found dead. This is a slickly made Gen Z re-imagining of And Then There Were None, with a corker of a final reveal. PATRICK CREMONA (US 2022, violence, swearing, drug abuse, HD)

Miss Peregrine's Home for Peculiar Children ★★★★ 1.30-4.00am Film4 12

FANTASY Tim Burton's gothic fairy tale is set on an island home for children cursed with special powers. Eva Green is great as the kids' carer, with Asa Butterfield as a new arrival. The rules of this strange universe are a tad convoluted, but Burton fans will feel spoiled by the enchanting weirdness and spine-tingling thrills. STELLA PAPAMICHAEL (US 2016, violence, HD)

ANIMAL MAGIC

Landmine-detecting rats and drug-sniffing bees are just some of the creatures performing new niche jobs

The Animal Employment Agency
Wednesday 3.30pm Radio 4

"I think pandas are overrated," says Simon Watt, author, comedian, evolutionary biologist and the man behind the Ugly Animal Preservation Society. "And I can say what I want because people who care about the panda are already on my team – they care [about conservation] and want to make a difference."

Pandas only cropped up because we were discussing the collective nouns for animals (for pandas it's an "embarrassment"). A "business" of ferrets features in Radio 4's The Animal Employment Agency, in which Watt highlights certain niche jobs where only an animal will do. "Despite the technology, AI and robotics available today," he says, "animals are still smashing it."

Animals like Ronin, an African giant pouched rat, who was recognised by The Guinness Book of World Records last month after uncovering 109 landmines in Cambodia since 2021. Ronin was trained by Apopo, the same non-profit organisation in Tanzania as Jones, the HeroRat (as they're known) encountered by Watt while recording the documentary. "Their sense of smell, trainability and extraordinary problem-solving intelligence, plus their size and ability to walk on landmines without triggering them, means they can significantly speed up operations," he says. "Ethically, they are following their natural instincts, and they're rewarded in both an emotional sense and with food as they build a relationship with their trainer."

HeroRats are also more efficient than humans and can check an area the size of a tennis court in 30 minutes whereas a person with a metal detector might take four days. Ferrets, too, are "way better than humans or machines in their field of expertise". Which is? "They go into walls and find a way out," says Watt. "They can be sent down a pipe and, wearing little telemetry trackers, discover a blockage that means you don't have to rip up 100m of the central business district."

The National Ferret School in Derbyshire (yes, really) takes advantage of ferrets' long, sinewy bodies and ultra-flexible spines when training them to lay fibre optic cable. But, despite having a higher number of olfactory receptor neurons than most animals, their application for "detection by smell" work is not a natural fit temperamentally – unlike, bizarrely, for bees.

"Bees have got incredible 'classical conditioning,'" says Watt. "If you get a bee to associate sugar with a certain scent, it will do it at the second time of asking. It learns that quickly. The research is ongoing, but a device to capitalise on this would look a little like an old tape cassette case with the bees hooked up in a line and their heads peeking out, a bit like a stable of horses. Once they're trained to associate sugar with a particular scent such as Semtex or cocaine, a proboscis will pop out when they smell it as if they're going to have a lick of sugar and that will break a laser beam and tell you instantly. The fact that they associate so well means that there is no need for weeks of training, as is the case with dogs."

Sniffer dogs have, of course, been hanging around airports for years, but Watt's documentary extols their ability in another area. "Anecdotally, there have been stories for years about dogs licking at a human mole that turns out to be skin cancer, but we still don't know how they know. The scent profile of somebody who's got bladder cancer or bowel cancer can't be run through a machine yet, so dogs are going to be superior here until we can work out how they do it."

And it's not just cancers. "We meet Lauren," says Watt. "She has postural tachycardia syndrome (PoTS), which can mean she has seizures. Her dog is able to anticipate this and give her five minutes' notice to make sure that she's sitting somewhere safe. It has revolutionised her life."

As well as finding mines, giant pouched rats can also detect disease in humans and, for example, can sniff out tuberculosis quicker than a lab can diagnose it using microscopy. But a dog "will actually learn your other habits and idiosyncrasies to keep you safe," says Watt. "It will also provide companionship. Studies are beginning to show that if you cuddle a dog, your oxytocin, one of the happy chemicals, rises – but so does theirs and there is a desire as well as a capacity to actively help us. Plus, they're the right size to follow you around, which you can't say about a bee." Or a rat or robot.

"The other jobs that were historically undertaken by animals, such as transportation or pulling a plough, have been superseded by technology," says Watt, "But these guys will be around doing their thing for years to come."

The Essay: The Song Detectorists

Monday–Friday 9.45pm Radio 3

Fans of Matthew Bannister's podcast Folk on Foot will be delighted by these five essays. The "song detectorists", from Royal Holloway and Newcastle universities, seek out forgotten music in the archives of the English County Record offices. Bannister travels from Norfolk to Newcastle to uncover songs not heard for centuries. Best of all, we hear them performed by Nancy Kerr and the Melrose Quartet. The effect is truly magical. Welcome to Holland

Monday–Friday 1.45pm Radio 4

"If you spend your life mourning the fact that you didn't get to Italy, you may never be free to enjoy the very special, the very lovely things about Holland." This is an extract from a 1987 essay called Welcome to Holland by Emily Perl Kingsley that's often shared by parents who receive a diagnosis of life-changing conditions for their children. BBC presenter Katy Watson (above) read it after the birth of her son, Otis, and speaks with Kingsley and fellow parents about raising children in a world focused on trips to Italy rather than Holland. AJ

ARTS

Three Faces of DH Lawrence

Tuesday 4.00pm Radio 4

Few literary figures have been subject to changing tastes quite like DH Lawrence (below). By the 1980s, the rise of feminism had upended his status as iconoclast and poetic pioneer following the 1960 Lady Chatterley trial, his depiction of sex being regarded by some as misogynistic. Now, according to Michael Symmons Roberts, the presenter of this three-parter, he is "back in the cultural conversation". Fans and foes alike should respect the thoroughness and intelligence of this reappraisal. SIMON O'HAGAN

DRAMA DOCUMENTARY

Pretender Prince

Friday 2.15pm Radio 4

You wouldn't know it from his role as River Cartwright in Slow Horses, but Jack Lowden (right) is a proud Scot, well placed to narrate this weighty new five-part drama documentary series on the rise and fall of Bonnie Prince Charlie, leader of the 1745 Jacobite rising that intended to restore the Catholic Stuarts to the throne of Great Britain. A cast of historians adds commentary to Colin MacDonald's crisp script, while Lorn Macdonald brings the Young Pretender, likened to a 1970s rock god, to life in the dramatic scenes studded through the documentary. AMBRIDGE DIARY

The Archers

Sunday–Friday 7.00pm Radio 4

During a tense cricket match Lynda makes a discovery that leaves Lily (Katie Redford, above) with a lot of explaining to do and a struggle not to jeopardise the team's future. Rex faces more than one dilemma as he and Rochelle find themselves at a crossroads. The Bridge Farm Archers face a bombshell and a seemingly unsolvable mystery, David makes a radical decision and Usha makes a generous offer. DAVID CRAWFORD

TRUE CRIME

Heists, Scams and Lies

Tamara Ecclestone, daughter of F1 supremo Bernie Ecclestone, lives in a 55-room mansion in London's Kensington Palace Gardens. It was meant to be impenetrable, but in late 2019 thieves broke in and carted off jewels and other effects worth £25 million. Daily Mail crime correspondent George Odling and senior reporter Andy Jehring, who have followed the case for five years, speak with Tamara's husband Jay Rutland, police and acquaintances of the gang. Fascinating for true crime fans – but it hardly pulls on the heartstrings. ANNA JONES

PICK OF THE WEEK

Centuries of Sound

Be grateful for James Errington's determination to put together mixtapes of each year in recording history from 1859 to the present day for letting the rest of us know that in 1934 Henry Hall and his orchestra recorded a tune called Radio Times, which is surely ripe for revival. The full podcast versions of his eerie and stimulating collages, in the course of which a recording of a prayer being offered in Congress may give way to jazz quintet Hot Club de France or an announcer calling Seabiscuit home at Santa Anita, are available to Patreon supporters, but you can get a very strong sense of the experience on Errington's site (centuriesofsound.com), which is the mother of all rabbit holes. COMEDY

NonCensored

The mischievous 18 April episode of Rosie Holt's satirical series dares the lawyers to get in touch by posing as the official X podcast. Hilariously sending up the recent all-female space flight featuring Katy Perry and bankrolled by Jeff Bezos, it's hosted by none other than X owner Elon Musk – or an uncannily obnoxious impersonator. He shares his latest schemes and gripes, and his unique worldview, ably assisted by series stalwarts Harriet Langley-Swindon and Producer Martin. EMMA SIMMONDS

SOCIAL MEDIA

Vine: Six Seconds That Changed the World

For those who think TikTok has been around for ever, it's worth remembering that 12 years ago the app did not exist. Back then, it was Vine that blazed a trail for the near-instant, user-generated videos on your phone that are now ubiquitous. Yet within three years of launch, it was all over. This eight-part series charting the rise and fall of Vine is a cautionary tale that shines a light on a bizarre and often chaotic cultural phenomenon. TOM GOULDING

RELATIONSHIPS

The Affair... with Anna Williamson

This fascinating podcast capitalises on the format's inherent intimacy. In each episode, a (non-celebrity) guest tells the host, a trained counsellor and agony aunt, about an infidelity they or their partner had. We only know their first names, so they can be completely honest – as if they were in a real therapy session – which is both refreshing and revealing. Do heed the trigger warnings, though, as the stories can be traumatic as well as heartbreaking. MATT GLASBY

TRUE CRIME

Aftermath: Hunt for the Anthrax Killer

Amid the fallout from 9/11 and fears of a second attack, possibly from a bio-bomb, the FBI was swiftly mobilised when citizens became ill from exposure to deadly anthrax spores. Was it al-Qaeda terrorists? Saddam Hussain? Or were those behind weaponising the US Postal Service into a "terrorism delivery service" targeting US news outlets and Capitol Hill closer to home? False leads and politically charged suspicions guarantee a tortuous true-life tale. JEREMY ASPINALL

HEALTH

When Science Finds a Way

The podcast from Wellcome Trust returns for a second series in which Alisha Wainwright talks to the world's leading experts in the science of health. It's not all, as Wainwright puts it, "labs and white coats". Series one dealt with, for example, the possibility that AI will soon be capable of making a much earlier diagnosis of mental health disorders than a human is able to. As before, new episodes deal with technology that, to the layman, is excitingly cutting edge. DAVID McGILLIVRAY

CLIMATE CHANGE

Voice of the Sea Ice

Even if the tone is a touch breezy, the facts of this Radio New Zealand series are stark. The annual cycle of ice melting and freezing in Antarctica controls the world's climate – and it's changing. New Zealand scientists are leading research in the field but, with temperatures that drop to minus 60°C, Antarctica is a hostile place. Adding to the picture, the UK's Dr Daniel Price notes that the 800km "flat and white" drive to the research station is so lacking in stimulation that it causes the brain to slow down. FIONA HUGHES

RADIO

Frequency Funhouse

RT's own Face Behind the Voice column (see page 126) explores the often amusing world of local radio, and that's the spirit that Milly Luxford and Ian Crouch embrace as they celebrate a branch of broadcasting to which they have both devoted their careers, having first met many years ago on a station in West Sussex. Luxford confirms the existence of the "diva" presenter, but – Alan Partridges aside – local radio is cherishable for good reason, and here it finds two enthusiastic champions. SIMON O'HAGAN

Want to show off how well-read you are? Make a podcast

Let's say you're one of those university lecturers who's written a column bemoaning the fact that these days there's zero chance of students having actually read any of the books you're lecturing about. There's good news. Thanks to streaming media, there is now an alternative means of distributing your expertise, and there is an audience eager to drink deep of it. An audience who, what's more, have actually read the books, and like nothing more than being reminded of the fact. That means is podcasting – and that audience is made up of people over the age of 50 who are painting their spare rooms all over the world.

The LRB Podcast (the podcast offering from The London Review of Books) has a strand called "Close Readings". It recently took advantage of the impending meringue-shaped appearance of Margot Robbie in the new film adaptation of Emily Brontë's novel, setting academic David Trotter and writer Patricia Lockwood loose on what they call the "post-Kate Bush Wuthering Heights". This is deep end stuff, of course, made by people who read these books again every few years, unlike the rest of us, who spend the rest of our lives congratulating ourselves on having got through them once.

The Everest of 19th-century novels, not least because its slopes are littered with the corpses of people who never made it to the end, is of course George Eliot's Middlemarch. Virginia Woolf famously described it as "one of the few English novels written for grown-ups", which is what you call throwing shade.

Now, the deepest novel in the language lives all over again thanks to the most superficial of media. From Radio 4's In Our Time on BBC Sounds to The New Yorker's Rebecca Mead on YouTube, the streamiverse abounds with paeans of praise to this housebrick of a tome. Everyone has a different theory, but the one thing they most want to get across is the fact that they've read it. Having done so is the gift that goes on giving. Why else do you think I wrote this column?

Opera on 3: Puccini's Turandot

6.00pm Radio 3

Puccini called Turandot "a fable rather than an opera", and for some it remains his strangest work, an orientalist fever dream that follows plucky Prince Calaf's attempts to win the affections of the heartless Turandot, a princess with commitment issues who gives her suitors three riddles – fail and they face death. This supercharged version of a production first created by Andrei Serban at the Royal Opera House in 1984 returns with fresh vigour. Radio listeners will miss the visuals but Sondra Radvanovsky (above) in the titular role makes up for that – Turandot is a tough gig for a soprano and she's a leading interpreter of the part. Tenor SeokJong Baek's Prince Calaf risks all for love, and, as he makes clear in Nessun dorma, is supremely confident he'll pull it off. MICHAEL HODGES

Archive on 4: Philadelphia's Forgotten Bomb

8.00pm Radio 4

Forty years ago this week, a police helicopter dropped a bomb on an occupied house in the west of Philadelphia, killing 11 people, five of them children, and sparking a conflagration that destroyed 61 homes while firefighters stood by. But why? Linn Washington witnessed the event and now charts the decade-long conflict between MOVE – a radical, back-to-nature organisation of mainly black members and led by the eccentric but redoubtable John Africa – and their neighbours, the authorities and a police force notorious for violence and brutality. He also asks how such a catastrophic incident could be so little remembered. JEREMY ASPINALL

TODAY'S CHOICES

Desert Island Discs

10.00am Radio 4

Two great British institutions, together at last. Danny Dyer's 25-year-plus career has been as colourful his language, from playing a Cardiff raver in the 1999 movie Human Traffic to the Queen Vic's landlord on EastEnders from 2013 to 2022. Now back in cinemas in Marching Powder, his fifth larger-than-life collaboration with writer-director Nick Love, the ever-quotable actor (above) pops up as Lauren Laverne's guest on UK radio's longest-running factual show. Though he's never short of a soundbite or two, listeners can expect to hear a more sensitive side as he talks about his dad leaving and how his early experiences of fame sent him off the rails. He also looks back at his time working with Harold Pinter and dedicates a song to his dear old mum. Don't miss this one. MATT GLASBY

VE Day 80: A Swinging Celebration

8.00pm Radio 2

As part of the build-up to the 80th anniversary of VE Day on 8 May, the BBC presented this expertly curated, movingly nostalgic concert at London's glorious Alexandra Palace Theatre on 23 April. Now many more of us can enjoy it. There are some wonderful featured artists, including Anna-Jane Casey with her tributes to Doris Day and (of course) Vera Lynn; Gary Wilmot leading a singalong of wartime hits; and swing revivalist Ray Gelato performing numbers by one of his inspirations, Louis Jordan. But the focus will be on the BBC Big Band playing Opus One, One O'Clock Jump and other classics, as foot-tapping today as they were 80 years ago. DAVID McGILLIVRAY

6.30am Breakfast With Mark Forrest.
9.00 Sunday Morning
With Sarah Walker, today featuring highlights of a new recording of the Fourth Symphony by Franz Lachner (1803–90). Plus operatic greatness from Wagner, a glorious setting of the Magnificat by Palestrina, and Robert Schumann at his most romantic.
12.00 Private Passions
Michael Berkeley welcomes theatre director Emma Rice, whose career has been marked by bold stagings of much-loved films and books, including Brief Encounter, Wuthering Heights and The Red Shoes. In 2016 Rice became artistic director of Shakespeare's Globe in London, though her tenure ended after two years following disagreements with the board. She has since founded her own touring theatre company, Wise Children, whose recent productions include an adaptation of Alfred Hitchcock's film North by Northwest. Her music choices include Tchaikovsky, Rachmaninov, Mozart and Bach.
1.30pm Music Map
Sara Mohr-Pietsch explores an American favourite, Scott Joplin's 1902 piano rag The Entertainer, which hit big in the US and the UK in 1974 owing to its inclusion in George Roy Hill 1973 blockbuster The Sting. The compatible playlist includes the marches of Sousa, dancing two-steps from Tchaikovsky and Bach, African Juba dances kept alive by slaves in the Deep South, and other rags from Gershwin and Elena Kats-Chernin.
3.00 Choral Evensong
Wednesday's service from the chapel of Jesus College, Cambridge. Introit: My Beloved Spake (Hadley). Responses: Philip Moore. Psalm 37 (Howells, Howells, Howells, Howells). First Lesson: Genesis 3, vv8–21. Canticles: Stanford in B flat. Second Lesson: 1 Corinthians 15, vv12–28. Anthem: My Soul, There Is a Country (Parry). Voluntary: Elegie (Parry). (R)
4.00 Jazz Record Requests
Alyn Shipton with classics by Count Basie, Miles Davis and Thelonious Monk and recent releases from Jacqui Dankworth and, collaboratively, Georgia Mancio and Alan Broadbent.
5.00 The Early Music Show
With Hannah French, tonight presenting festival highlights of the European debut concert given by ensemble Quicksilver, recorded in May of last year at Tage Alter Musik Regensburg. With chamber music by Legrenzi, Schmelzer, Bertali, Castello and Kerll, who all were active in Vienna in the early 17th century.
6.00 Words and Music
An edition first broadcast in June 2020, on the 50th anniversary of the death of novelist EM Forster, with his celebrated epigraph "Only connect" to Howards End providing the theme. (R)
7.15 Sunday Feature: Make Everybody as Uneasy as Possible: Edward Gorey at 100
Radio 3 marks the centenary year of Chicago-born book illustrator, Tony-winning costume designer and artist Edward Gorey (1925–2000), who once stated that his mission in life was to "make everybody as uneasy as possible". In this programme British author, illustrator and political cartoonist Chris Riddell (the Ottoline and Goth Girl series) invites friends, caretakers, biographers and admirers to explore and critique the myths, legends and truths about Gorey, including his place in the gothic canon. Julie Teal, Katherine Fenton and Mark Elstob read passages from The Fatal Lozenge (1960) and The Willowdale Handcar (1962). Producer Mollie Davidson
8.00 Brass Banding with Hannah Peel
3/10. Hannah Peel explores lesser-known locations where brass banding is thriving. In this next instalment she meets percussionist Cathryn Hurst, who got into music through banding. Shining a light on the competitive bands flourishing in the Midlands, Peel relives an exciting moment from the National Brass Band Championships of Great Britain. Plus the premiere performance of a work by Peter Graham (from April at the Big Brass Blowout in Bradford), Errollyn Wallen's piece for trombone ensemble, and a brass arrangement of Elgar's Enigma Variations.
9.00 20th Century Radicals
Gillian Moore explores the theatrical, satirical world of the Buenos Aires-born composer Mauricio Kagel, concentrating on his 1964 work Match. In the 1950s Kagel fled to Europe, where greater freedom allowed him to experiment, leading to Match, a tennis-inspired piece written for two competing cellists, separated on stage by a percussionist umpire.
10.00 Ultimate Calm
4/12. In this themed instalment, Hania Rani presents a playlist designed to allow listeners to "disappear into darkness" and "let go of worldly worries". Featuring music by Holst and recordings by Ryuichi Sakamoto and Nala Sinephro. And in the Safe Haven feature, pioneering video game designer Hideo Kojima (the Metal Gear franchise) shares the music he turns to when he needs to find ultimate calm. The entire series is available on BBC Sounds station Radio 3 Unwind.
11.00 The Night Tracks Mix
11.30 Unclassified With Elizabeth Alker.

Book of the Week: The North Road

11.45am/12.30am Radio 4

When Rob Cowen's father, an amateur archaeologist, suggested visiting Roman and Anglian remains in Yorkshire – one of many digs to have opened up alongside the A1 during a major upgrading of the road – he sparked a fascination in his son that culminated in this book. The award-winning writer decided to see what other ghosts of the Great North Road, the London-Edinburgh backbone of Britain, he could find by travelling the 400-mile route, on the way recovering histories of places and people, including his own family. The journey proves both epic and exhilarating. FIONA HUGHES

Radio 3 in Concert

7.30pm Radio 3

Ahead of the 2025 Proms, Radio 3 offers performances from some of the orchestras and soloists who will be coming to the Royal Albert Hall. First up, the French National Orchestra, here joined by fabulous French pianist Alexandre Kantorow – who you might remember playing in the rain at the opening ceremony of the 2024 Paris Olympics. Possibly even better with a roof over his head, he takes on Chopin's Second Piano Concerto before the band go big for Prokofiev's Romeo and Juliet. MICHAEL HODGES

TODAY'S CHOICES

Drama: Four Gammons and a Unicorn

2.15pm Radio 4

Rebellious teenagers secretly want to run with the pack. What's more, they don't appreciate being generalised about like that. These contradictions and many more are at the heart of this pacy, forthright satire about a young woman navigating a university campus in the throes of a culture war. Katie Sayer's tough parody reproduces all the noise of the social media battleground and exposes the absurdities of our age. In an onslaught of knowing digs at media habits, it tracks the fortunes of the unapologetic Imogen, played by Alyth Ross, who "smashes avocados as well as taboos". But how long before Imogen's own vulnerabilities trip her up? VANESSA THORPE

Crossing Continents

9.00pm Radio 4

The civil war in Syria that began in 2011 left half the population without homes. Tim Whewell has been following some of those returning to Homs, the third largest city in Syria, much of which is now in ruins. "What strikes you most is the sheer scale of the displacement," Whewell tells RT. "There's still no national programme to bring people back…the returnees have to fend for themselves when they arrive." Whewell was also shocked by the predicament of the "sad and disillusioned" Alawite people. The war is not over for them.

TODAY'S CHOICES

Mrs Dalloway

3.00pm/9.00pm R4 Extra

Virginia Woolf's sympathetic literary heroine, Clarissa Dalloway, inhabits a comfortably sheltered urban world, and yet feels the fragility of each moment acutely. Perhaps for this reason, the novel has lived on in readers' imaginations for a century now. Fenella Woolgar (above) plays the title role in this 100th anniversary broadcast of a 2012 production, taking listeners on a switchback ride of emotions over a single day in June. As a dinner party looms, romantic memories are stirred. Michelene Wandor's two-part adaptation delicately weaves together the thoughts of this sensitive middle-aged society hostess with the fate of a man she scarcely meets, the delusional war veteran Septimus Warren Smith, played touchingly by Paul Ready.

Radio 3 in Concert

7.30pm Radio 3

Continuing a week of Radio 3 concerts showcasing talents appearing at this year's Proms, we hear the Budapest Festival Orchestra. Under Ivan Fischer, they're an innovative orchestra that delivers full-on. Does that approach suit the melodic sweep and punch of Johannes Brahms? You bet it does, as we'll find out when they take on four works by the great German romantic in a concert recorded at the Victoria Hall in Geneva, with guest pianist Vadym Kholodenko. MICHAEL HODGES

With the Rev Lucy Winkett.

9.00 Life Changing
5/7. To raise some money as they prepared to get married, yachtsman Robin Elsey Webb and his partner Liz became crew members on a boat at a regatta in Antigua. For Robin the skilled sailor, and Liz who was fairly new to life on the ocean, it was idyllic – that is, until walking home to the crew house on his own, Robin was attacked violently. He suffered severe head injuries, and his survival depended on Liz making swift and bold decisions about his treatment. The pair join Sian Williams to piece together their own very different experiences of that terrifying ordeal, which changed so many things for both of them. Producer Tom Alban Rptd Fri 4.30pm

9.30 Half-Life

TODAY'S CHOICES

Kiri Pritchard-McLean: Tough Crowd

6.30pm Radio 4

She's taken part in all kinds of comedy shows on radio and TV, but this one-off sounds to me as if it's very close to the "real" Kiri Pritchard-McLean (above). It's a cut-down version of her current tour, Peacock, in which she reveals that she and her partner, Dan, became foster carers. Yes, there are jokes. She says that she returned to Wales "like a salmon", But the linchpin of the show is information. We learn about the 60 hours of interviews she and Dan undertook and how finally the pair were brought before a panel ("judges' houses"). Kiri makes no secret of the fact that she's touting for business. She wants us to consider whether we've got what it takes to help any of the 100,000 children in care. DAVID MCGILLIVRAY

The Documentary: Autism, Empathy and Psychopaths

9.30am/8.05pm

BBC World Service

Have you ever had your EQ score tested? This is a scaling of your "empathy quotient" and is meant to be a measure of how easily an individual can understand and pick up on the feelings of others. When the science writer and broadcaster Sue Nelson received a low empathy score in an assessment for autism, her interest was piqued, and she began this investigation into the damning stereotypes that associate autism with no to low empathy. It turns out that the latest scientific research shows quite the opposite, with many autistic people shown to have heightened empathy for others. One of the contributors is Professor Simon Baron-Cohen, a pioneer in EQ testing.

TODAY'S CHOICES

Heart and Soul

11.30am/10.30pm
BBC World Service

Malcolm X (above) was born 100 years ago this month – destined to become one of the most vivid, outspoken and challenging figures of the American 20th century, synonymous with black empowerment and the Nation of Islam. A spiritual zeal underpinned his politics, and here his daughter, Ilyasah Shabazz, explores a key phase in his life – a pilgrimage he made to Mecca in 1964 which profoundly reshaped his worldview, transforming him into a global advocate for unity and racial equality. Later that year he took part in a debate at the Oxford Union. It was 1965 when he was assassinated in New York, with three Nation of Islam members convicted of the killing. SIMON O'HAGAN

With the 50th anniversary of the release of Steven Spielberg's Jaws falling in June, Ellen E Jones and Mark Kermode take a look at the box-office phenomenon that changed the industry almost overnight and paved the way for the annual summer blockbuster, from Star Wars to "Barbenheimer". But ever since the Covid-enforced interregnum on traditional big-screen saturation, there have been more misses than hits for these once-dominant behemoths as costs rise and receipts diminish. The reasons for this sea change should be interesting. JEREMY ASPINALL

10.00 Woman's Hour
Presented by Anita Rani.

11.00 The Food Programme
Leyla Kazim visits York, the UK's own "chocolate city", to find out how a group of Quaker entrepreneurs pioneered both ethical business and iconic chocolate bars. Today, many independent chocolate makers still call York home, as do some of the word's biggest multinational confectionary makers. While the so-called "Dubai chocolate" drives a frenzy of demand for filled bars, Leyla also hears how falling global production and high prices of cocoa could spell the end of chocolate as we know it.
Producer Nina Pullman Repeated tomorrow 10.15pm

11.45 Book of the Week: The North Road
5/5.* Achavanich. Rob Cowen's journey along the Great North Road concludes with an archaeological discovery, and reflections on family and community. Read by Joseph Ayre.
For details see Monday Repeated 12.30am

12.04pm AntiSocial
5/6. Adam Fleming investigates an issue of the day, taking something that's being fiercely debated across social media, blogs, talk shows and phone-ins. He finds out how it all began, fact-checks claims and counter-claims, hears from people whose voice is often drowned out, and slows down the debate to give listeners a better understanding of what the heat is all about.
Repeated Wednesday 8pm

1.00 The World at One
Presented by Jonny Dymond.

1.45 Welcome to Holland
5/5.* Rembrandt. Katy concludes her series by talking to Emily Pearl Kingsley, author of Welcome to Holland, and to Lucy Baxter and her son Otto, on why she chose to go to Holland. For details see Monday

BBC Local Radio

Face behind the voice Eve Blair BBC Radio Ulster/Foyle

Age 41
Current job Has presented The Late Show (Monday–Thursday, 10pm–12 midnight) on BBC Radio Ulster/Foyle since 2016. "What has surprised me is that [the programme] has become a family unit. As well as discovering new music, there's also that community and that's a huge part for me. I'm trying to be a champion for local artists as well." She starts as the new host of Your Place and Mine (8.05am Saturday, Radio Ulster/Foyle) on 10 May.
CV She was born in Strabane, Tyrone, and grew up on her father's farm. "Always a radio geek", she played at radio stations as a child and was around 16 when she did work experience at Radio Foyle. "I got the bug and thought this is what I want to do." She then took the media course at the University of Ulster, Coleraine. Her first professional radio job was as a journalist/newsreader for the Q Radio Network. In 2007 she returned to Radio Foyle as a broadcast assistant. "Someone was sick in the newsroom, I was drafted in and spent eight years there." On Ulster/Foyle she appeared on The Arts Show, Pure Culture and The Afternoon Show.
Social media – yes or no? "I don't think I would have made the connections on my programme if it hadn't been for social media. It has its downside but thankfully I haven't experienced difficult comments and trolling."
Best moments "We [Derry-Londonderry] were the first UK City of Culture in 2013 and that provided incredible opportunities for us. I was the first to get a look around the Turner Prize. I loved that."
Worst moment "I broadcast from home during Covid and one night everything failed. I couldn't hear the connection back to base. For an hour I didn't know what I was doing. That feeling of being out of control was incredibly difficult. I still have nightmares."
Off air Lives outside a village, Artigarvan in Tyrone, with her cat Brontë. "She is my soulmate."
First radio memory "I had two radios, I used to write scripts, I'd make my sister pretend she was a famous celebrity and read the interviews I had written. I would sing wee jingles. But I never thought I could have a career in radio!"
Favourite broadcasters "My favourite was Gerry Anderson, who I had the privilege of working with. He made me laugh every single day. I'm a huge fan of Jo Whiley. She's the ultimate professional. And I love Sara Cox. You feel you're switching on to a friend."
Ambition/Dream job "Travelling the world with a microphone and digging out little stories that haven't been covered." [On TV?] "No. Always radio. I can't imagine my life disconnected from radio."
Secret skill "It's a skill I haven't used in years but I was a member of the Young Farmers' Club and I got to the Northern Ireland finals of stock judging. My dad was a dairy farmer so we were judging cows!" DAVID MCGILLIVRAY

All BBC local radio stations take BBC Radio 5 Live programmes from 1am

Age 41
Current job Has presented The Late Show (Monday–Thursday, 10pm–12 midnight) on BBC Radio Ulster/Foyle since 2016. "What has surprised me is that [the programme] has become a family unit. As well as discovering new music, there's also that community and that's a huge part for me. I'm trying to be a champion for local artists as well." She starts as the new host of Your Place and Mine (8.05am Saturday, Radio Ulster/Foyle) on 10 May.
CV She was born in Strabane, Tyrone, and grew up on her father's farm. "Always a radio geek", she played at radio stations as a child and was around 16 when she did work experience at Radio Foyle. "I got the bug and thought this is what I want to do." She then took the media course at the University of Ulster, Coleraine. Her first professional radio job was as a journalist/newsreader for the Q Radio Network. In 2007 she returned to Radio Foyle as a broadcast assistant. "Someone was sick in the newsroom, I was drafted in and spent eight years there." On Ulster/Foyle she appeared on The Arts Show, Pure Culture and The Afternoon Show.
Social media – yes or no? "I don't think I would have made the connections on my programme if it hadn't been for social media. It has its downside but thankfully I haven't experienced difficult comments and trolling."
Best moments "We [Derry-Londonderry] were the first UK City of Culture in 2013 and that provided incredible opportunities for us. I was the first to get a look around the Turner Prize. I loved that."
Worst moment "I broadcast from home during Covid and one night everything failed. I couldn't hear the connection back to base. For an hour I didn't know what I was doing. That feeling of being out of control was incredibly difficult. I still have nightmares."
Off air Lives outside a village, Artigarvan in Tyrone, with her cat Brontë. "She is my soulmate."
First radio memory "I had two radios, I used to write scripts, I'd make my sister pretend she was a famous celebrity and read the interviews I had written. I would sing wee jingles. But I never thought I could have a career in radio!"
Favourite broadcasters "My favourite was Gerry Anderson, who I had the privilege of working with. He made me laugh every single day. I'm a huge fan of Jo Whiley. She's the ultimate professional. And I love Sara Cox. You feel you're switching on to a friend."
Ambition/Dream job "Travelling the world with a microphone and digging out little stories that haven't been covered." [On TV?] "No. Always radio. I can't imagine my life disconnected from radio."
Secret skill "It's a skill I haven't used in years but I was a member of the Young Farmers' Club and I got to the Northern Ireland finals of stock judging. My dad was a dairy farmer so we were judging cows!" DAVID MCGILLIVRAY

Age 41
Current job Has presented The Late Show (Monday–Thursday, 10pm–12 midnight) on BBC Radio Ulster/Foyle since 2016. "What has surprised me is that [the programme] has become a family unit. As well as discovering new music, there's also that community and that's a huge part for me. I'm trying to be a champion for local artists as well." She starts as the new host of Your Place and Mine (8.05am Saturday, Radio Ulster/Foyle) on 10 May.
CV She was born in Strabane, Tyrone, and grew up on her father's farm. "Always a radio geek", she played at radio stations as a child and was around 16 when she did work experience at Radio Foyle. "I got the bug and thought this is what I want to do." She then took the media course at the University of Ulster, Coleraine. Her first professional radio job was as a journalist/newsreader for the Q Radio Network. In 2007 she returned to Radio Foyle as a broadcast assistant. "Someone was sick in the newsroom, I was drafted in and spent eight years there." On Ulster/Foyle she appeared on The Arts Show, Pure Culture and The Afternoon Show.
Social media – yes or no? "I don't think I would have made the connections on my programme if it hadn't been for social media. It has its downside but thankfully I haven't experienced difficult comments and trolling."
Best moments "We [Derry-Londonderry] were the first UK City of Culture in 2013 and that provided incredible opportunities for us. I was the first to get a look around the Turner Prize. I loved that."
Worst moment "I broadcast from home during Covid and one night everything failed. I couldn't hear the connection back to base. For an hour I didn't know what I was doing. That feeling of being out of control was incredibly difficult. I still have nightmares."
Off air Lives outside a village, Artigarvan in Tyrone, with her cat Brontë. "She is my soulmate."
First radio memory "I had two radios, I used to write scripts, I'd make my sister pretend she was a famous celebrity and read the interviews I had written. I would sing wee jingles. But I never thought I could have a career in radio!"
Favourite broadcasters "My favourite was Gerry Anderson, who I had the privilege of working with. He made me laugh every single day. I'm a huge fan of Jo Whiley. She's the ultimate professional. And I love Sara Cox. You feel you're switching on to a friend."
Ambition/Dream job "Travelling the world with a microphone and digging out little stories that haven't been covered." [On TV?] "No. Always radio. I can't imagine my life disconnected from radio."
Secret skill "It's a skill I haven't used in years but I was a member of the Young Farmers' Club and I got to the Northern Ireland finals of stock judging. My dad was a dairy farmer so we were judging cows!" DAVID MCGILLIVRAY

"Someone was sick in the newsroom, I was drafted in and spent eight years there." On Ulster/Foyle she appeared on The Arts Show, Pure Culture and The Afternoon Show.
Social media – yes or no? "I don't think I would have made the connections on my programme if it hadn't been for social media. It has its downside but thankfully I haven't experienced difficult comments and trolling."
Best moments "We [Derry-Londonderry] were the first UK City of Culture in 2013 and that provided incredible opportunities for us. I was the first to get a look around the Turner Prize. I loved that."
Worst moment "I broadcast from home during Covid and one night everything failed. I couldn't hear the connection back to base. For an hour I didn't know what I was doing. That feeling of being out of control was incredibly difficult. I still have nightmares."
Off air Lives outside a village, Artigarvan in Tyrone, with her cat Brontë. "She is my soulmate."
First radio memory "I had two radios, I used to write scripts, I'd make my sister pretend she was a famous celebrity and read the interviews I had written. I would sing wee jingles. But I never thought I could have a career in radio!"
Favourite broadcasters "My favourite was Gerry Anderson, who I had the privilege of working with. He made me laugh every single day. I'm a huge fan of Jo Whiley. She's the ultimate professional. And I love Sara Cox. You feel you're switching on to a friend."
Ambition/Dream job "Travelling the world with a microphone and digging out little stories that haven't been covered." [On TV?] "No. Always radio. I can't imagine my life disconnected from radio."
Secret skill "It's a skill I haven't used in years but I was a member of the Young Farmers' Club and I got to the Northern Ireland finals of stock judging. My dad was a dairy farmer so we were judging cows!" DAVID MCGILLIVRAY

Book at Bedtime: The Boy from the Sea
Monday–Friday 10.45pm Radio 4

SIBLING RIVALRY IN DONEGAL

A miraculous arrival sets up a stormy relationship between two boys in Garrett Carr's adult fiction debut, but the author's aims go beyond Irish horizons...

DO YOU REMEMBER the film Threads?" asks Garrett Carr. It's a rhetorical question, as everybody of a certain age who was allowed to watch the 1984 TV drama about the effects of a nuclear war in Britain is almost certainly still traumatised by it. "There was a nuclear war week on British TV – Threads was just one terrifying part of it – and we were watching this at home. My mother had a real no-frills approach to life, and I can't remember whether it was her sister or a neighbour but someone asked her, 'What would we do with our children if there's a nuclear war?' And my mother said, 'It would be best to just shoot them.'" He stops to pause and laugh. "And I was sitting there listening! I wasn't even ten years of age."

Now a father of two boys, aged 11 and 13, he understands the sentiment came from a good place. But it's this kind of keen-eyed, funny and relatable anecdote from his childhood in the fishing port of Killybegs in County Donegal that brings The Boy from the Sea alive and takes the reader there. Carr's first adult novel starts in 1973 and relates the arrival of a baby found abandoned on the beach, adopted by fisherman Ambrose and named Brendan. It follows his development into manhood over the course of two decades – from his own perspective, that of his adoptive family and of the tight-knit community as a whole.

It's a story that was "lurking" inside him. "I felt that it was a culture and a society that hadn't really been captured in an Irish novel before," he says. "Farmers and middle-class life in Dublin are well covered, so you could say there was a gap in the market. I could see and feel that there was an absence there and who else was going to do it, you know? I was well positioned because that's where I grew up and my father was a fisherman. There's quite a lot of autobiography in it, but part of the motivation of any novel is that you're just bearing witness to a time and a place, getting it down, almost like a historian would."

He has served his birthplace well. "The Killybegs Book Club gave it a thumbs up and the lady who runs the sweetshop gets in four or five copies at a time and they sell out rapidly. Or so I'm told." But there's much more to the book than the faithful re-creation of a place of "a few thousand men, women and children clinging to the coast and trying to stay dry". Or even of a time where this description of a man faced for the first time with a new addition to his friend's family reads so perfectly, hilariously true: "With a rolled cigarette sticking out of his moustache, Tim looked at the baby for the minimum time required not to be offensive. 'A child,' he said."

It touches on the Irish diaspora – Carr left Killybegs because "there was a sense that fishing was not such a good idea [for me]" – but majors on family, love and the problematic nature of masculinity. The unexpected, perhaps even miraculous, arrival of baby Brendan occasions fascination, hope and even suspicion, but also brings problems. Ambrose has another son, Declan, and his relationship with his sudden sibling is often strained beyond the point of rivalry. "It's quite toxic," says the author. "Declan certainly is, and so the whole novel is pitched on whether these boys are going to sort themselves out before it's too late. That's the knife-edge they're on.

"Ambrose is the boys' key example of manhood. He's got many great plusses, including great instincts, but has never had to look into himself and understand why he does certain things. The demands of the story, however, and the pressures I put him under require him to start doing that. I wanted to write about inarticulate, awkward, good, but often misguided, men and focused on the brothers and their father to begin with. But [Ambrose's wife Christine and her sister] forced their way in because you can't just focus on one gender if you want it to feel like life."

'I wanted to write about awkward, often misguided men'

Carr himself has a brother and sister but it was observing his two sons that really informed the book. "They are extremely close," he smiles. "But at the same time there is still a little edge of jealousy that's probably hovering there all the time because both my wife and I have noticed when you have one of them alone, they are kind of different," he explains. "But the book wasn't written as any kind of warning for them; they're not like Brendan and Declan. It was written because there's a lot of female-centric books for men, about women, and often very good, but it did make me want to turn the whole thing around. If there is a message for my sons it's because we don't live in Killybegs and it's a note to tell them where I'm from and a little bit where they're from." BILL BORROWS

WILD AT HEART

Give the lawn a break from mowing, let nature take over – and make a real difference, says Joe Swift

A few weeks ago, I wrote about losing some lawn, or perhaps relaxing your mowing regime, to reduce your workload and encourage more wildlife and biodiversity into your garden. Now that we're into May, you could take that idea fully on board and become part of a fast-growing initiative led by a charity called Plantlife (plantlife.org.uk).

Not everyone is a fan, but in my opinion "No Mow May" is a great idea. It's as simple as it sounds: just don't mow your lawn for the month of May. Doing this will encourage some longer grass and wildflowers to establish themselves, which in turn helps tackle pollution, benefits wildlife significantly and can lock away carbon below the ground. No Mow May is easy, gets the message across – and challenges gardeners' ingrained habits.

There are some who dislike or perhaps don't understand why their local roundabouts and verges have been left long and wild. They may think the council has broken mowers, has just given up, is affected by cutbacks or has gone bust! But no, it's just taking part and embracing the initiative – holding off the mowing to allow insects to feed and breed, and let those wildflowers do their stuff.

It needn't only be May, either: changing the way you mow (where, how often and how short) can be carried on throughout the year. For instance, I like a shaggy edge! So, even if you have some manicured areas, after the month of May think about leaving the edges a little unkempt, especially towards the back of the garden where wildlife will be protected.

What you do in your own garden makes a difference, but if we work together the combined effect is huge, and that's why nationwide awareness is important. Habitat loss is one of the biggest threats to wildlife, and our gardens are actually incredibly diverse spaces and an important resource. This is down to the habitats we create (log piles, water, trees and so on) and the wide range of plants we grow. The one element that perhaps goes against the all-important nature-loving, balance and horticultural harmony is the short cut lawn.

There are more than 20 million gardens in the UK. Their combined area is around 4,330 square kilometres – a bit more than a fifth of the size of Wales – and in England alone, the gardens are more than four and a half times larger than the size of our National Nature Reserves put together. Get on board, give it a try and leave the lawn a bit longer – what's the worst that can happen?

IF YOU DO ONE THING THIS WEEK...

Sow salad in containers

Start sowing some salad leaves directly into containers outdoors today – and within weeks you'll have some lovely leaves to begin cropping. They are one of the easiest edibles to grow, and a great way to get kids into gardening – and eating something green!

WHAT TO SOW

Rocket, lamb's lettuce, red oak leaf and salad bowl are all excellent. Even better, combine varieties for your own unique mix.

WHAT KIND OF POT TO USE

Any old pots will do: wide at the top is good, and they don't have to be too deep. You can use growbags, too, or repurpose something like an old olive oil tin or a wooden crate – anything that holds compost! Ensure there are drainage holes in the bottom.

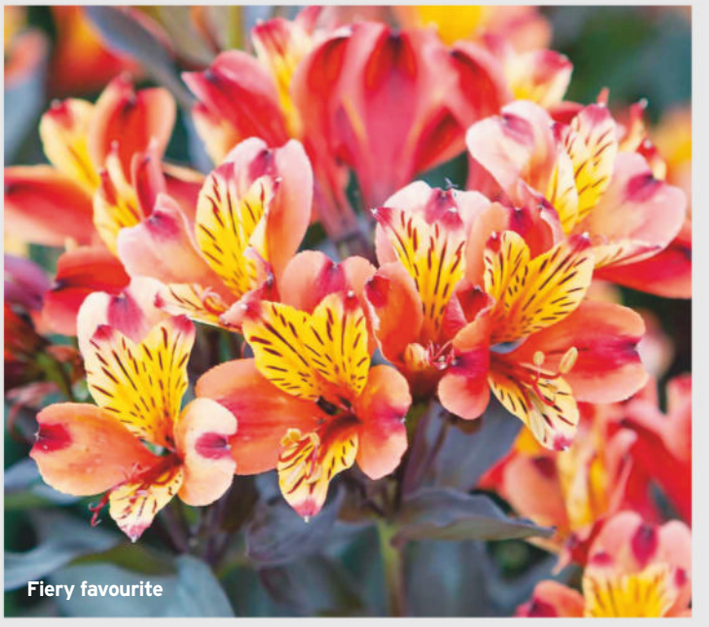

HOW TO SOW

Use a peat-free multipurpose compost. If it's coarse, sieve to remove any chunks and make it more even. Firm down with your fingers a little (this is to stop it sinking when watered, but don't take all the air out of the soil). Tap the pot a few times on a table, then use the base of another pot or a flat piece of wood to level the surface, and water using a fine rose on the watering can. Broadcast sow (ie sprinkle at random) some seeds onto the surface, then sieve a smattering of compost on top.

SUCCESSION AND CROPPING

Sow little and often – perhaps every two weeks – to keep the leaves coming all summer. When it comes to cropping, most salad leaves can be harvested several times. When the leaves get to around 10cm long, snip near the base. Water and feed, and they should come back a few times for you to snip again.

HARDY ALSTROEMERIA 'INDIAN SUMMER'

£14.99 plus p&p* SAVE £10

Thanks to some fantastic hybridising at one of Holland's leading alstroemeria breeders, we are delighted to offer this amazing variety to UK gardeners. It combines an impressively high flower count with a robust garden habit, being just 60cm tall and forming big perennial clumps. "Indian Summer" has a strong bronze-purple tinge to the foliage, which sets off the gorgeous flame-coloured flowers to a tee. And you can enjoy this impressive floral display for even longer as it keeps flowering all summer, new buds emerging all the time, well into autumn. It's perfect for long-lasting displays in pots or mixed borders.

LOST IN UMBRIA

Its charming medieval hilltop villages, galleries and vineyards give Tuscany a run for its money

Signora Volpe
Thursday 8.00pm U&Drama

Panicale is a town with secrets. Like an Italian Midsomer, it seems cursed with more than its fair share of murders – each one a murky web of deceit for Emilia Fox's Signora Volpe to unravel. But the biggest mystery is Panicale itself: how can a town this lovely exist in real life, yet remain largely under the radar, less than ten miles from the holiday hotspot of Tuscany?

The answer is Umbria. Tuscany's neighbour has all the soft-edged sown valleys and plump, wine-bottle-green hills of its more famous cousin – but without the "brand name", it's quieter, cheaper and arguably more charming. Just 20 minutes off the autostrada, in fact, my hire car is on haywain-wide country lanes that seem to wind back on themselves like linguine. Soon sat-nav-defyingly lost, I nose the Cinquecento between unnamed hamlets and villages so picturesquely unpeopled it looks as if nobody's stirred since the Renaissance.

SOLVING MYSTERIES Emilia Fox stars as Sylvia Fox in Signora Volpe

ALAMY

When I eventually open the car door in front of my villa – barely another building in sight in the whole widescreen valley vista – the smell of sun-warmed lavender envelops me as I reach for a bottle of the local Montefalco. It's as if the old converted farmhouse I've rented has la dolce vita baked into every honey-coloured brick and terracotta tile.

Panicale itself dates back to the tenth century – and looks it (in a good way). Its ancient lanes wind up, down and round the hill it's built on, mostly too narrow for cars, which means the central square and surrounds are naturally pedestrianised, with cafés and bars spilling prettily out onto the piazza. Most of what we see in Signora Volpe is real, including the sighingly good views out across the photogenically farmed plains towards Lake Trasimeno.

True, Tuscany has beaches, whereas Umbria is landlocked; but Trasimeno has a sort-of-seaside where you can kayak, windsurf or simply sun yourself like the locals. By the time I get there, the last traghetto boat has already left for Isola Maggiore, the island in the middle. But, if I'm honest, I'm not sorry to miss what my guidebook describes unencouragingly as "a one-room Lace Museum… remembering a vanishing craft" or the church of San Salvatore, "which is always closed". Instead, I sit on the shore, watching men fishing in the lake with their sons, until sunset turns the water from forget-me-not blue to sheening silver.

An hour's drive brings plenty of other hilltop medieval towns into range, and the larger ones have art collections to (almost) rival Tuscany's, too. Perugia may not be Florence, but it's a big enough draw to require parking lots on the edge of town, complete with moving walkways and escalators that whizz you through a catacomb of vaulted chambers and subterranean streets that were simply built on top of in the 1500s.

The history here feels like it was made with Horrible Histories in mind: papal poisonings, flagellating medieval cults, and a sort of warlord/mayor/Popeye figure called Braccio Fortebraccio ("Arm Strong-arm"), whose heraldic insignia featured a helmet and spinach, and whose allies included a genie (which must have been helpful). The art is arresting, too: in the city's Galleria Nazionale dell'Umbria, I'm pulled in by some thumpingly beefy 1281 sculptures by a bloke called Arnolfo di Cambio, and lose track of time until, three floors later, I emerge into the 19th century.

That said, I'm even more excited about Perugia's other claim to fame. For reasons I'm too hungry ever to investigate properly, it's the capital of Italy's sweeties and chocolate industry:

WHEN IN UMBRIA...
Top: early Renaissance art is one of the highlights of the Galleria Nazionale dell'Umbria in Perugia

home of October's annual Eurochocolate festival, HQ to the country's biggest producer, and with confectioners scattered around the town like hundreds and thousands.

I wander the main drag, Corso Vannucci – pedestrianised as if built with the express purpose of la passeggiata – weaving between the hipster beards and tanned midriffs of the city's student population. And I stare, wide-eyed as a child, at the clever, city-shaped cakes, and piles of primary-coloured bonbons in the sweet-shop windows, before devouring an ice cream – as blissfully soft and crisply cool as fresh white pillowcases.

Arezzo, Gubbio and Cortona are similarly cultured, but my favourite days were those sat outside my villa or pottering around the countryside. Here, the vineyards of Tuscany segue into the olive groves of Umbria, and the land looks as if it's upholstered in a soft green felt, faded with age and sunlight, thicker in some (laurel-forested) places than in others – and dotted with rows of emblematic cypress trees.

Bright wildflowers adorned the meadows, and when the breeze was right, the smell of pine drifted down from who-knows-how-far-away. The only noise was birdsong and church bells – and, one morning, the soft putt-putt of another Fiat, forcing its way at walking pace through a waist-high shrub forest with a shotgun pointing out of its window. (No need to alert Ms Volpe; they're simply hunting for boar.) Honestly, if a few bit-part actors have to die to keep this place a secret, I'm fine with that. ED GRENBY

ARE YOU ON PIP PAYMENTS?

Make sure you're ready when changes to disability benefits come in, says Paul Lewis

The Government plans to save nearly £5 billion a year by cutting benefits for disabled people. The changes will mainly affect people under pension age. But, as time passes, pensioners will be affected too.

The biggest change is to a weekly benefit called Personal Independence Payment (PIP). This is for people whose health or disability causes problems doing essential tasks of daily life. You are assessed on the amount of help you need with ten activities, including preparing food, washing, using the toilet, dressing, communicating and managing money. You get from two to 12 points on each task depending on how much help you require; you need at least eight points for the basic weekly rate of £73.90 and at least 12 for the enhanced rate (£110.40). Currently you qualify with four or six activities scoring two points each. But under the planned changes, you will need at least one activity scored at four points or more. The Government estimates that will exclude 370,000 people currently claiming PIP – costing them an average of £4,500 a year each – and prevent another 430,000 qualifying for the first time. It will also mean 150,000 people who get £83.30 a week carer's allowance for looking after them will lose it, or not qualify for it. The changes begin in 2026, likely in November, both for new claimants and people on PIP at the regular review of their entitlement. People currently on PIP with all activities scored two or less are advised to check if any of them have worsened to score four points.

> 'There is some opposition among MPs'

You cannot claim PIP over pension age, but if you get it before age 66 it can continue. The Department for Work and Pensions told me that the 590,000 pensioners in that position will not be affected, as they are not subject to routine reviews. The PIP benefit for people with mobility problems is not being changed.

The Government admits that these changes, and others to Universal Credit, will push 250,000 adults and 50,000 children into poverty. There is some opposition among Members of Parliament, so it may be worth contacting yours. In Scotland PIP is being replaced with Adult Disability Payment, but if that will be affected is not yet clear.

Search gov.uk for 'pathways to work' for more details.

RT MONEY PARTNER

If you have goals you want to achieve but your money is tied up in your home, equity release could help. For many homeowners over 55, their property is their most valuable asset. With equity release, you may be able to release some of the value in your home to supplement your finances and achieve your goals while staying in the home you love.

Once you've repaid any existing mortgage, which is a condition of equity release, the money is yours to enjoy spending. Maybe you'd like to help your family, travel or make home improvements?

You can choose how to take the money you release, either as a tax-free lump sum or smaller amounts as and when required.

There's no requirement to make regular monthly repayments if you don't wish to, as the amount released, along with any accrued interest, is repaid when you pass away or move into long-term care.

Equity release may involve a home reversion plan or a lifetime mortgage, which is secured against your property and will reduce the value of your estate and impact funding long-term care.

Advice is required before proceeding with equity release, and Radio Times has teamed up with Age Partnership+ to provide an equity release service where you can find out more and get a free no-obligation quotation. Only if your case completes would an advice fee of £1,995 be payable. Other lender and solicitor fees may apply.

DICTIONARY CORNER Susie Dent

Expression of the week Wave horse

Why refer to the sea when you could speak of the whale road? Or of a ship rather than a wave horse or an oar steed? Such beautiful pairings are known as kennings: word hybrids once popular in Scandinavian and Old English texts that brought poetry to even the most everyday phenomena.

Their name comes from the Icelandic kenna vio, meaning "to name after". Other examples are just as beautiful. The mind was known as a thought chamber, while the human body was the bone locker. The spear din was the noise of battle, in which bloodshed might be termed battle sweat, and a king was a ring giver, thanks to their role in distributing treasure to loyal followers.

Most beautiful of all perhaps is the sky candle, a term for the sun as it rises or sets over the sea. All of these make up a glorious word hoard, an expression for a lexicon or collection of vocabulary.

OUTRAGEOUS SAGA

Did The Feud run out of time, ideas, or both? 5's Loathe Thy Neighbour drama failed miserably in the final ten-minute segment of this outrageous six-part suburban saga to resolve outstanding mysteries.

POWER OF THE JOURNEY

Having seen all the previous incarnations of the Pilgrimage series (BBC2), it seems to me that this latest one has been the best to date. The eclectic group of characters were genuinely curious about each other's approach to "faith" and this, combined with their mutual encouragement when the going got tough, personified the spirit of the enterprise.

Add to this their back-stories, the glorious scenery and the warmth of the welcomes they received along the way and the three episodes proved most uplifting. Indeed, if anyone is seeking an escape from the endlessly depressing news headlines in these turbulent times, then Pilgrimage: the Road through the Alps (iPlayer) will provide a brief but effective, and memorable, antidote.

LETTER OF THE WEEK

No escape from misery

A recent headline on my phone's news feed, "EastEnders dead body discovery sends shockwaves" made me think, here we go again, more depressing storylines. When I was once asked why I watched it, I said, "Well, it's a bit of escapism, isn't it." Today I wouldn't say that: an escape to Albert Square would be a life of misery, with frequent visits from the Grim Reaper!

I do acknowledge that they have dealt admirably with some gritty issues, but my long support for this soap is on the wane. I have now turned to Neighbours (on Amazon, but sadly being committed to its own graveyard at the end of 2025), and yes – it does have its share of misery, but at least it has sunshine, and lots of it!

RESPECTFUL

I would like to convey my deep appreciation to the BBC and to all the correspondents who covered Pope Francis's death and funeral (26 April BBC1). Special mention goes to Reeta Chakrabarti and Maryam Moshiri, who were down with the crowds. They both did an excellent job and were so very respectful, speaking to guests and ordinary worshippers alike and commentating on all that was going on. The coverage on radio and online was also excellent.

FARMING REALITY

A lot of the channels are very keen on farming programmes, particularly at this time of the year with all the dear little lambs. Why aren't they honest enough to show the full cycle and take us inside slaughter houses? Perhaps the producers don't have the guts.
Maggie Hughes
Gnosall, Staffordshire

LE CARRÉ NEVER AGES

I very much enjoyed listening to the 1977 adaptation of John le Carré's Call for the Dead (Radio 4 Extra). What an excellent story and acting, especially by George Cole as George Smiley. This would make such a good television series.
Peter Larter
Lowestoft, Suffolk

BRAVO FOR NORMAL

I have just finished watching BBC3's Just Act Normal – and wow! What a wonderful piece of writing, with acting and direction to match. As a 75-year-old white man, I am hardly the target market, but I was blown away by the terribly sad yet uplifting storyline, brought to life by an ensemble of talented young actors.

The BBC takes a lot of stick for not being relevant, but then it make something as good as this and remind us what a treasure the corporation truly is. Bravo to all concerned.
Gary Stark
Hartlepool, Durham

TAKING CHARGE
Just Act Normal's Tiana (Chenée Taylor) fights to keep her family together

POIGNANT PART

I want to congratulate Paul Bradley, who plays Nigel in EastEnders (BBC1). His acting is so convincing it feels as if he really does have dementia – he makes me cry and want to cuddle him.
Hazel Coleman
Warminster, Wiltshire

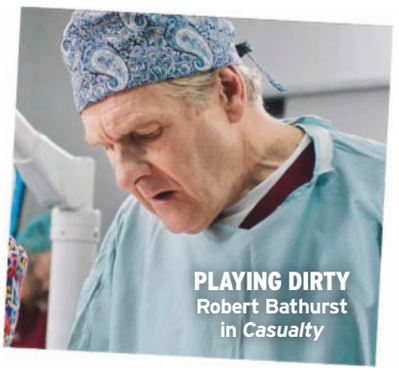

GOOD QUESTION!

In The Assembly (27 April ITV1), David Tennant faced a series of questions from talented young people with autism or learning difficulties, and entered into the spirit of it with great enthusiasm.

Having worked with young people with autism myself, I can honestly say this programme captured all the joy and rewards that such interactions bring. It was a wonderfully uplifting treat.
Jackie Hickton
Leeds

BAD MEDICINE

I was astonished at both the goings-on and the things that didn't happen in the operating theatre during a recent episode of Casualty (26 April BBC1). We had been warned about the possibility of abusive behaviour by surgeon Russell Whitelaw (played by Robert Bathurst) towards nurse Rida (Sarah Seggari), but surely a surgeon would never operate without a face mask? And for such a major operation, a team of three hardly seems likely.
John Frost
Leybourne, Kent

PLAYING DIRTY
Robert Bathurst in Casualty

A YEAR TO REMEMBER?

I watched The Jubilee of '77: Pomp, Pageantry and Parties (26 April 5) and it brought back lots of memories. However, one scene made me wonder if the date of the footage selected is carefully checked. We were shown some boys at a market record stall selling the following LPs: The Bride Stripped Bare by Bryan Ferry, The Kick Inside by Kate Bush and the Original Soundtrack to Grease. All of these albums were released in 1978, a year after the Silver Jubilee!
Andre Hyde London EC1

Andre Hyde wins series two of Signora Volpe – Emilia Fox stars as Sylvia Fox, the British spy who turns detective to solve mysteries in Italy.

CHECK THE DRAMA

If the BBC decides to commission another series of Chess Masters: the Endgame (BBC2), it will be much better without all the macho nicknames and the dramatic music. They are totally unnecessary.

It's not Gladiators. It's not the final battle of Lord of the Rings. It's just chess.
James Fisher
Chester-le-Street, Durham

RWT AT 50

Celebrating Bonzo, Python & Rutle Neil Innes

BACK IN '74
Neil Innes timing a sketch at a Monty Python script meeting

PRE-FAB FOUR
The Rutles: Nasty (Neil Innes), Barry (John Halsey), Dirk (Eric Idle) and Stig (Ricky Fataar)

When Rutland Weekend Television (RWT) began on 12 May 50 years ago, few could have foreseen its impact. But this cheerfully low-fi sketch show centred on "Britain's smallest network" was a chance for Monty Python's Eric Idle to spread his comedy wings post-Flying Circus. The core cast included David Battley, Gwen Taylor and Henry Woolf, but it was Idle's pairing with resident musician Neil Innes that was to prove fortuitous, as Neil's wife Yvonne tells RT...

"One day Eric phoned up and said, 'Neil, could you come [to TV Centre], our warm-up man's not turned up?' Neil said, 'I don't do warm-ups.' Eric said, 'There's 25 quid in it' and Neil said, 'Done!'"

Of course, Neil's role would be more substantial, playing all the Marx Brothers one week, looking and sounding like Johnny Cash or Elton John the next. "Neil liked nothing more than being stretched," says Yvonne. "Physically, mentally, any way you could stretch him, he loved it. Also he and Eric were finding out what each other's strengths and weaknesses were. They were a fantastic team for a while."

Indeed, the two went way back to pre-Python days. As a member of the Bonzo Dog Doo-Dah Band, Neil had worked with Idle, Terry Jones and Michael Palin on ITV's Do Not Adjust Your Set from 1967 onwards. He was invited to join the Python troupe for the last series of Flying Circus in 1974 and for their stage shows, whose audiences responded warmly to Neil's song How Sweet to Be an Idiot. But back to Rutland, and one song that would give Innes a whole new audience.

"Somebody had the idea, 'Let's do a Beatles thing,'" says Yvonne, "and Neil made a pastiche of their early music. He did it very easily." That song was I Must Be in Love by the Rutles, accompanied by speeded-up film of the group and introduced by Idle's reporter, who struggled to keep up with the mobile camera crew.

Idle showed that clip in America to the makers of Saturday Night Live, who funded the subsequent All You Need Is Cash in 1978. "When we saw the film back," recalls Yvonne, "I realised that it was going to be quite big because they looked fantastic!" In fact the movie and its soundtrack by Innes were adored by the public.

Such memories are conjured by Yvonne in Dip My Brain in Joy, her recent biography of Neil, who died in 2019 – they'd been married 53 years. She admits writing it was a challenge, but the process proved to be cathartic.

They met in 1962, the year surreal legends the Bonzos were formed. "Neil invited me to see his band. I assumed a band was four guys in nice clothes with guitars and drums. When I got there, there was absolute chaos. They put this dustbin in the middle of the floor – we didn't know what it was for – and they started off with Rule, Britannia! And at the end of it the bin exploded and there was silence!" Despite or perhaps because of such unorthodoxy, the group endeared themselves to the public and scored a top-five hit in 1968 with I'm the Urban Spaceman.

The Bonzos and Rutles still have legions of fans. The latter's included George Harrison and his wife Olivia, with whom Neil and Yvonne became friends: "He was so encouraging to Neil. At one point Neil said, 'Shall I do this, do you think it's too similar?' and George said, 'These are your songs, they're not our songs.' He was brilliant.'" Another consequence of RWT was Neil's solo series for BBC2, The Innes Book of Records (1979–81). "It was fantastic. He loved it."

Neil was gigging well into his late 60s. "He didn't strut his stuff at all. He loved it when fans came up and he made such a fuss of them... he was just really humble; it was one of his huge attributes." MARK BRAXTON

ALISON HAMMOND

Her career may be on a high but she'd be just as happy swapping telly for Tesco

JESSICA CHOU/GUARDIAN/EYEVINE

What's the view from your sofa?
Well, babes, let me set the scene… my sofa is massive. I'm talking a sink-in-and-you-don't-get-up-for-hours sort of sofa. It's a lovely rich brown, so cosy. My son Aidan and I chose it, because he normally brings about ten mates over, and they could never fit before. Right above the television, there's a beautiful picture of my late mum, so she's always watching TV with me.

Who controls the remote?
I'm the queen of the scroll. If Aidan is around, I might let him have a little go – it depends if he's making the tea.

What have you been watching?
Black Mirror series seven properly messed with my head, but I loved it. I'm obsessed with Love Is Blind and Married at First Sight: Australia, and am catching up on Celebrity Big Brother.

You appeared in Big Brother in 2002. How has reality TV changed?
There was no social media. You didn't have that instant judgement from people, apart from when you came out and heard people clapping or booing. Now people tell you how they feel online.

You also appeared on Celebrity Fit Club in 2004, which doesn't feel like a show that would be made now.
It was a different time back then, wasn't it? All about body shaming. I remember doing Hole in the Wall [in 2009] wearing that silver outfit and they didn't care that we didn't look great. They just let us wear it. I'm glad that times have changed and we're embracing everybody, no matter what they look like.

In your new show, Alison Hammond's Big Weekend, you spend 48 hours with celebrities including Sir Lenny Henry, Jimmy Carr and Mel B. How do you get them to open up?
The fact they've said yes to do my show, they know we're going to go deep with the chat. I would never ask a question that I wouldn't want to be asked myself, but I'm quite an open book. As long as it's respectful and they're comfortable, I'll ask anything. And even if they're not comfortable, sometimes you have to go there. I ask all the questions you're thinking at home.

Which of your celebrity interviews has been the most memorable?
Harrison Ford and Ryan Gosling was the worst because I didn't get any content for the film [Blade Runner 2049] at all. It's the best interview if you want to cheer yourself up – you're gonna laugh. I could never, ever re-create that situation. Ryan was in a good mood and so was Harrison. To be the one who made Harrison laugh like that was just brilliant. Not everyone finds the Hammond funny, you know!

Do you like being interviewed?
No, I like to be in control all the time.

What's the interview question I should be asking you?
"Are you happy?" Because not many people ask that.

DOWN TIME

TV SNACK/ DRINK
A family bag of Monster Munch, roast beef flavour. I don't want any judgement that I'm 50 and still eating them! Maybe a cheeky glass of Bailey's.

FIRST TV MEMORY
Watching Rainbow with my sister lying on the carpet, eating Wotsits and having cheese all around my mouth.

Well, Alison, are you happy?
I'm so happy! I'm in such a good place. I'm 50, I've done everything I needed to do in life, and now I'm just enjoying it! I've had hard times, and I know television is fickle, so tomorrow I could be out of work. This might not be for ever, so you've got to enjoy every single day, and it's not the end of the world if it ends. I could go get a job in Tesco and be more than happy there as well.

In 2021, you were the first black presenter to be shortlisted for an NTA. Do you feel like a role model?
No, but I get letters from people who say that I've encouraged them to be more confident. It's pressure when you call someone a role model – I'm not perfect, I get things wrong. But it's really important to have people on the telly who everyone can relate to. My life has changed a little, but I'm still the same old Alison. I still clean my own house. There's no difference other than I'm doing well on TV. LAURA RUTKOWSKI
