From the Editor

IT CAN BE ignored no longer. The great summer of sport is in full swing with both Wimbledon and the Women's Euro 2025 starting this week. A clash of sporting action that will no doubt cause headaches for the schedulers at the BBC, ITV and S4C. However, you'll be able to keep up with the feast of football taking place in Switzerland with our wall chart. (As always, take care while removing the cover.)

Not a fan of sport? Or perhaps you just don't like football and tennis – well, don't fret, you won't have to take yourself off to the cupboard under the stairs for a month. Our TV Choices team have taken it upon themselves to ferret out all that's worth watching on terrestrial and streaming channels that doesn't involve striking a ball at speed. And read RT's columnist Caroline Frost on page 29, who feels your pain.

I'm very much looking forward to it all and will be cheering on the Lionesses, the Dragons (Y Dreigiau), Emma Raducanu, Katie Boulter, Jack Draper, Uncle Tom Cobley and all... Our coverage starts on p14. Now, where shall I put up my wall chart?

THE SANDMAN

A JOURNEY ACROSS WORLDS

"Nobody asks: 'Why are we suddenly in an Elizabethan tent performing A Midsummer Night's Dream, while there's a Greek temple over there and a demon banquet going on down the hall?' Everybody goes with it!" says Allan Heinberg, shaking his head at the sheer strangeness of the Netflix epic he has overseen for two series – after all, there are few shows as odd as The Sandman, whether in terms of casting, concept or setting.

As RT wanders around the Shepperton sets of the series, which is based on the comics written by Neil Gaiman (the well-known fantasy author who, currently facing allegations of sexual assault, is now very much persona non grata), it's almost impossible to know who or what you might bump into next. Freddie Fox as Loki, the Norse god of mischief, perhaps? Sanjeev Bhaskar and Asim Chaudhry as the fratricidal Cain and his reluctant stooge, Abel? Or how about lead character Dream, Lord Morpheus himself, as played by a saturnine Tom Sturridge ("I swear he just floats across the set…" shudders Fox).

"Every day is different," says costume designer Sarah Arthur. "A lot of my team are used to big period projects, but they've had to re-educate their minds because for season two we're jumping eras, from Elizabethan to futuristic to fantasy, to the French Revolution, to Victorian, to Ancient Greek… So many periods in a short time."

In this second and final series, we rejoin "Lord of stories" Dream as he rebuilds his magical kingdom after a long absence, reckoning with the consequences of his past actions. "When we started the series, Dream thought he was the most important being in the universe," says Heinberg. "Now we're humanising this arrogant, honourable, all-seeing, all-knowing deity, watching him figure out what it means to be a good sibling, husband and father as he learns compassion.

"Yes, it's a multidimensional fantasy behemoth – but Sandman is ultimately a relationship drama." Just with a few more demons and Doric columns. GABRIEL TATE

Season two of The Sandman is available to watch on Netflix from 2 July.

The Sandman was completed before accusations of sexual assault were made against Neil Gaiman. The series will now conclude with season two. Gaiman strongly denies any wrongdoing.

AUSTEN-TATIOUS!

Three decades since her international screen debut in the 1996 movie of Emma, Ruth Jones is returning to the world of Jane Austen. The Gavin & Stacey star will play Mrs Bennet opposite Richard E Grant's Mr Bennet in the BBC's ten-part series The Other Bennet Sister, which centres on the couple's overlooked middle child, Mary (Call the Midwife's Ella Bruccoleri).

TRIP THE LIGHT FANTASTIC

Five years since sampling the culinary delights of Greece, Rob Brydon and Steve Coogan are off again – this time to Scandinavia. The duo will soon start filming their fifth semi-improvised travelogue, The Trip to the Northern Lights, which will air on Sky. We're promised midlife reckoning and Bafta one-upmanship.

CALIFORNIA DREAMING

Writer/director Hugo Blick took us to Rwanda in Black Earth Rising and the 19th-century American West in The English, but his latest BBC drama has a more prosaic setting: a British caravan park. California Avenue centres on Lela (Erin Doherty), on the run with her young son and seeking refuge in the canal-side community. Bill Nighy and Helena Bonham Carter play her parents and cameras roll in Hertfordshire this summer.

SO THAT'S ALL GOOD

After bringing the London Olympics to fruition and solving (some of) the BBC's problems, Hugh Bonneville's head of deliverance/values Ian Fletcher is back. Twenty Twelve and W1A creator John Morton is resurrecting the hapless executive for Twenty Twenty Six, a new six-part series following Fletcher in his new role as "director of integrity" for next year's football World Cup in North America.

MY PLEA FOR PUBLIC SERVICE BROADCASTING

THE BATTLE TO SAVE BRITISH TV

The streamers and Trump are killing series like Wolf Hall – we need to fight back, says Peter Kosminsky

A THING OF THE PAST Mark Rylance and Damian Lewis in Wolf Hall

This is an edited version of a speech the writer and director Peter Kosminsky gave at Lambeth Palace in London when he collected his Trustees' Award at the Sandford St Martin Awards for religious and ethical broadcasting on 17 June.

I AM THE son of immigrants. My mother, who died just a few weeks ago at the wonderful age of 94, was a survivor of the Kindertransport. And on my father's side, I come from a family that fled to Britain as a result of the persecution of Jews in Eastern Europe at the turn of the 20th century. I only mention this because it might give an indication of why I have tried to make the kind of programmes I've made over the last 45 years.

I am only here, I only exist because of the hospitality of this country, hospitality that was extended at a time when immigration wasn't such a dirty word, and when people thought that immigrants – and maybe even the children of immigrants, such as myself – could make a useful contribution to society, rather than polluting that society by their presence.

> 'The Government must stand up to the bully in the White House'

So, I owe this country a lot – a debt of honour, if you like – which has made me think hard about my responsibilities as a citizen. I've never really seen myself as an entertainer. Television is a powerful medium and I've always felt that we should use that power responsibly. I suppose I think it's an aspect of free speech in a democracy, the ability of programme-makers to broadcast not just government propaganda, as is the case in so many other countries in the world, but to speak truth to power, even if occasionally that truth isn't particularly welcome.

The sad thing is that, with the world in a parlous state – people ferociously divided, nations perhaps even on the brink of a Third World War – at the very time when we need this kind of challenging programming most, it's under threat as never before. Why is that?

It's mainly because the public service broadcasters – primarily the BBC, ITV and Channel 4 – who have a legal obligation to make these kinds of programmes, can no longer afford to make them. For instance, the final series of Wolf Hall, broadcast last year, only got made because a number of people involved in the production, including the executive producer Sir Colin Callender, gave back most of the money to which they were contractually entitled.

WHY CAN'T THE BBC, Channel 4 and ITV make these kinds of dramas any more? Because the streamers have priced them out of their own market. The streamers make some fantastic shows. I watch their output most nights and I enjoy it, but they have deep pockets and they've spent their money liberally. Prices have been driven up so that inflation within our industry, as every TV professional knows, is far greater than inflation in the wider country (by a factor of three or four), and the licence fee and other forms of funding for the public service broadcasters have not gone up in parallel.

So, the British public service broadcasters can no longer afford to make my sort of dramas: Warriors, The Promise, The State, The Undeclared War, The Government Inspector and Wolf Hall. And the producers know that, so they're not developing them. The programmes that do get made are those produced by the streamers – for budgets we can only dream of.

But these are programmes that, by definition, have to play internationally, which is code for appealing to an American audience. Some shows that we might think are quite important to make here in the UK don't play in America. Hillsborough, Three Girls, Mr Bates vs the Post Office wouldn't work for a US audience – they're too local, too British. Wolf Hall wouldn't be commissioned by any of the streamers. We know, we tried.

It's exactly this kind of programming that is disappearing. It's not under threat. It's disappearing right now. Does that matter? Yes, I think it does. It's part of the service we owe to our audience – to hold a mirror up to society. Our own, British society.

The good news is there is a very straightforward solution. In fact, it's a solution that's already been adopted in 17 other countries in Europe. The British Government should take a five per cent levy of UK subscription revenue from each of the streamers that broadcast here and put it into a fund that can go towards the production costs of public service broadcasters. And make no mistake, the streamers could also access this fund, as long as the programmes they wish to make are co-productions with one of our local public service broadcasters.

Except we're not going to do this. Why? Because we're running scared of Donald Trump and his tariffs. The Government is so supine and terrified that it's not prepared to run the risk of upsetting Trump and the delicate trading relationship that they've fought so hard – and grovelled so intensely – to achieve.

But all is not lost yet. This Government is terrified of swings in public support and can be pressurised. It just needs a few more people to stand up and be counted. If you care about public service broadcasting, if you care about the BBC, ITV and Channel 4, I would beg you – get out there and campaign for the Government to stand up to the bully in the White House, and protect the 100-year tradition of public service broadcasting in this country, of which we are rightly proud, before it is lost for ever.

AND THE WINNER IS...

The winner of the Radio Times Readers Award at the Sandford St Martin Awards was ITV's Ramadan: a Journey across Britain. Broadcast in April 2024, the programme revealed an increasingly important facet of modern Britain's spirituality and identity, as Shehab Khan (above) went on the road to discover how the UK's four million Muslims express their faith during Islam's holy month.

TEN QUESTIONS WITH

GRETA SCACCHI

The actor didn't have an intimacy coordinator in her early career – and definitely doesn't want one now

In the 1980s and early 90s, English-Italian actor Greta Scacchi, 65, gained the name "Scorchy Scacchi" for her roles in films including White Mischief, Heat and Dust and The Player. Today, her screen appearances are a little different. In murder mystery Darby and Joan, she stars as widowed English nurse Joan Kirkhope, who teams up with Australian ex-detective Jack Darby (Bryan Brown). The pair have a will-they, won't-they relationship in the series – but make no mistake, Scacchi says, there will be no funny business...

'The writers kept trying to sneak in a French kiss but we both said, "No way!"'

GRETA SCACCHI

DISCIPLINED With Charles Dance in White Mischief

Darby and Joan returns this week for series two – do you want Jack and Joan to get together?

Bryan and I have always been united in this, but there was tension with the writers and showrunners. In the first series, they kept trying to sneak a French kiss into an episode. Bryan and I both said, "No way!" They even had us sharing the bed platonically at some point, and we weren't going to do that, either.

Why not?

If you're in your 60s or 70s and you have a kiss or a spoon, the landscape would change for ever. The writer was saying, "We don't want to show these people as being old and unable to enjoy a one-night stand," and I said, "Well, we don't enjoy a one-night stand!" One day, Bryan and I saw there was an intimacy coordinator booked and we had to say, "Sorry, you've come under false pretences, it's not happening." Now the writers are on board with us. If our characters got together, it would be because there's not going to be another episode.

Do you think you would have benefited from an intimacy coordinator when you first started your career in the 80s?

No, I don't at all. Actors don't want to be choreographed into positions unless there's a real antipathy or a communication problem. Luckily, I didn't have that.

So you had good relationships with your on-screen co-stars?

Charles Dance on White Mischief was a very disciplined actor and so am I – we could talk and be frank. We were both, at the time, very beautiful and confident about ourselves physically. He was always very considerate and made sure I was comfortable.

Was there a time where you felt uneasy doing intimate scenes?

The most discomfort I've had in those situations was with directors and their own... appetites, let's say.

JONATHAN FORD; ALLSTAR/COLUMBIA PICTURES/BBC; COURTESY OF MATT TAYLOR

FRIENDS WITHOUT BENEFITS
With Bryan Brown in Darby and Joan

It sometimes gets muddied by voyeurism, and that leads to us being shown stuff that a lot of us don't want to see. That's where you need the intimacy coordinator.

How have things changed for actors today?
In my 20s, the female voice was still struggling to emerge, directors were mostly male and simulated lovemaking was obligatory. But in the 80s, it was soft focus and made to look beautiful and slowed down, whereas now I find it really gratuitous – this explicit rutting stuff is very odd to see. I find it so uninteresting, ugly and very compromising for the actors. It sounds funny coming from me, because I got labelled for nudity and sex scenes, but I don't believe it was a deserved label.

Where did the label come from?
I had a bed scene with Laurence Olivier [in 1984's The Ebony Tower] and that's where it started. The newspapers were salacious and titillating, so even if people weren't seeing the films that I was in, I got that label. It made me wish I'd used a stage name.

Was that a challenge?
The hardest thing was how my family had to deal with it. My mum was made to feel embarrassed. At school, my children were being taunted about what their mother had done, which is horrendous. It must be 100 times worse for the kids today, because of social media and how sex scenes can be taken out of context. I think it should just stop. In fact, can we just get rid of porn altogether?

As you got older, was it a conscious decision to avoid roles with steamy scenes?
The thing I'm most famous for is turning down Basic Instinct. I didn't do it, because I had just done Presumed Innocent and White Mischief, and I thought, "I'm going to take a break from this." I also didn't like the script, particularly how it portrayed bisexuality. Even that was being portrayed as a male fantasy.

Your children, son Matteo (with Carlo Mantegazza), and daughter Leila George (with Vincent D'Onofrio), are both actors. Did you encourage them?
I didn't push them, but I certainly furnished their interest in acting as much as I could. Once I was invited to the Cairo Film Festival – Leila was eight, and was learning about the pharaohs and Egypt at school. I thought it was an educational opportunity, so I took them both out of school. We had an amazing trip! I was a very naughty mum… LAURA RUTKOWSKI

WHAT IT'S LIKE TO...

GREEN SCENE
Matt Taylor in the studio and (inset) how his reports appear on TV

Rain or shine, Matt Taylor loves talking about the weather, which he calls the "nation's conversation". He joined the Met Office in 1998 and the BBC in 2004, and is now a trusted member of the BBC Breakfast team, whose forecast becomes even more important when we're hoping for a sunny summer of sport...

OFF COURSE I wanted to study meteorology at university, but didn't get the grades, so I did geography and became a town planner. Later, the Met Office were recruiting for weather observers, so I did their in-house forecasting course for a year. When I was based in Cardiff doing a BBC forecast, my boss asked if I'd fancy going to London to train as a presenter. I loved it!

OFF THE CHARTS My alarm goes off at 2.45am and I'm at BBC Broadcasting House in London by 4am. I go to make-up first, then go through the weather charts. I have a briefing with one of the forecasters from the night shift, then I convert all the meteorological information into something more audience-friendly. I'm not scripted in any way, shape or form, but there's someone talking in my earpiece constantly, counting down how much time I have left.

ON CAMERA The London studio is a small box room with a green screen, and it's completely self-operated. I have to watch what I'm wearing, because anything green will disappear! I select my name from a screen and this will set the camera height, sound and lighting to a level that matches whoever is presenting. I'm just under 5ft 4in, so if Chris Fawkes, who is 6ft 7in, is on before me, it can take ages for the camera to move into place.

SCREEN TIME I see my graphics while I'm on air on a screen in the studio. It's a reverse image, so when I move my arm to the left, you're seeing it go right on screen. I've got full control over what the public see – including what order the animations are in and how long each slide lasts. For an outside broadcast, I can't see the graphics, so I'll have a quick look beforehand, and then have someone in my ear telling me what's appearing behind me. I prefer having a screen I can actually see, so we tend to save the outside broadcasts for the summer months, when there's a big event going on – like Wimbledon! JONATHAN WELLS

TIME TO PLAY BALL

We need to encourage more young girls to get into team sports, says Stephanie Hilborne

GAME ON Young girls need more support to play team sports

The Women's Euro 2025 is about to erupt on our TV screens, with the BBC and ITV broadcasting matches in a way that nobody – even the pioneering women who had to fight to play the sport they loved – could have imagined. This summer, the BBC will also be broadcasting the Women's Rugby World Cup. Elite women's team sports are finally getting attention.

But on the ground, when it comes to team sport, it's a different story. More than 50 years after the FA lifted its ban on women's football, girls are still losing out. More boys than girls play team sports – 69 per cent of five-to-16-year-old boys compared to only 47 per cent of girls – according to Sport England. In England alone, that equates to around 900,000 girls who, had they been born a boy, would be experiencing the joys of this shared endeavour, but aren't.

This is profoundly unfair and it matters more than ever. We know that the mental health of young women is in crisis. Sport is a joyful antidote and a powerful release from the anxiety plaguing so many – in fact, the origin of the word sport, "desport", means to be carried away from responsibility.

Time spent on the football pitch, rugby field or netball court also prepares you for adult life in myriad and unexpected ways. You discover that if you fail, you'll bounce back, and you develop resilience to face the trials and tribulations of life. You take risks. You learn how to respond when someone makes a mistake that costs your team. And if you're lucky, you discover how to lead others.

So, with all these benefits – and after the Lionesses' spectacular victory at the last Euros at Wembley in 2022 – why are we not where we should be today? The picture – with football at least – has improved. Over the past four years, the FA reports that the number of girls participating in the sport has more than doubled, from 1.2 million in 2021 to 2.7 million in 2025. But we're up against a lot... Stereotyping is alive and well and starts the minute you're born. We've all seen the little girl running along the wall and being told, "Get off that wall. You'll get dirty, you'll rip your dress." And the boy? "Ah, look, he's running on the wall!"

> '1.3 million girls stop taking part in sport after primary school'

Sport isn't valued for girls in the same way as it is for boys, so most girls have a skills deficit when they start school when it comes to throwing, catching, kicking and hitting a ball. On top of that, there's a dearth of girls' clubs and opportunities. If your daughter wants to play football, rugby, hockey or cricket, the chances are that she'll have to play with the boys in mixed teams – an environment that only a few girls thrive in.

There also still aren't enough opportunities for younger girls to play netball, a sport overlooked for too long: whereas snooker was on free-to-air TV from 1969 when black and white televisions were the norm, international netball matches weren't on our screens until 2006, on Sky Sports.

With seven in ten girls saying they avoid being active on their period, and a lack of support for girls as they go through puberty, it's not surprising that 1.3 million teenage girls stop taking part in sport after primary school. While things are changing, girls still tend to be steered away from team and ball sports.

There is, of course, tremendous joy to be had from individual sports such as running and cycling – and gymnastics and dance are incredible disciplines – but this should not displace team sport. Its shared joy and shared experience should be open to everyone.

As the Women's Euro 2025 kicks off and we prepare to watch the Women's Rugby World Cup, I couldn't be happier to see these fearless people on our screens. We must now start another much-needed revolution – the overhauling of grassroots team sports to finally meet girls' needs.

Stephanie Hilborne OBE is the chief executive of the charity Women in Sport. The Women's Euro 2025 starts with Iceland v Finland, 4pm Wednesday ITV1

CAN THE LIONESSES ROAR BACK?

The pressure of success may weigh on a wounded England, but debutantes Wales can play without fear, says Simon Barnes

GETTY

What would you rather be: a swaggering champion trying to prove your greatness all over again, or a plucky contender with nothing to lose? Underdog or overdog? It looks like a no-brainer. Everybody wants to be a champion, that's what you're there for. But the underdog has a freedom from expectation and a joy just in stepping onto the pitch. The cares of a champion are known only to a privileged few, but they can weigh the world.

England will perhaps feel a tiny hint of envy as they keep the closest of close eyes on Wales in the next few days. The two are drawn in the same group at the Women's Euros: the defending champions against the first-timers. England carry the burden of expectation; have Wales already exceeded theirs? If the idea of going into a tournament is to have fun, being Welsh has a lot going for it.

The rise of the England women's football team has been one of the great national adventures, creating joy after Covid. England won the Euros in 2022 – Ella Toone's perfect chip and Chloe Kelly's shirt-whirling celebration in extra time took them to a sensational 2–1 triumph against Germany.

The following year England reached the final of the World Cup. They lost 1–0 to Spain, but goalkeeper Mary Earps saved a penalty, won BBC Sports Personality of the Year and was awarded an MBE. The Lionesses had become part of national life.

But it's not always easy to be a champion and teams are horribly complicated things. You always plan to go into a major tournament looking serene, but England are having a hard job convincing us they're not a team in crisis. And Mary Earps is part of that crisis.

She announced her retirement from international football just days before England beat Portugal in the Women's Nations League at the end of

JOY UNCONFINED
The victory of the Lionesses over Germany in the 2022 Euros provoked wild celebrations

May. She was no longer England's first choice keeper, having lost her place to Hannah Hampton. England head coach Sarina Wiegman has overseen the age of England's success – and seemingly doesn't have a sentimental bone in her body. Opinions vary as to whether Earps was nobly sacrificing herself or walking off in pique.

Centre-back Millie Bright has also stepped away, saying her physical and mental health required a break, and had immediate knee surgery. Midfielder Fran Kirby has also retired with injury problems.

As a textbook example of how not to go into a major tournament, this could hardly be bettered. Group D will be difficult for England, with matches against France and the Netherlands before they meet Wales in what could be a must-win game.

Back in 2003, the Football Association of Wales pulled their team out of the qualifiers for the 2005 Women's Euros as part of a cost-cutting exercise. But they have come back from this 21st-century rock bottom, and last year triumphantly qualified for the Euros by beating Ireland. Euro 2025 will be their first major tournament.

Sport is full of fairy stories like this – it's one of the reasons we watch. But such tales are usually followed by less comfortable experiences. Wales have just been beaten 4–1 by Italy and the team, under Rhian Wilkinson, are aware that qualification could be followed by three very chastening matches in the actual competition.

There are two good omens, though. The first is that Jess Fishlock, their all-time record goalscorer with 162 caps and 47 goals, is back after injury, perhaps avoiding the exhaustion that follows so many players into these summer tournaments. The second is that their last group match is against England, and England may well be desperate to win it. It's a situation that could inspire a Welsh team. Especially if England go into the match thinking "Well, it's only Wales..."

England are learning that the only thing harder than achieving success is doing it all over again. As for Wales, they've already won.

GABBY LOGAN

'England can get to the final'

Are you excited about hosting the BBC's Euro 2025 coverage?
I can't believe it's three summers since we were celebrating the Lionesses' win because it feels like we're still basking in the glow of that trophy. I love major tournaments. You get so engrossed in what you're doing.

Does Euro 2025 feel different from previous tournaments?
When Radio 4 [on the Today programme] is discussing the selection for the Euros in the morning, you know the sport has moved out of the cheerleader type of broadcasting of 15 to 20 years ago. You can just see that in the way that this Euros selection for Sarina Wiegman has been scrutinised. That's the way the team want it.

What do you think the mood is like in the England camp?
Things like [recent retirements] can be an opportunity for a group to galvanise and regroup. Now they're probably feeling: "Take the attention away, let us focus on the build-up and then let's go into this and bring it back home."

And what's the mood like in the Wales camp?
When it's your first experience of a major tournament, you have to believe. They've got to believe they have an opportunity to show a generation of young girls and boys in Wales what is possible.

What's your England prediction?
I think they can get to the final, but it's more possible for them to get to the final if they don't finish top of the group. But once you start playing that game, you're in a dicey situation.

What about Wales?
Wales can really affect the outcome of this group. They've got to go out and attack, rather than try to preserve goalless scoresheets. They've got to go for it.

WENDY OWEN
ENGLAND 1972–77

Wendy Owen, 71, was capped 16 times for her country. She was a member of the squad for England's first ever international in 1972, a 3–2 win over Scotland

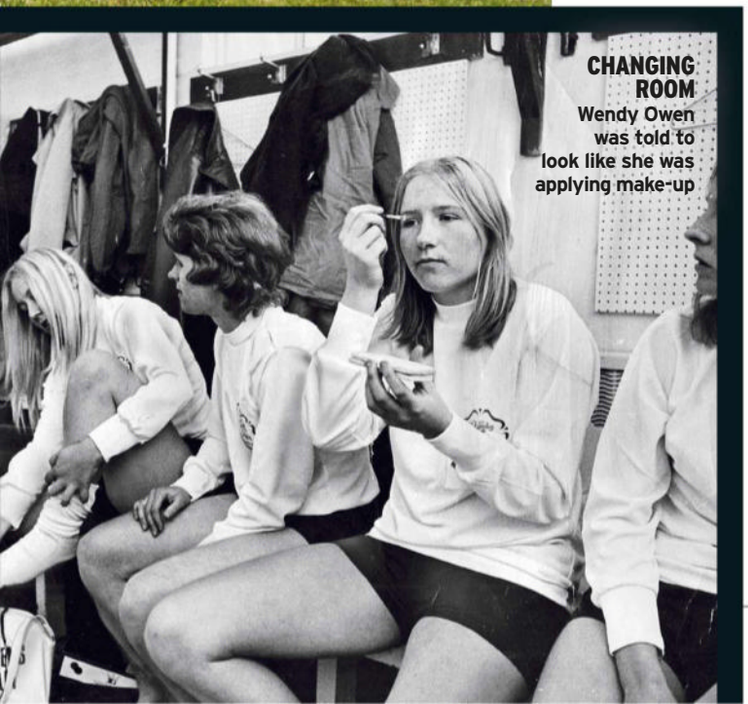
It was the England men's team victory in the final of the 1966 World Cup that inspired Wendy Owen to play football at every possible moment. She saw no difference between herself and the other kids playing kickabout on the council estate in Beaconsfield, Buckinghamshire, where she grew up. Eventually, she would go on to become a member of the first women's England international squad.

"At 11, I would pretend to be Geoff Hurst or Martin Peters – my heroes – in our back garden," she remembers. "I joined my two brothers and their friends playing football on the green in front of the houses. I didn't really notice I was the only girl."

But that didn't last long. Owen was a pioneer of women's football, but she had to overcome many obstacles in order to play, simply because of her sex. At the age of 13, she encountered her first hurdle – the Football Association's ban, dating from 1921, forbidding girls and women from playing on its pitches, prevented her from joining a league team.

"The boys I played with formed a proper team so that they could join a league, and I was excited to be part of it – until I found out that I couldn't. I was incensed."

But her father, a local youth club leader, resourcefully formed a girls' league using unregistered referees and pitches. Owen made such an impression that she was invited to join Thame, a club in Oxfordshire. Her father would ferry her on the twice-weekly 50-mile round trip for training and games.



CHANGING ROOM Wendy Owen was told to look like she was applying make-up

"We played on such rubbish factory pitches that after one winter match we were all completely soaked in mud from head to foot. But there was no changing room, never mind showers. So both teams walked to the local cattle marketplace where there was a hose for washing the livestock and we used that, hosing ourselves down like cattle. It made the local paper and shamed the council into giving us a hut with a basic shower."

After the FA ban was overturned, she was spotted by Eric Worthington, the first England women's team manager, who included her in the squad for the historic first international in 1972. By then at sports college training to be a PE teacher, Owen had to ask for leave of absence.

"I was advised to wear a skirt for that meeting and had to borrow one as I didn't own one." She almost didn't get permission to join what would become such an historically important match. "The college principal, a woman, said to me, 'Surely women playing football is just a joke?' It was one of the male governors who approved it."

The press showed some interest in the England v Scotland match, but it came with a side order of sexism. "We got a bit of media coverage before the game, but they only wanted to know what your boyfriend thought," says Owen. "Sylvia Gore, who became the first woman to score an international goal for England in the game, said her boyfriend had told her to choose between him and football, so she chose football. The reporter replied: 'Surely getting married is more important?'

> 'We had no changing room. We had to hose down like cattle'

"Our captain Sheila Parker was a mum, and they asked her, 'Who's looking after your baby?' Another reporter said to me: 'Surely women playing football is like men knitting?' One photographer brought a make-up compact with him and asked me to pose putting on eyeshadow, which I did, even though I never wore it."

But nothing could blunt the thrill of that first historic match, even though as a substitute Owen didn't get on the pitch. Her first cap came the following year, although it would be half a century before the FA awarded women their actual caps. Until then, Flo Bilton, who was a driving force in the women's game, handmade their own version.

Ultimately, Owen played 16 times for England until she retired at 26 to become a coach, concerned at having headaches from heading the ball. "I do worry about dementia," she says, musing on the high incidence from that era in the men's game. "But I'm well. Looking back, I could never have imagined women's football would reach where it has.

"I didn't feel like a pioneer. We just wanted to play football. I don't envy today's players because we had no pressure on us."

But the home win in 2022 wouldn't have happened without those early days of struggle. "When the Lionesses won the Euros, I was shouting and screaming and jumping round my living room, and my phone went mad with texts congratulating me. They all said, 'Without you, it couldn't have happened.'" And, she concedes: "I suppose that's true."

CAROL THOMAS
ENGLAND 1974–85

Carol Thomas BEM, 70, was the second captain of England between 1976 and 1985, leading them to their first European final in 1984. She was awarded the British Empire Medal in 2022 for services to association football and charity

LITTLE STAR The former England captain with her husband Alan and baby in 1986

“We used to get one man and his dog turning up, but I was blown away to be playing for my country,” says Carol Thomas of her first time playing for England in a win against France.

Spectator numbers increased only slowly from that match in November 1974. Gradually the attitudes of those watching began to change. “Men would call out stuff from the sidelines – ‘Shouldn’t you be in the kitchen?’ But those same men kept coming back to watch the football because it was good. We won them over.”

Working as a clerk at Northern Dairies, Thomas was lucky to be given paid leave when she played for England. Many others had to use holiday or unpaid leave, or miss the games entirely. “Our kit was second hand from the under-18s boys,” she recalls.

With just six caps, Thomas was stunned to be made England captain at the age of 20. “I was so proud to tell my fiancé Alan and my parents. Alan was involved in local football and would do extra training with me after work. When we got married in 1979, we skipped a honeymoon so I could play in a tournament in Italy.”

She led England to their first matches outside Europe, at the global invitational 1981 Mundialito in Japan, although the players had to pay for their own flights. In 1984 she captained the side to their first European Championship final, and a year later she received her 50th cap from England football legend Sir Tom Finney. “Shaking his hand was amazing,” says Thomas. “Such a nice man, and he respected our game.”

But not everybody did. “In 1993 when the FA took over women’s football [from the Women’s FA], they acted like there had never been an England women’s team before then, as if there were no previous pioneers. After all our struggles, the women of our era felt left out in the dark.

“It took the Lionesses winning the Euros [in 2022] to change that. Even so, I’m not sure full equality will come in my lifetime. It can’t until the crowds for men’s and women’s football are the same size.”

Younger players, she says, “have no idea what we went through. We’re proud to have done it. I respect the Lionesses’ skills but I wouldn’t change the era I played in. We were the stepping stone for where they are today.”

GILLIAN COULTARD

ENGLAND 1981–2000

Gillian Coultard MBE, 61, was the first woman to reach 100 England caps, while winning two National League titles and six FA Cups with Doncaster Belles

‘I wished I was a man, with what they earned. Football cost me a fortune’

Gillian Coultard is frank about her envy of today’s elite female footballers. Throughout her career in the 1980s and 90s, she not only fitted in four training sessions and a match every week around her full-time factory job, but it was an era when competing at the highest level – even for England – actually cost her money.

“Now they can get a job out of it,” she says. “We didn’t have that. Most of the time, I had to pay my own way to play, even though my employer was supportive, giving me three weeks’ paid leave for the 1995 World Cup in Sweden.

“I wished I was a man, with what they earned. Football cost me a fortune.”

The youngest of eight children of a Yorkshire barmaid (“My dad was around but didn’t stay long”), she was seven when she first joined her four brothers playing football on a local green.

“At school I played football, rugby and cricket – the boys’ sports – and made the boys’ football team,” she says. “I was the only girl, of course. No one said I couldn’t play until I was 13 at grammar school.

“I had to play hockey and rounders instead. But I wanted to play football. It was like my whole world had ended.”

Then a teacher put her in touch with the legendary Doncaster Belles, one of the most successful women’s teams in the country.

“Twice a week I would get the bus ten miles to Doncaster and back, when there weren’t many buses and less money. A lot of the ‘Donny’ players were much older than me, but they saw me right. I couldn’t wait for Friday training and the Sunday match.

“We were always second to the men, we couldn’t train or play till they were done. It would be dark by then, so we’d use car headlights to illuminate the pitch.

“Away games would be at working men’s club grounds just as the pubs were coming out, and the blokes would shout that we should be at home washing pots, having kids. I didn’t respond. All I cared about was playing better.”

TRAILBLAZER In action for England at Bramall Lane, Sheffield, in 1997

With the women’s game in its developmental infancy, age brackets didn’t exist. Coultard earned her first England trial at 13 – she achieved a record 125 appearances by her retirement in 2000. “I treasure representing England,” she says. “I’m proud I’m from a working-class background and put something back into Thorne, my home town [in South Yorkshire]. I watch girls training on local pitches now and it makes me cry because it started off with one – me,” she says, recalling her school days as the only girl in the team. “When I walk down Wembley Way and see everyone with the names of women players on the back of their shirts, I think ‘Wow!’. The FA called us the lost generation. Others had it worse before my era and I’m grateful to them, like those after me are grateful to us. We’ve put women’s football on the map.”

STEPH HOUGHTON

Steph Houghton MBE, 37, was captain of the England women's team for eight years from 2014 to 2022

Winning Euro 2022 should have been Steph Houghton's glorious swansong. Instead, she had to watch as her former teammates celebrated.

The Lioness, who led her country to two World Cups and the Euros in 2017 with 121 caps and 14 years of service under her belt, tore her Achilles tendon in September 2021 and was replaced by Leah Williamson as England captain. And while she made the pre-tournament England training squad, she was cut on the eve of the Euros.

"It was hard not to be there, but at the same time, I've got mates that I've spent my whole career with – my best mates – winning something for England," she recalls. "I know how hard they worked. When I watched that final and watched them lift the trophy it was super special, but it was bittersweet to a point. It was out of my control. Ultimately, it's made me stronger as a person."

Houghton grew up "hitting a ball against the wall" in the yard with her dad in Sunderland but adds, "There was still no real professional football. I couldn't really play for a team and get paid. There wasn't really a pathway, especially in the North East.

"I lacked female role models. I grew up watching Kevin Phillips, David Beckham, Steven Gerrard because I got to see them every week on a Saturday or on Match of the Day. Later in my career, you'd notice the likes of Kelly Smith and Rachel Yankey.

"People have grown to accept that you can be a girl and play football – it is mad to have to say that."

Houghton played for Sunderland, Leeds Carnegie, Arsenal and Manchester City on her way to the top, chiselling her name as a pioneering Women's Super League icon. A tournament victory with England may have eluded her but Houghton has an MBE for her services to football and she remains proud of her time on the pitch.

PATRICIA GREGORY MBE

'We ignored being told we couldn't play...'

HONOURED
Patricia Gregory collecting her MBE in January

Patricia Gregory, 77, was a founding member of the Women's Football Association, in 1969, set up to organise the game at a national level. She helped arrange the first England women's matches and in 1971 helped lift the FA's ban on women playing on FA pitches.

Where did it all begin?
In 1967 when I was 19 and living in north London, I saw Tottenham's male players celebrate their FA Cup win and wondered why women didn't play football, so I wrote to my local paper [The Hornsey Journal, inset below]. Dozens of girls responded and we tried to form a team, which was when I discovered a 1921 ruling by the Football Association barring females playing on any FA ground. It said: "Football is unsuitable for females and should not be encouraged."

What did you think of that?
I found it very irritating so I put an ad in a soccer magazine. Multiple boys' and men's teams invited us to play them, and it snowballed. We formed regional teams and leagues, then the Women's FA in 1969. When the FA ban was lifted in 1970, there wasn't a joyous feeling. We weren't feminists. We didn't have a grand vision. We just wanted to play so we ignored being told we couldn't and found a way to do it. Even then, the English Schools' FA told us they preferred to devote available finance to the progression of schoolboys; and some mothers felt the sport wasn't suitable for the female form. I don't think young players today realise the journey we've been on.

Because of you, the first England international took place in 1972...
Many others were involved. It was 100 years after the first men's international.

Is there a level playing field for women now?
Of course not – in anything. But we've come a long way since the media asked the first England women's manager Eric Worthington about the damage to women's breasts if the ball struck a player's chest. He replied that he regarded the area as a natural trap!

Now it's over 20 years since football became the top participation team sport for women and girls in England. I'd still like to see girls' football embedded in all schools. But I do feel pride when I catch sight of an expanse of football pitches and realise that the players on them are women. They can play thanks to the work of a handful of people half a century ago, among whom I can count myself. KB

JOSIE GREEN
WALES 2010–PRESENT

Josie Green, 32, plays for Crystal Palace in the Women's Super League and has 39 caps for Wales, who have qualified for the Euros finals for the first time in their history

As a young girl, Josie Green says she had no visible female football role models to look up to. "There was no one I could picture myself becoming, because I could only see men's football on TV," the Welsh international says. "Now I wonder why I didn't question it.

"These days, knowing that young girls and boys can see professional female players like me on television is a big driver in what I do. What the women before us did was amazing, to get it to the place we are now."

These are monumental times for Welsh women's football. A memorable play-off victory over the Republic of Ireland last December saw the team earn a place at Euro 2025, their first ever major international tournament.

"It's so exciting and fantastic," says Green, who grew up in Hertfordshire but qualified to represent Wales through her grandfather. "Making history for our country like this was a massive goal, which has taken many years of effort, especially after falling at the final hurdle last time. You think it will never happen. We're super-proud."

For all that, not all voices are supportive. Where once the barracking for the women's game was limited to a few voices on the sidelines, now they throng on social media. "It's constant – nasty comments on videos, men or boys saying stuff to drag women's football through the mud. It's very hard to avoid it. Social media is important to drive visibility for our sport. But if you're not in a good place, social media can be very dark."

For Green, turning professional at 25, just as a teaching career beckoned, was a big decision. "I was newly qualified as a PE and geography teacher, doing my first year of teacher training, when I was offered a football contract. I had a crisis in my head about the insecurity of it – the men's game has far more financial stability.

"I had just bought my first house. The contract was only for a year and wasn't as well paid as teaching, which also had a clear career pathway. I thought, 'If football doesn't work out, where does that leave me with my mortgage?' But I chose the game I love."

Now she feels it was one of the best decisions she ever made, and is proud that the number of girls playing football in Wales has tripled since 2016. "When I was first called up in 2010, we wore cast-off men's kit, which was hugely oversized on us. In 2023, the Football Association of Wales began paying the men's and women's national teams an equal match fee. That was a real milestone. It's no coincidence we've now qualified for the Euros."

Green, who plays as both a defender and a midfielder, started playing football at the age of six, kicking a ball about with her brother and their friends – all boys. "I'd be out there for hours. It never fazed me playing only boys, and if I hadn't felt so comfortable it could all have turned out differently. I saw other girls making daisy chains in the playground and I knew I didn't want to do that."

Fundamental to it all was the support of her family, particularly her late father Clive. She began her senior career at Watford and enjoyed successful spells at Tottenham Hotspur and Leicester City before joining her current club, Crystal Palace, last August.

> 'There are constant nasty comments on social media'

Soon after earning her first Wales cap at the age of 16, her father contracted pancreatic cancer. For the next five years, until after his death, she found it difficult to engage with football. "Family was more important," she says. "It's a horrible disease to see someone go through. I remember him being pitchside on a very cold day in the latter stages, determined to be there watching me. I know he's always with us. He would have absolutely loved what I've achieved."

HELEN WARD

The former Wales striker will be commentating for BBC TV and BBC Radio Wales

What's the mood like in the Wales camp?
Excitement, plus a nervous energy, in a good way. Only Sophie Ingle has previously played in an international tournament, with Team GB at the Tokyo Olympics.

How impressive has Wales coach Rhian Wilkinson been?
She deserves a huge pat on the back. She has utilised some of the younger players and the impact of players off the bench has been a great asset. That's credit to Rhian.

How do you think Angharad James will perform as captain?
I've known Haz since she was 16. She has always been a very calm presence. She has developed into a real leader, not one who is going to shout and scream.

Who is Wales's key player?
Jess Fishlock is the focal point for everything good. She can score from 40 yards and get up for a header, despite being about five foot one!

Which Wales player could have a breakout tournament?
Carrie Jones made her debut for Wales aged 15 in 2019. She's the youngest player to do so and is now playing in Sweden, learning a different type of game. She's got the world at her feet.

Realistically, how do you think Wales will fare at the Euros?
It's a really tough group, but I think they have got a decent chance. We saw what Wales men did at Euro 2016. Who's to say the women can't follow suit?

And apart from Wales, who is the team to watch?
World Cup holders Spain are the real standout team. A lot of their Barcelona players will be hurting after losing to Arsenal in the Champions League final, but their team is special. MICHAEL POTTS

FARA WILLIAMS

England's most-capped player is part of the BBC presenting team at Euro 2025

What's the mood like in the England camp?
With any tournament, there's always a little bit of drama in the build-up, but the players are in good hands with coach Sarina Wiegman and their focus now will just be the Euros.

How important is Wiegman to England's success?
She's a serial winner. Look at her record: she has got to the final in each of her last four tournaments.

How much will England enjoy having Leah Williamson back?
We saw what she did at Euro 2022 as captain. We missed her leadership and the qualities that she has at the World Cup. The way she can communicate with players, the media and staff is important.

Who is England's key player?
Lauren Hemp could light up this tournament. She's somebody who gets bums off seats.

Which England player could have a breakout tournament?
The goalkeeper Hannah Hampton, off the back of what her predecessor Mary Earps did – look how important she became to the team and her connection with the fans. Also Michelle Agyemang. She scored on her debut and could be a real wild card.

Do you think England can retain the title?
I never doubt Sarina or the attitude of the players. Finish first in the group, anything can happen.

Which other teams will do well?
The Germans are slight underdogs; I don't think they've been mentioned too much. They look like they're getting back to that dominant Germany team we used to see over the years. MP

INTERVIEWS BY CAROLINE FROST

After 148 years, Wimbledon can easily lay claim to being the oldest tennis tournament in the world. Equally impressive, says former UK number one Annabel Croft, is the exacting standard set by the event organisers: "There's never a blade of grass out of place."

For British players, it has the advantage of being on home turf. "When you're travelling for 30 weeks of the year, it's great to sleep in your own bed," says four-time semi-finalist Tim Henman, who highlights the men to keep an eye on this year. For competitors from further afield, the idea of adding their names to those who have come before remains irresistible. But Croft, who gives RT her pick of the women, says, "Grass doesn't suit everyone, which only adds to the prestige of winning here."

COUNTRY USA AGE 27
RANKING 4

He's played well at Wimbledon before. He has won grass court titles, including at Eastbourne a few times. He's not been playing so well on clay, so I would guess he's been busy practising on grass and that choice may well pay off in the coming fortnight.

BEN SHELTON

COUNTRY USA
AGE 22 RANKING 10

Another player with a big, powerful game. A former semi-finalist at the US and Australian Opens and still only 22, he's confident, and his strongest weapon is his left-handed serve.

ALAMY; GETTY

COCO GAUFF

COUNTRY USA AGE 21 RANKING 2

We first saw her at Wimbledon aged 15 beating Venus Williams. She's had some ups and downs, but she's a hard-worker, intent on overcoming any weak spots in her game. And she's fresh from her second Grand Slam title in Paris so that will have given her extra confidence.

ARYNA SABALENKA

COUNTRY Belarus AGE 27 RANKING 1

A three-time Grand Slam winner, she's had a consistently successful year, but she's lost both Australian Open and French Open finals, so I wonder if she's suffering from a bit of stage-fright. If she can overcome that, with her hugely powerful game, she has her heart set on Wimbledon, and she'll be the one to beat.

MIRRA ANDREEVA

COUNTRY Russia AGE 18 RANKING 7

She's only 18 but has been doing extremely well. She won at Indian Wells, beating Sabalenka on the way to the title. Mirra is a complete, natural player who plays with a lot of power but can also mix it up.

JASMINE PAOLINI

COUNTRY Italy AGE 29 RANKING 5

She was a finalist at Wimbledon and the French Open last year. She has a wonderfully exciting game, and everyone loves her because she's a pocket rocket who smiles all the time and can always get the crowd on her side.

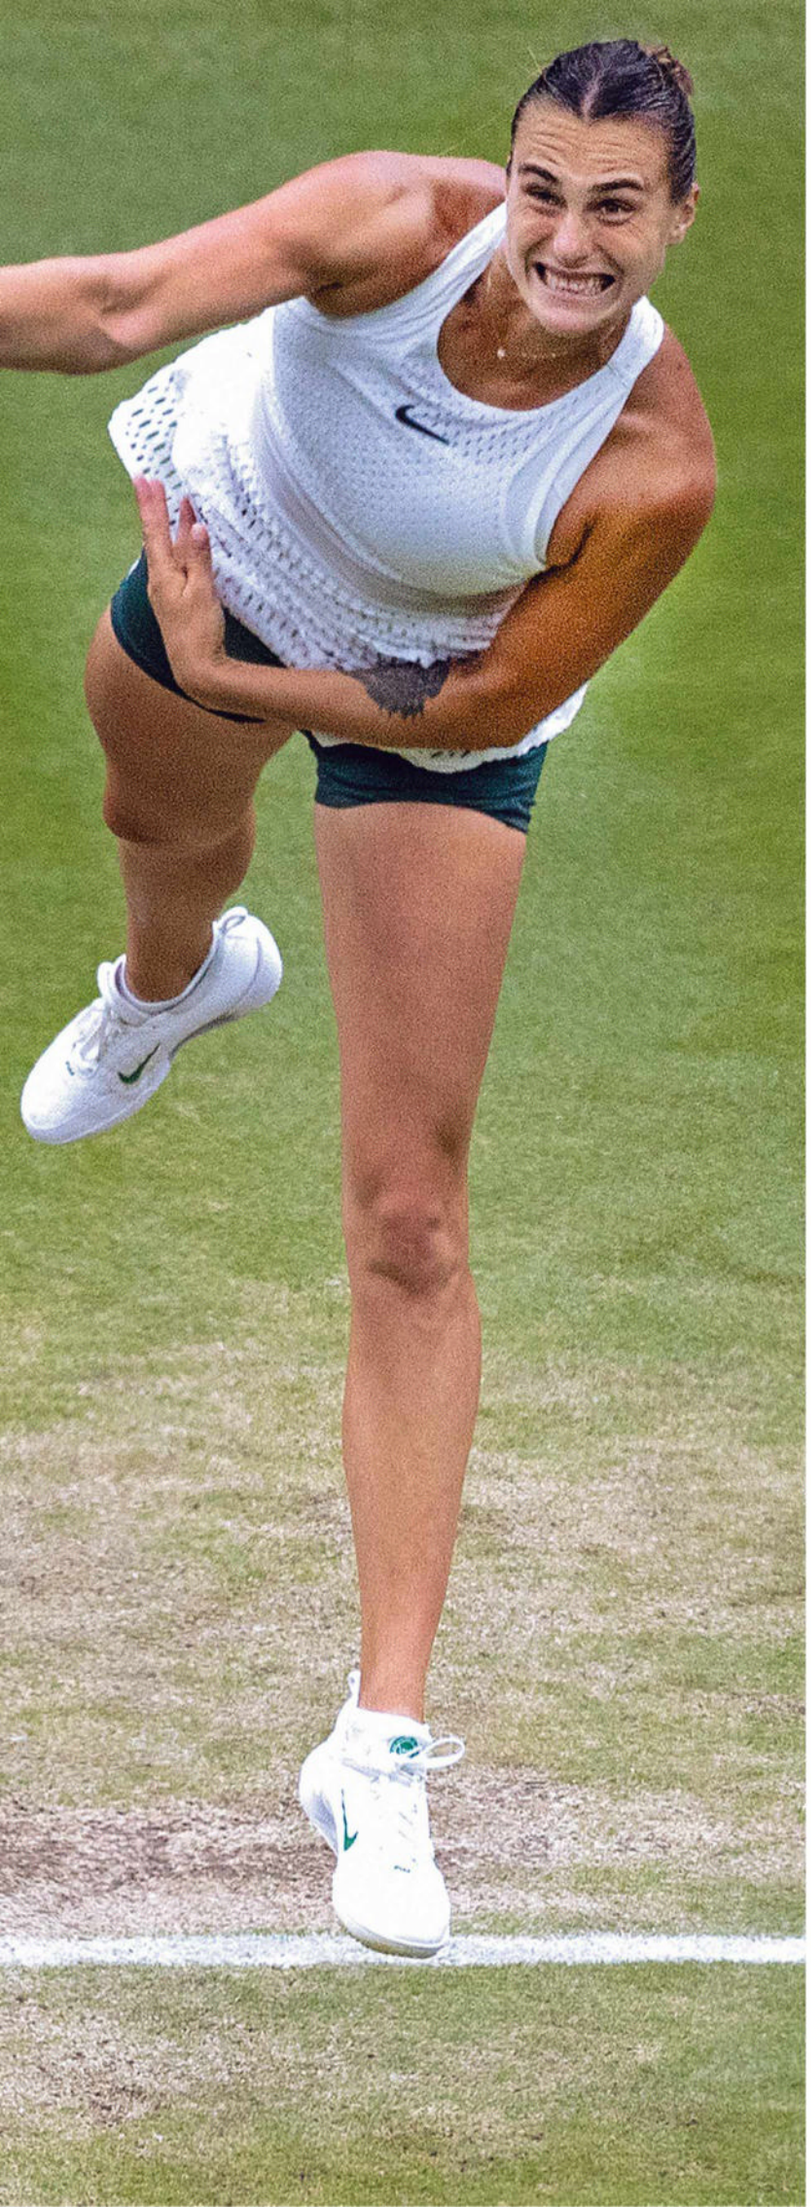
WIMBLEDON 2025



EMMA RADUCANU

COUNTRY GB AGE 22
RANKING 36

We'll all be looking out for her. A former US Open champion, she's another player who has suffered uneven form over the past couple of years. But 2025 has seen her reignite her tennis: she's had loads of wins and she has a great game for grass. She volleys as well as anybody and her sliced backhand is her biggest weapon.

IGA SWIATEK

COUNTRY Poland
AGE 24 RANKING 8

She's a former world number one with more Grand Slam titles (five) than anyone else playing, but she doesn't like grass. With that record of wins, however, you can't count her out.

WINNERS AND LOSERS

If you're not a sports fan, the TV schedules can look pretty barren at this time of year

My friend is off to Palm Springs this week. He tells me he's taken one look at the TV schedule and decided he might as well go and get a tan in time for his brother's wedding. We both know what he's referring to: the summer of sport is upon us. Here cometh the great unifier, as we are constantly being told by excited presenters – but also divider, judging by RT's steaming postbag and my own conversations with said pal.

Sometimes I don't know why we're friends. I love watching sport: the physicality, the craft, the knowledge that (steroids, money, sponsorship, privilege all aside) it can't be hacked. The best participants, even those with fawning documentaries to their name, got there through years of early mornings in cold winters. Their rewards are earned. It's not cynical.

For my friend, though, it's just "competitive hobbying" – not all but mostly men proving their prowess at moving a ball into a hole, a hoop or a net with a foot, a hand or a task-specific stick (according to him, Formula One isn't a sport). He finds the chest-beating toxic, the commentary banal. Turns out this isn't a new sentiment, but one honed since being held captive to "the living death of Grandstand" as a kid.

During those weekends of decades past, it did indeed feel as though sport was an irresistible TV force. Frank Bough, Harry Carpenter, and David Vine were as familiar as my parents, and I had weekly dreams featuring "the sandy-eyebrowed man" that turned out to be Tony Gubba.

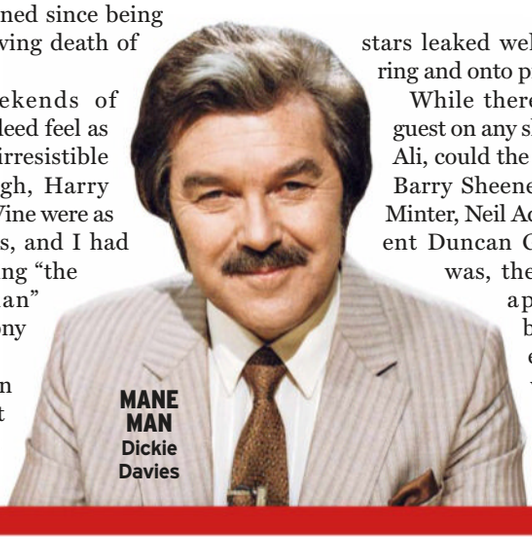
Meanwhile, over on "the other side", it didn't really matter what the sport was; for me, it was all about World of Sport presenter Dickie Davies and his era-defining quiff.

As it happened, this show delved into pastimes not previously bagged by the BBC, and a classic case of "compare and contrast" during those times was the first Saturday in July every year: Grandstand focused on the women's final at Wimbledon, while WoS went off to the World Hot Rod Championship Final held in Ipswich. Hence, the wrestlers and darts players featured on ITV became household names and, again being fair to my friend, sports stars leaked well beyond the boxing ring and onto prime-time television.

DYNAMIC DUO The rivalry between Bjorn Borg and John McEnroe electrified Wimbledon viewers in the early 1980s

> 'For non-sporties, the TV schedules can feel like there's no respite'

While there was never a better guest on any show than Muhammad Ali, could the same really be said of Barry Sheene, John Conteh, Alan Minter, Neil Adams or the omnipresent Duncan Goodhew? The truth was, they made for an easy, apparently amiable booking for multi-generational TV shows, with the idle hope that they might encourage any children watching to get outside and "do something".



MANE MAN Dickie Davies

We saw during last summer's men's Euros just how unifying a sporting event can still be. And in 2019, there was that extraordinary Sunday evening when, as one, we switched over from Djokovic conquering Federer in a marathon Wimbledon men's final to watch Ben Stokes pull off a miracle at the Cricket World Cup. These days, it doesn't help non-fans that, because the BBC's holdall now contains so few gems, the events it still owns get the overflowing kitchen sink treatment. For non-sporties, it can feel like there's no respite. Where to go?

For a long time, "streaming" was the answer. When Netflix came along in 2012 its drama slate, led by House of Cards and Orange Is the New Black, promised something else entirely. But that behemoth has recently spotted gold in those sporting hills; hence it has brought us live boxing matches, while Amazon has dropped millions on appointment-to-view live tennis. Who knows what might follow? They'll be building a TV schedule next.

Meanwhile, my pal's leaving on a jet plane. Of course, I know really why we are friends. As Nick Hornby wrote about music in High Fidelity, "It's not what you like but what you're like." Hopefully he'll be back just in time to avoid the start of the Premier League season. Horses for courses, I tell him, provoking a fresh shudder.

THROUGH THICK AND THIN
Kate (Julianne Moore) and her daughter Claire (Sydney Sweeney)

APPLE TV+

THRILLER

Echo Valley ★★★★ 15

Apple TV+ Available now

Julianne Moore stars as a divorcee horse rancher who goes to extremes to protect her junkie daughter in this taut thriller. Her troubled offspring (Euphoria's Sydney Sweeney) has been in and out of rehab, but things get worse when she falls foul of a menacing dealer (Domhnall Gleeson) who demands $10,000 for a missing stash. To save her, the vulnerable and lonely Moore is willing to do anything, even break the law. Scripted by Brad Ingelsby (Mare of Easttown) and directed with impressive economy by Michael Pearce (2017's Beast), this old-fashioned, bear-trap narrative clamps satisfyingly around its selfish (or foolish) protagonists.
JAMES MOTTRAM

COMEDY DRAMA

Stick

Apple TV+ Ep 7 available Wed

A soul-searching and soul-baring episode, as Pryce (Owen Wilson) contemplates a life that never was. He's lost in a daydream of imaginary memories about his late son Jett; picturing those humdrum parenting scenarios that he revealed last week were some of the hardest milestones to have missed out on. In what continues to be a tear-stained outing, Santi (Peter Dager) frets that those closest to him only ever stick around because of his golfing prowess, and there's an air-clearing showdown between Zero (Lilli Kay) and Mitts (Marc Maron). FRANCES TAYLOR

SCI-FI

Murderbot

Apple TV+ Ep 8 available Friday

In a better show, this would be a failsafe format for a funny, thrilling episode: finally, the human crew tasked with scoping out an alien planet face off with their explorer rivals and they send Murderbot (Alexander Skarsgard) to conduct the negotiations. Can he outwit the other crew, or are his efforts actually a scheme against his own employers? Even in a comedy drama that's misfiring as badly as Murderbot – there's just no getting away from how weak the jokes are – it's still a diverting showdown. JS

LAST LEG Ewan McGregor and Charley Boorman have one final adventure before returning home

TRAVEL

Long Way Home Apple TV+ Episode 10 available Friday

SERIES FINALE

Ewan McGregor and Charley Boorman's two-month motorcycling trip around northern Europe hasn't been short of stunning scenery, but the last leg is hard to beat, offering as it does the lakes and mountains of the Alps in Austria and Switzerland. Before that, the pair visit Vienna where they eat cakes like Grandma used to make. In fact, they're at a café that tries to fight poverty and loneliness among the elderly Viennese by employing them. The final days encompass classical music and the Swiss sport of Hornussen. As the white cliffs of Dover heave back into view, there's a chance to reflect on years of friendship... JACK SEALE

PERIOD DRAMA

The Buccaneers Apple TV+

Episode 3 available Wednesday

In the wake of Theo (Guy Remmers) discovering the truth about his marriage, regrets and recriminations generate a complex web of relationships where almost everyone yearns for the one they do not have – not that they can usually stick with a decision for long. Amelia Bullmore steals the episode as Theo's strategising mother, in whom we see new depths. As so often in costume dramas, it's a case of duty overriding what the heart wants. JS

HIDDEN DEPTHS The Dowager Duchess of Tintagel (Amelia Bullmore) with Nan (Kristine Froseth)

CRIME DRAMA

Smoke

Apple TV+ Ep 3 available Friday

A crime drama based on a real serial-arson case curls its way around the main story, having established that it can knock us flat with a big surprise. We're more concerned with small interactions and the conflicts playing inside the characters' heads. While fire investigator Dave (Taron Egerton) tries to reconnect with his wife and pursue his parallel existence as a fiction writer, his new partner Michelle (Jurnee Smollett) is still haunted by her own experience of fire. JS

Tom Sturridge returns as Dream in the second and final series of The Sandman

JONATHAN FORD

FANTASY DRAMA

The Sandman

Netflix Volume 2, eps 1–6 available Thursday

The sprawling fantasy series about an exiled God of Dreams returns, though attention will inevitably focus as much on matters behind the scenes as the story unfolding on screen. Executive producer and screenwriter Neil Gaiman, who also created the comic on which the series is based, has been accused of sexual assault, throwing the future of various ongoing TV projects into doubt. Gaiman denies all allegations.

We know the future of The Sandman at any rate – this second series will be its last, with six episodes released this week followed by another six later in July. For now, in these first "chapters", we follow Dream (Tom Sturridge) as he undertakes a dangerous journey into Hell. It's as grand and vast as ever, sometimes to a fault. HUW FULLERTON

ROMANTIC COMEDY

An Endless Wedding

★★★ 15 Amazon Prime Video
Available now

Two guests at a wedding at a luxury retreat on the edge of the Moroccan desert find themselves stuck in a time loop in this fun subtitled French romantic fantasy. Sister-of-the-bride Camille Rowe and slacker guest Tarek Boudali must relive the same day over and over, forcing them to take stock of their already jaded lives before returning to normality. Director Patrick Cassir's reworking of Palm Springs (2020) occasionally drifts into overly ponderous reflections, but, the laughs are plentiful, even though comparisons to the classic Groundhog Day are unavoidable. TERRY STAUNTON

WAR DRAMA

Warfare ★★★ 15

Amazon Prime Video
Available now

This visceral Iraq War film is co-directed by Alex Garland (Ex Machina) and former US Navy Seal Ray Mendoza. Based on Mendoza's own experiences, it follows a platoon of American soldiers in real time after a botched surveillance mission results in a number sustaining life-threatening injuries. The film is unsparing in its depiction of the barbarity of armed conflict, and the cast – which includes Will Poulter and Joseph Quinn – all turn in committed performances. However, while this drama is well crafted, a lack of strong character work leaves the audience with little else to chew on. PATRICK CREMONA

DOCUMENTARY

Attack on London: Hunting the 7/7 Bombers

Netflix Available Tuesday

This four-part series recalls an extraordinary few weeks in the summer of 2005, when London was rocked on 7 July by co-ordinated suicide bombings on the Tube and bus network. An already traumatised city was further destabilised by a separate terrorist cell attempting to perpetrate a very similar set of atrocities a fortnight later, creating a pressure-cooker environment in which an innocent man, Jean Charles de Menezes, was shot dead by police. Those who were in London at the time, including survivors of the 7/7 attacks, are on hand to provide first-hand witness statements. JACK SEALE

DOCUMENTARY

Tour de France: Unchained

Netflix Available Wednesday

The Tour de France will have to continue without an annual documentary series giving fans behind-the-scenes insights into the season just gone: Netflix has cancelled Unchained, so this is the last time it will underline just how competitive and intense top-level cycling is. As big money from the Middle East threatens to change cycling, the retrospective on the 2024 Tour also talks about the dominance of Slovenia's Tadej Pogacar and his rivalry with fellow Slovenian Primoz Roglic, Remco Evenepoel of Belgium and Jonas Vingegaard of Denmark. When the sprint stages create carnage, the temperature rises still further. JS

COMEDY

Strays ★★★ 15

Netflix Available now

Naive border terrier Reggie (voiced by Will Ferrell) teams up with a streetwise Boston terrier (Jamie Foxx) to seek revenge on his abusive owner in this shaggy dog story awash with decidedly adult language. Assisted by a ragtag bunch of similarly put-upon pooches, Reggie embarks on a slapstick-heavy campaign to make his uncaring human (Will Forte) see the error of his ways. Told entirely from the perspective of the mutts, Strays is a frequently charming tale of four-legged friendship, but the lapses into gross-out humour risk offending some viewers. TS

SUSPENSE THRILLER

Copycat ★★★★ 18

Netflix Available now

In this inventive, stylish and gripping 1995 thriller, tough detective Holly Hunter teams up with agoraphobic psychologist Sigourney Weaver to hunt down a serial killer who duplicates the crimes of his most notorious historical predecessors. Aided by a super-smart script, director Jon Amiel generates unbearable levels of suspense, while his stellar leads give top-notch performances. As mimic murder mysteries go, this gives the same year's Se7en a run for its money. ALAN JONES

FEARLESS
Take a deep dive into the world of conservationist Ocean Ramsey

DOCUMENTARY

Shark Whisperer Netflix Available Monday

"I'm good to go any time... If it doesn't go well, don't blame the shark." Marine conservationist Ocean Ramsey uses both her camera-friendly appearance and her apparent lack of concern for her own safety to take a new approach to animal-rights campaigning. Essentially, she's an influencer-naturalist, creating shareable online content that she hopes will make humans less fearful of sharks and more upset about them being endangered. Her critics are included in this feature documentary, asserting that Ramsey's videos are irresponsibly risky and are more about her than the sharks. But Ramsey's comeback has some force, and is one that has been used by many activists fighting for many causes over decades: if these tactics work when nothing else has, what's the problem? JS

Rubiales vs Hermoso: the World Cup Kiss

Discovery+ Available Wednesday

The fallout from Spain's victory in the 2023 Women's World Cup is still ongoing – not the win itself, but the bewildering moment during the medal presentation when Luis Rubiales, the then president of the Royal Spanish Football Federation, grabbed star player Jenni Hermoso and kissed her on the lips. Rubiales, who has since been found guilty of sexual assault, is the focus of the first of two episodes here as he gives his first major interview about the incident. Despite its status as part of the Shondaland universe, this twisty legal thriller from 2014 never seemed to catch on in the UK in the way its contemporary Grey's Anatomy did. A shame, as it's a wickedly delectable affair, with Viola Davis impossible to resist as law professor Annalise Keating, who at the outset embroils her students in a labyrinthine murder plot. Among those taking tutelage are Hogwarts graduate Alfred Enoch and Aja Naomi King. Davis won an Emmy for her role, the first black woman to do so in the category of outstanding lead actress in a drama series. DB

He says she just upped and left for no reason, but we suspect her view of events will very likely be different. Strongly acted and not overstaying its welcome at just three episodes – it never came back for a superfluous second series – Come Home delivers thoughtful, relatable drama, to the point where satisfying the viewer doesn't depend on the big reveal at the end. JS

This unsettling drama follows a young Mancunian recently released from prison who returns to his old stamping ground. After falling back into heroin abuse and confrontations from his past, he sees a faint glimmer of brighter times ahead when he reconnects with an old schoolfriend. The unflinching portrait of a British working class low on hope places the film in territory explored by Ken Loach or Shane Meadows. It's arguably more hard-hitting than either, especially in its shocking depictions of the short-fuse rage that goes hand in hand with frustration. TERRY STAUNTON

A STORY TO TELL
Claes Bang stars as the legendary Swiss folk hero, William Tell

HISTORICAL ACTION DRAMA

William Tell ★★ 15

Now Cinema Available Friday

Claes Bang stars in what is easily the grandest and most violent screen adaptation of the Swiss legend to date. Set in 1307, it finds Bang's humble marksman William (Wilhelm) Tell defending his family and community in the wake of an Austrian attack. It's a surprisingly soft performance, rather outbalanced by Connor Swindells's compelling work as Tell's nasty nemesis. But if the clichéd screenplay and low-key tone of the film are a touch disappointing, director Nick Hamm brings plenty of scale and gusto to its savage battles. SEAN McGEADY

GAME OF THE WEEK

Death Stranding 2: On the Beach 18

PS5 Available from 26 June

The Walking Dead actor Norman Reedus returns as Sam Bridges in this zombie-free post-apocalyptic epic – devised by Hideo Kojima, the visionary director of Metal Gear Solid – to continue his work reconnecting society, delivering vital supplies and linking the last bastions of humanity together once more. Movie stars Léa Seydoux and Elle Fanning are also among the list of familiar faces to star. ALEX RAISBECK

HORROR

The Woman in the Yard ★★ 15

To rent/buy Available Monday

Grief and trauma cast long shadows for a widowed car crash survivor in this moody but muddled horror thriller. Ramona is struggling to bring up her children in their remote farmhouse when a veiled woman appears seated in their yard... and moves steadily closer to their home. Director Jaume Collet-Serra (Orphan) lets the mystery simmer to mixed ends as the family's nerves fray. The cast is convincingly fraught, but their efforts are hobbled by a misshapen story that begins intriguingly, then sags and finally becomes frenetic and confusing. KEVIN HARLEY

DOCUMENTARY

Riefenstahl ★★★★ 15

To rent/buy Available Monday

Director Andres Veiel's documentary provides an absorbing portrait of the deeply controversial German film-maker Leni Riefenstahl. Her propagandist 1930s films extolled the fascist ideals of the Nazi party, establishing her reputation as Hitler's favourite director. After the Second World War, she denied all accusations of collaborating with the Third Reich, maintaining she had been an apolitical artist and ignorant of the Holocaust. Veiel deconstructs the legend that Riefenstahl curated for herself, drawing on her own personal archive, alongside footage from the subject's often combative appearances on TV. TOM DAWSON

RAYE OF DELIGHT
Musical escapism from the award-winning artist

MUSIC

Glastonbury from 5pm BBC2/7pm BBC4/ 9.10pm BBC1 Catch up via iPlayer

"It's better to burn out than to fade away" is one of Neil Young's most quoted lines, but the folk-rock agitator, who turns 80 this year, is showing no signs of doing either.

Even for such a huge festival, he's a coup of a headliner, although at the time of going to press the BBC's coverage of his set is shrouded in uncertainty. Young initially declined to play owing to the BBC's "corporate control" of Glastonbury, but if the feud does get resolved he'll be on BBC2 from 10.10pm.

A much safer bet for a small-screen appearance is the multi-award-winning R&B/soul singer/songwriter Raye (9.10pm BBC1), who wears her Amy Winehouse influences in her choice of eyeliner as well as her impressive vocal style.

The identity of the artist billed as Patchwork (7pm BBC2) is strongly rumoured to be those lovable mis-shapes Pulp. Let's hope those rumours are true. The easily identifiable Gary Numan, meanwhile, can be found tucked away at the relatively intimate Park Stage (7pm BBC2, 8pm BBC4), where his unique vocal cords will deliver tracks from his 22-album career. GARY ROSE

FOOD

Jamie: What to Eat This Week

4.55pm C4 Catch up: C4 streaming

Jamie Oliver hand-picks a selection of his favourite summer celebration meals. Have you ever wondered what might happen if common or garden fruit and veg were taken to the next level? Well wonder no more, as that's exactly what Jamie promises to do here.

He cooks some perfect seasonal plums in a delicious sauce to serve with crispy duck, whisks up some cucumbers with fresh summer herbs and greens for a tasty gazpacho soup, griddles sweet peppers on the barbecue before serving them in a tomato and bread salad, and then finishes off with a sour cherry frangipane tart served with crème fraîche and sticky cherries on top. Voilà! PAUL WHITELAW

ENTERTAINMENT

Celebrity Bridge of Lies

6.00pm BBC1 Catch up via iPlayer

The proof a game-show format is working is when you know audiences are shouting answers at the screen in frustration, willing the contestants to somehow hear them by magical methods. Bridge of Lies has achieved this, as evidenced by a recent episode of Celebrity Gogglebox where the armchair critics got very invested in trying to determine fact from fiction.

More famous faces attempt to cross the board, sorry, bridge and avoid stepping on false statements so they can win as much cash as possible for their chosen charity. Host Ross Kemp and his dulcet tones welcome wildlife presenter Steve Backshall, Antiques Road Trip expert Natasha Raskin Sharp, sports broadcaster Jason Mohammad and actor Sunetra Sarker. JOHNATHON HUGHES

Pointless Celebrities

7.30pm BBC1 Catch up via iPlayer

This week's radio personalities special gives you a chance to put names to familiar voices. They're a competitive bunch, being a mix of tenacious news journalists and confident comics, and through the game we discover some hidden talents among the contestants, most random of which is how much Radio 2's Good Groove host DJ Spoony knows about Monopoly property colours.

On the flip side, Zoe Hardman from Heart has limited knowledge of obscure soap operas. Things get pretty nail-biting, especially in the head-to-head round, but the tension is broken by Johnny Cochrane and Inel Tomlinson (remember their CBBC sketch show?) performing an elaborate victory dance each time they get a question right. JH

Michael Portillo's Sicily

8.00pm 5 Catch up via My5

From architecture to gastronomic delights, taxi trips to off-road excursions, delivering potted street-level histories to charting Mafia connections, Michael Portillo's visit to Palermo, the capital of Sicily, is a sprawling grab bag of incident and ideas. Much like the city itself, in fact.

As rambling, bright-eyed and resolutely old-fashioned as ever – part Phileas Fogg, part Kenneth Williams – the former Tory minister gets stuck into spleen sandwiches in a street market, is taught about the rebirth of one of the city's run-down palazzos and even learns cooking from a duchess. It may be a re-edited version of an earlier film he made about the city, but it's well worth a second visit. CERI THOMAS

DRAMA

Casualty

8.20pm BBC1 Catch up via iPlayer

Amid a worsening situation involving heroin, Flynn offers a hardline take, arguing that those who are in the grip of addiction are irresponsible. But Dylan, a recovering addict himself, albeit of alcohol, displays more empathy, pointing out that brain chemistry may have something to do with it. And thank goodness Dylan possesses a streak of compassion, for a fellow colleague is struggling with dependency issues. That staff member is, of course, Ngozi, who has woken with an empty can of piña colada on a bedside table and a stranger lying next to her. When Dylan suspects she's spiralling, out comes the breathalyser test... DAVID BROWN

TRAVEL

Incredible Journeys with Simon Reeve

9.10pm BBC2 Catch up via iPlayer

One of the more frustrating aspects of travel TV is that encounters tend to be intense but brief. Globetrotting Simon Reeve addressed the issue with 2021's Incredible Journeys, where he discovered the fate of some of those he met, including the ten-year-old Bangladeshi labourer recycling glass in 40-degree heat.

Along the way, Reeve replayed a cornucopia of his greatest hits, entwined with reflections on his difficult teenage years. Repeated on BBC2, Reeve's mix of bravery and everyman empathy still packs a punch. JOHN AIZLEWOOD

UNDER PRESSURE
What does Katherine (Uma Thurman) know that she's not letting on?

DRAMA

Suspicion 11.00pm ITV1 Full series on ITVX

The three apparently unconnected Brits are being questioned about the abduction of the son of media mogul Katherine Newman (Uma Thurman) from a New York hotel. They all react very differently as detective Vanessa Okoye (Angel Coulby) and FBI agent Scott Anderson (Noah Emmerich) cross-examine them. However, all maintain it was just coincidence that they were in the hotel that night.

Meanwhile, Sean Tilson (Elyes Gabel), the mysterious man who has already calmly dispatched several people with alarming efficiency, has arrived in England. Then footage of the abducted boy with the message "Tell the Truth!" is plastered all over the internet. This has been an addictive thriller so far, but we are no nearer to discovering the truth about the kidnap. JANE RACKHAM

Secrets of Diana's Wedding Dress

9.00pm 5 Catch up via 5 streaming

Featuring more lace and taffeta than you can shake a bejewelled sceptre at, this fluffy documentary tells you everything you might reasonably want to know about the wedding dress worn by Lady Diana Spencer when she married Prince Charles in 1981. It was designed by British fashionistas Elizabeth and David Emanuel, who both crop up to reminisce about the biggest commission of their lives (Elizabeth screamed with delight when she got the call from Diana herself). "St Paul's is vast," says David, "so you couldn't do a little understated dress, it had to be something significant." They conjured up a memorable ensemble. PW

DOCUMENTARY

In the Arena: Serena Williams

11.45pm, 12.30am BBC1
Full series on iPlayer

This series offers a gripping account of Williams's tennis career. The one catch is that it is entirely her version of the story, recounted by her and by her close family and inner circle. She is such a huge sporting figure, you feel the producers could have brought in a few contributors from outside "Team Serena" to offer another perspective.

But that's carping, really: it's an incredible tale, with tonight's double bill focused on her mid-career when she faced a series of heavy setbacks, starting with the death of her eldest sister, a blow she struggled to recover from, and continuing through injuries and sickness. But you could never count her out. DAVID BUTCHER

FILM REVIEWS

FILM OF THE DAY

The Deer Hunter ★★★★★

10.45pm-2.15am Legend 18

WAR DRAMA Michael Cimino's multi-Oscar winner is one of the finest movies about the Vietnam War. It begins, Godfather-style, with a long wedding party where a group of steelworkers get drunk, then hunt deer before boarding a plane for the heart of darkness. Starring Robert De Niro, John Cazale, Christopher Walken and John Savage, this is a story of reconciliation and national renewal, by turns shocking and moving, which won the best picture Oscar as well as statuettes for Walken and Cimino. Its mournful guitar theme lingers long in the memory. ADRIAN TURNER (US/UK 1978, violence, swearing)

Carry On Up the Jungle ★★★

8.50-10.50am ITV3 PG

COMEDY Though this is one of the weaker entries in the series, there's still much to raise a titter. Frankie Howerd and Kenneth Connor lead an expedition to Africa to find the Oozalum bird. Along for the ride are Joan Sims in search of her long-lost son and Sid James seeking a rumble in the jungle. The reception committee includes Terry Scott as an infantile Tarzan. DAVID PARKINSON (UK 1970)

Red River ★★★★★

12.15-3.00pm ITV4 U

WESTERN This movie is one of the finest achievements of American cinema. It's the story of a cattle drive from Texas to Missouri, and John Wayne gives arguably his finest performance as cattle boss Tom Dunson. He is matched by Montgomery Clift in a star-making role as Matthew Garth, Dunson's fast-on-the-draw ward. TONY SLOMAN (US 1948, BW, HD)

Sonic the Hedgehog ★★★

1.05-3.00pm E4 PG

FANTASY ADVENTURE The speedy blue video-game icon cuts a spiky dash in his feature debut. The plot has space critter Sonic enlisting the help of a small-town cop (James Marsden) in fleeing the clutches of a mad scientist (a scene-stealing Jim Carrey). Despite some fairly patchy animation, this is Sonic at the top of his game. DAVE ALDRIDGE (US/Jpn 2019, HD)

Operation Crossbow ★★★

2.05-4.00pm BBC2 PG

WAR DRAMA Volunteers George Peppard, Jeremy Kemp and Tom Courtenay are tasked with derailing Nazi plans for the V-2 rocket in this film co-scripted by Emeric Pressburger (writing under the pseudonym Richard Imrie). There is plenty of derring-do, but the big-name cast, which also includes Sophia Loren and Anthony Quayle, has little to get on with. DP (It/US/UK 1965, HD)

The Big Trail ★★★★

2.15-4.45pm Great Action U

WESTERN Fox made this epic to celebrate the centenary of a great pioneer trek from Independence, Missouri. Under director Raoul Walsh, the cast and crew arduously re-created the highlights of that journey, giving the film an amazing documentary look. A then-unknown John Wayne plays authoritative wagon-train scout Breck Coleman. ALLEN EYLES (US 1930, BW)

South Pacific ★★★

2.25-5.10pm Sky Arts U

MUSICAL This screen version of the fabulous Rodgers and Hammerstein show has always been better liked by the public than the critics. The score is wonderful and Mitzi Gaynor hits the spot in the big numbers, but her brashness grows tiresome, while Rossano Brazzi is rather wooden. The war sequences also seem to belong to a different movie. TS (US 1958, HD)

Jurassic World: Fallen Kingdom ★★★

6.25-9.00pm ITV2 12

SCI-FI ADVENTURE The sequel to Jurassic World is a darker affair with a save-the-dinos plot, and it ends on a bold note that upends the franchise rules. Chris Pratt and Bryce Dallas Howard are likeable leads, plus there's a creepy new dinosaur – but it does feel like a build-up to Jurassic World: Dominion (which is on ITV2 tomorrow). HUW FULLERTON (US/Sp 2018, may be edited for content, HD)

Casino Royale ★★★★

8.00-10.40pm ITV1 12

See review p85 (UK/CzRep/Ger/US 2006, violence, col/BW, HD)

The Equalizer 2 ★★★

9.00-11.20pm Film4 15

CRIME THRILLER Denzel Washington returns as do-gooding ex-government spook Robert McCall in this well-paced sequel. There's comeuppance for a bunch of yuppie scumbags to start, but the plot gets more knotty as McCall's past returns to haunt him. The staccato bursts of mayhem are well marshalled by returning director Antoine Fuqua. JEREMY ASPINALL (US 2018, violence, swearing, HD)

Glory ★★★★

12.30-2.40am C4 15

WAR DRAMA This American Civil War tale pays tribute to one of the first black regiments to go into combat, the 54th Massachusetts Voluntary Infantry. Denzel Washington won an Oscar for playing Private Silas Trip, who butts heads with Matthew Broderick's Colonel Shaw. There is some stereotyping, but also some brilliantly staged battle scenes. AT (US 1989, violence, swearing, HD)

FILM

Past Lives ★★★★ 12 10.00pm (11.00pm N Ireland) BBC2 Catch up via iPlayer

In a low-key but impressively emotional feature debut from film-maker Celine Song, childhood friends Nora (Greta Lee) and Hae Sung (Teo Yoo) reconnect 20 years after the former emigrated from South Korea with her parents. Nora is now married and living in the US, so what does fate have in store for the pair and, indeed, Nora's American husband (John Magaro)?

As she revealed in a 2023 interview, Song drew inspiration from her own experience of meeting her Korean-speaking childhood sweetheart in a New York bar and becoming the bridge between him and her English-speaking husband. "Something about that moment really sparked something," she said, and this became the basis for her pivot from playwriting to cinema. She and her touching story received two Oscar nods in 2024 for best picture and best original screenplay. JEREMY ASPINALL

Olivia Rodrigo brings some pop sheen to the final night's headline slot on the Pyramid Stage at 10pm on BBC1, but the prime-time slot in TV terms goes to last week's RT cover star, Rod Stewart (7.15pm BBC1). And it sounds like he'll be pulling out all the stops, promising us a sexy, glamorous show featuring special guests, an orchestra and... bagpipes.

Tonight's most adrenaline-fuelled act, though, will be the Prodigy (9.45pm BBC4). The group last played here in 2009, where they blew the metaphorical lid off the Other Stage amid a frenzy of glow sticks, strobes and flares. Sadly they will, of course, be playing Glasto without frontman Keith Flint. GARY ROSE

Described as Yorkshire's answer to Land's End, wild Spurn Point juts out between the mouth of the Humber estuary and the North Sea. Sean Fletcher and Anita Rani explore the ever-changing nature of this narrow, three-mile-long peninsula. Much work is being done to restore the native oyster, returning to British shores at Spurn after an absence of 85 years. The shifting muds and tides can be hazardous for vehicles, so stringent safety protocols have to be in place.

Elsewhere, Charlotte Smith examines the concerning rise of wildfires in our countryside, while John Craven encourages us to get snapping as he launches the 2025 photographic competition in aid of BBC Children in Need. JOHNATHON HUGHES

LAST IN SERIES

The final dino-mentary follows palaeontologists probing fossils in what was once an island but is now Portugal. Obligingly, the scientists speak to each other in English as they discuss their finds, which feature one of the largest dinosaurs ever unearthed in Europe, Jurassic plant-eater the Lusotitan.

With apologies to the VFX team who may have worked on him for months, I'll be honest and admit the animated Lusotitan (nicknamed Old Grande) doesn't look very convincing. When he fights with a rival male, all the bellows and grunts can't distract from the fact it looks like two plastic toys being bashed together by a five-year-old going "Grrr!" DAVID BUTCHER

Hudson and Rex

7.00pm U&Alibi Catch up via Now

Crime writers must always be on the lookout for seemingly innocent trivia that could be put to deadly use. In the case of this episode, you can just imagine someone on the creative team chancing upon a fact about the alarm pheromone of a bee possessing a sweet smell that resembles banana oil and thinking, "Now, how to turn that into a macabre murder plot?"

The result is the president of a beekeeping association being found fatally stung and with a foreboding note in her possession about the queen being dead. Rex, having the strongest nose, is the one who discovers the banana link and even gets to wear a bespoke version of one of those protective suits with a hat and mesh veil. DAVID BROWN

Our Yorkshire Shop: a Victorian Restoration

8.00pm C4 Catch up: C4 streaming

Fans of this cracking series will have been cross it got bumped by football last week. Now we're back with the cheery Yorkshire team as they restore a grocer's shop in Masham, Wensleydale. Key to it all is quirky joiner Ian – who occasionally dresses as his alter ego, Yvette. This week he fixes up the fittings and counters, while getting his measurements a little off, as usual. Local soap sellers Marcus and Warren finesse the period design and bicker amusingly. Like every character, they deserve a series to themselves. DBu

24 Hours in Police Custody: the Butcher of Suburbia

9.00pm C4 Catch up: C4 streaming

The true-crime juggernaut returns with a macabre two-part special. The series still reliably brings us cases that pack a nasty punch. No previews were available for this story, which follows the unfolding case of Annette Smith, a 74-year-old who goes missing from her Bedfordshire home in November 2023.

When her lodger Scott Paterson reports to police that a woman friend of hers came to pick her up by car, investigating officers find no evidence to back up the story. Paterson soon becomes the prime suspect. DBu

NEW SERIES

Tim Lawton's three-parter strikes a canny balance between personal stories and experiences of that dreadful day of the London bombings and its aftershocks, with wider context. This opening double bill includes survivors grappling with terrible luck in getting the wrong train, but relative good fortune in jumping on an adjacent carriage to the explosion; first responders and family liaison teams managing the physical and emotional wreckage; intelligence and police officers leading the manhunt; relatives desperate for news; and intimates of the suicide bombers who either conspired in the attack or were horrified by it.

The enduring trauma is written across people's faces and in their mannerisms, yet it never feels intrusive, more a tribute to staggering resilience in the face of unthinkable atrocity. And amid the horror, there are small but kind gestures: one survivor speaks with real warmth of being invited into a mosque for a restorative cuppa. Make no mistake: for all today's divisions, not all hope is lost. GABRIEL TATE

The BBC surely ought to be hurrying a festive episode into production. How about a Christmas special in which John Chapel (Timothy Spall) is filming a Caesar Christmas special? Janie (Gwyneth Keyworth) gets drafted in as a non-speaking extra, only for murder to strike on set?

This finale certainly sets things up well for the future, with John brought on board as a police consultant, a move that saves Janie having to massage his ego each time she needs advice. And with ratings for the show having been solid, it's surely only a matter of time before we see the pair of them again. DB

There's one more spectacular set piece before we're done with Gilead and it's a big one that you'll watch with your heart in your mouth. First, though, the triumphant handmaids are escaping after launching their attack on the commanders (did you cheer? Of course, you did), while Serena (Yvonne Strahovski) is forced to acknowledge that maybe she was a teeny bit wrong about Gilead and its future in the world.

Not all the commanders were despatched, so June (Elisabeth Moss) and Commander Lawrence (Bradley Whitford) devise an explosive plan to finish them off. You may be surprised to feel a pang of sadness when the bomb goes off. JANE RACKHAM

FILM OF THE DAY

P Past Lives ★★★★ 10.00-11.40pm BBC2 (starts 11.00pm in N Ireland) 12

ROMANCE Celine Song's nuanced indie movie is a graceful, sensitive story of unrequited passions and what happens when the stars don't quite align. It begins with two young Korean best friends being separated by a family move to Toronto. Twelve years later, budding playwright Nora (Greta Lee) gets back in touch with Hae Sung (Teo Yoo), and old emotions are stirred. Song crafts a sophisticated adult tear-jerker that subtly captures the realities of love. Beautifully performed and shot, this is a film destined to be talked about for years to come. JAMES MOTTRAM (US 2023, swearing, HD)

The 39 Steps ★★★★★
12.25-1.50pm BBC2 U

SPY THRILLER Alfred Hitchcock brings John Buchan's novel to the screen with wit and verve. All the ingredients of classic Hitch are on show – not least his favourite innocent-man-on-the-run plot – as Robert Donat gets dragged into a conspiracy and ends up in Scotland handcuffed to icy blonde Madeleine Carroll. ANDREW COLLINS (UK 1935, BW, HD)

Live and Let Die ★★★★
1.40-4.10pm ITV1 PG

See review p95. (UK 1973, may be edited for content, HD)

North by Northwest ★★★★★
1.50-4.00pm BBC2 PG

SPY THRILLER This Alfred Hitchcock gem contains generous helpings of action, intrigue, romance and comedy. Cary Grant is at his suavest as an advertising executive forced to take on enemy agents, while the attack by the crop-dusting plane and the finale on Mount Rushmore are simply the icing on the cake. DAVID PARKINSON (US 1959, HD)

On the Beat ★★
2.00-4.00pm Rewind TV U

COMEDY In this hit-and-miss yarn, Norman Wisdom plays a would-be policeman who is reduced to being a Scotland Yard car park attendant as he's not tall enough to be a bobby. Then it turns out he's the spitting image of a criminal... Wisdom is funny enough, while a host of British character actors goes through the motions in support. TONY SLOMAN (UK 1962, BW)

Moana ★★★★★
3.15-4.55pm BBC1 (starts 2.50pm in Wales) PG

ADVENTURE Traditional story values and modern animation techniques blend perfectly in this tale of young Moana (voiced and sung by Auli'i Cravalho), who leaves her tropical island home and goes on a quest, shared with demigod Maui (Dwayne Johnson). With its captivating heroine and storming songs, this is Disney at its best. TREVOR JOHNSTON (US 2016, HD)

Nanny McPhee ★★★
4.10-6.15pm ITV2 U

PERIOD FANTASY This fun family movie tells the story of seven Victorian youngsters who have driven away 17 nannies. Their conduct worsens when they learn their widowed father (Colin Firth) is planning to remarry. But salvation is at hand in the form of stern Nanny McPhee (Emma Thompson). Younger viewers will love the film's anarchic spirit and mayhem. SLOAN FREER (UK/US/Fr 2005, HD)

Maze Runner: The Scorch Trials ★★★
9.00-11.00pm BBC3 12

SCI-FI Dylan O'Brien returns as teen saviour Thomas in the second film to be adapted from the young-adult book series. Having helped his fellow captives escape a giant maze, he encourages them to search for other rebels. Director Wes Ball makes the most of this sequel's larger canvas, and the set pieces come thick and fast. STELLA PAPAMICHAEL (US 2015, violence, HD)

The House That Dripped Blood ★★★
9.00-11.00pm Legend Xtra 12

PORTMANTEAU HORROR This is one of the best compendiums to be made by Amicus, with Christopher Lee and Peter Cushing playing tenants of a remote house with a grisly past. Possession, waxworks, voodoo and vampirism all feature among Psycho writer Robert Bloch's tales of terror, which both tingle the spine and wittily send up the genre. ALAN JONES (UK 1970, violence)

Bonnie and Clyde ★★★★★
11.40pm-1.25am BBC2 (not N Ireland) 18

CRIME DRAMA Director Arthur Penn's stylish gangster movie stars Faye Dunaway and Warren Beatty as the gun-toting criminals roaming the American Midwest during the Depression. Its sizzling script, attention-grabbing performances and graphic use of violence made it not only a box-office hit but a Hollywood game-changer, too. DP (US 1967, violence, HD)

The Sisters Brothers ★★★★
12 midnight-1.55am BBC1 15

WESTERN Patrick DeWitt's idiosyncratic novel is brought searingly to the screen by director Jacques Audiard. Joaquin Phoenix and John C Reilly play the assassin siblings, who are sent to find a chemist (Riz Ahmed) who has developed a divining substance to locate gold. Phoenix and Reilly make for a formidable but endearing pair. EMMA SIMMONDS (US/Fr/Rom/Sp 2018, violence, swearing, HD)

HIGH DRAMA
Who will hold Centre Court's crowds in awe this year?

SPORT

Wimbledon

10.30am BBC2, 2.00pm, 7.00pm BBC1 Catch up via iPlayer

The strawberries are picked, the cream is poured and the All England Lawn Tennis Club throws open its gates; Wimbledon has arrived. There's nothing quite like the opening Monday of the Championships, as thousands of punters descend on SW19 hoping to steal a glimpse of their heroes in action.

Jack Draper will rank among the top seeds and represents the undisputed best of British hopes going into the men's tournament. In the women's rankings, Emma Raducanu and Katie Boulter are battling each other for British No 1 supremacy. Back-to-back men's singles champion Carlos Alcaraz is aiming for a hat-trick in 2025, fresh from his French Open final victory over world No 1 Jannik Sinner.

Last year's shock women's singles champion Barbora Krejcikova returns to defend her title, but faces stiff competition from world No 1 Aryna Sabalenka and newly crowned French Open winner Coco Gauff.

We're in for a treat over the coming two weeks – providing the rain stays away – and the BBC is offering extensive TV coverage throughout the Championships – so you don't have to miss a moment of the drama.

Albert Speer: Hitler's Architect of Lies

9.00pm BBC4 Catch up via iPlayer

Leading German historian Heike B Görtemaker introduces Albert Speer: the Unseen Interrogation, a never-before-broadcast 1971 interview with Hitler's architect, armaments minister, and one of his closest allies.

Görtemaker outlines the many ways Speer – a self-styled "good Nazi" – lied to interviewers over the years, twisting the truth to absolve himself in the eyes of the public, and even falsely claiming to have been involved in a plot to kill Hitler. This grimly fascinating programme is followed at 10:30pm by Albert Speer: the Nazi Who Said Sorry – Reputations, a BBC documentary first shown in 1996.

DRAMA

The Gilded Age

9pm Sky Atlantic Catch up: Now

Even among the cream of New York's 19th-century upper class, there are few who can withstand the force of social climber par excellence Mrs Bertha Russell (Carrie Coon). It's always been great fun to see her gradually twist the snobby, old-money ladies to her way of thinking. But, whisper it... has she finally hit a (beautifully marbled) ceiling? Her plans to marry her daughter off to a visiting duke appear to be crumbling, while her ever-supportive husband is losing patience with her wily ways. Is this the end of the Mrs Russell dynasty? Or, will she once again pull off a triumph while still having time to change into five different ballgowns per episode? Rarely has watching rich people do so little been so entertaining. HUW FULLERTON

DRAMA

Elsbeth

*9.00pm Sky Witness
Catch up via Now

Laurie Metcalf is one of those actors who, in a supporting role, is guaranteed to steal the limelight from the supposed lead. Look no further than Roseanne, a sitcom now overshadowed by the views of Ms Barr, but one in which Metcalf always got the biggest laughs (and three Emmys) as the neurotic Jackie.

Here on Elsbeth, she's on typically terrific form playing the long-standing star of a TV police procedural, the showrunner of which has been murdered. Although it's never said out loud, it's Law & Order: Special Victims Unit that's being parodied, with Metcalf's screen cop bearing more than a passing resemblance to Captain Olivia Benson. DAVID BROWN

Crime Scene Cleaners

10pm C4 Catch up via C4 streaming

NEW SERIES

It's not often you hear the question, "Who found the eyeball?" Then again, the gruesome world of crime-scene cleaning is not your everyday 9-to-5. Once the police are finished with their investigation and the body is removed, these are the specialists in charge of mopping up the blood and biohazards left behind; a juicy subject for a morbid ten-part series.

In Kent, Lauren Baker and her team attend the aftermath of an "unattended death", which mainly entails clearing a bungalow of maggots. Meanwhile, in the US, Larry Douglas must clean a bullet-ridden car that's been contaminated by fentanyl – a drug that is a hundred times more powerful than morphine.

Couples Therapy

11.00pm, 11.25pm BBC2
Catch up via iPlayer

The point of these sessions is for couples to talk – and listen – to each other, but for one pair Orna Guralnik worries that "sitting in in the pressure cooker of therapy might not be good medicine – they're too fragile". This double bill starts with Rod and Alison. Every sentence that Alison utters sounds aggressive, so Orna, who mainly sits nodding empathetically and occasionally interjecting gently, often pulls her up on it. Although most of the couples are making progress, Boris is so relentlessly negative that his tearful wife Jessica feels "doomed". JANE RACKHAM

The Life and Murder of Nicole Brown Simpson

11.05pm, 12.10am C4
Catch up via C4 streaming

NEW SERIES

Many talking points sprang from the trial of OJ Simpson, with pundits down the decades giving their view on everything from the justice system to LA's racial tensions. But someone often forgotten in all the analysis is OJ's wife Nicole who, along with her friend Ron Goldman, lost her life in a frenzied knife attack in 1994. Here, Nicole's sisters explore her toxic marriage to the American football star. In shocking snapshots, we hear about OJ's infidelity, his volcanic rages and outrageous demands. Continues tomorrow. DB

BURIED SECRETS
Can Martin Scarsden (Luke Arnold) unearth the truth?

DRAMA

Scrublands: Silver

9.00pm BBC2 Series 1 and 2 available on iPlayer

After season one saw battered investigative journalist Martin Scarsden (Black Sails' Luke Arnold) unpick the truth behind a murder spree in a dusty outback town, the second run of this Australian mystery drama sees him heading to the coast, as he reluctantly returns to his childhood seaside home. Martin's just planning on a quick visit to Port Silver with his new partner Mandy (Bella Heathcote), but things swiftly go awry when a phone call from an old friend puts him at the centre of a murder investigation.

It may lack the heat-haze claustrophobia of season one, but the change of locale has cost Scrublands none of its gift for swirling present and past mysteries together into a magnetic tale of slow-burn deceit and suspicion. This first of the four-episode series confidently doles out suspicious locals and grudge-bearing figures from Martin's past, as it sets up a twisty-turny tale of murder and hidden secrets. Continues tomorrow. CERI THOMAS

Shardlake 9.00pm ITV1 Full series via ITVX

SERIES FINALE

The history of TV is replete with shows that die-hard fans feel went before their time. Even now, you may hear distant cries of, "Why couldn't there have been more Firefly?" or "Give us another series of The Hour!"

So, there's nothing particularly novel about me begging for someone to recommission Shardlake. But it does feel cruel that devotees of CJ Sansom's books have waited all this time for a TV adaptation (there were reports as early as 2007 that Kenneth Branagh had bagged the lead role), only for it to be mercilessly disposed of, as Henry VIII would an unwanted wife. Anyone who agrees is welcome to begin an email campaign on our Feedback pages. DB

Ragdoll

11.10pm, 11.55pm BBC1
Catch up via iPlayer

SERIES FINALE

The makeshift sex dungeon is to thrillers such as these what the drawing room is to an Agatha Christie mystery. No matter what course an investigation takes, we're bound to arrive there in the final act. And so it proves in the concluding parts of this serial killer frightener which, like the murderer at the centre of events, stitches together its surprises from different sources.

There's a thread or two from Se7en, fabric on loan from Luther and some blood-red colouring of the shade seen in Hannibal. But it all ends with a satisfyingly grisly flourish and the sense that, with all the horrors the police have endured, some will be haunted by their experiences. DB

RT Clare Balding presents further live coverage of the opening day of the grand slam tournament from the All England Club in SW19, featuring the men's and women's singles first-round matches.
Americans Coco Gauff and Caroline Dolehide were the final players to take to Centre Court on day one last year, with the former comfortably prevailing 6–1, 6–2 in their women's singles match. Having previously claimed the 2023 US Open title, Gauff won the French Open earlier this month, so will expect to be a major contender here, even though she has never previously progressed beyond the fourth round.
A number of seeded players in both the men's and women's singles competitions suffered the ignominy of defeat on the opening day in 2024, with men's 18th seed Sebastián Báe of Argentina falling to the USA's Brandon Nakashima in straight sets, and women's number eight seed – and last year's Australian Open runner-up – Zheng Qinwen of China losing to New Zealand qualifier Lulu Sun, despite taking the first set in a memorable match that finished 6–4, 2–6, 4–6.
Coverage from other courts on the red button, iPlayer (Centre Court action available in Ultra High Definition) and at bbc.co.uk/sport. See page 58.

FILM REVIEWS

FILM OF THE DAY

The Swimmer ★★★★

4.55-6.50pm Film4 PG

DRAMA Though a lean 90 minutes and set over one short day, this melancholic film seems to span the entirety of summer, from early glimmer to its woozy late glow. Adapted by screenwriter Eleanor Perry from a classic John Cheever short story, it follows upstanding citizen Burt Lancaster as he decides to "swim home" by visiting each of his neighbours' outdoor pools on a jaunt across leafy Connecticut. But he's really in the midst of a psychic breakdown, and the care with which Lancaster and director Frank Perry show us the cracks makes for often haunting drama. CALUM BAKER (US 1968, HD)

Nothing but the Best ★★★★

11.00am-1.05pm Film4 PG

SATIRE Scripted by Frederic Raphael, photographed by Nicolas Roeg and directed by Clive Donner, this very funny film blends School for Scoundrels with Room at the Top. Alan Bates is splendid as the working-class wannabe, but Denholm Elliott steals every scene as the indolent aristocrat who tutors him in the delicate art of being a cad. DAVID PARKINSON (UK 1963)

Cover Girl Killer ★★★

11.40am-1.00pm
Talking Pictures TV PG

CRIME British TV writer/director Terry Bishop crafts a world of tawdry glamour here, as a serial killer targets a magazine's pin-up girls. You're never quite sure who's going to walk into the trap laid by the publisher to catch the killer, while it's interesting to spot a pre-Steptoe and Son Harry H Corbett among the suspects. DP (UK 1959, BW)

The Count of Monte Cristo ★★★

3.00-5.00pm Legend U

ADVENTURE Alexandre Dumas's classic tale is given a lavish screen treatment by director David Greene. Richard Chamberlain makes a sturdy Edmond Dantes, the nobleman who exacts revenge on those who had him imprisoned. The jail sequences are static, but the film comes to life once the action switches to the plush settings of Paris. DP (UK 1974)

The War Lover ★★★

9.00-11.15pm Great Action PG

WAR DRAMA Steve McQueen is on good form as a reckless bomber pilot based in East Anglia in 1943, whose behaviour on the ground endangers his comrades in the air. Robert Wagner plays his sensitive co-pilot whose growing love for Shirley Ann Field is taken as a challenge by McQueen. Sadly, Philip Leacock's direction doesn't match the quality of his cast. ADRIAN TURNER (US/UK 1962, BW)

Sweeney! ★★★ 9.00-11.00pm Legend Xtra 18

POLICE DRAMA Although not as good as the legendary TV series, this spin-off is a reasonable reminder of what made John Thaw and Dennis Waterman the icons of 1970s law enforcement. Writer Ranald Graham cranks out a typically abrasive plot, which sees the detectives investigating a suicide only to get knee-deep in vice, blackmail and corruption. DP (UK 1976, violence, swearing, nudity)

Body Double ★★★★

Talking Pictures TV 18

THRILLER Brian De Palma's sly update of Hitchcock's Rear Window hasn't aired on Freeview for a decade, so this is well worth catching. When B-movie actor Craig Wasson spies on Deborah Shelton in her Hollywood home, he finds himself witnessing a murder. It's tense, sleazy and blackly comic – with a gorgeous Pino Donaggio score. ALAN JONES (US 1984, violence, swearing, sex scenes, nudity)

The Outsider ★★★

10.55pm-12.50am Legend 15

THRILLER Gun-for-hire Craig Fairbrass heads to Los Angeles after hearing of his daughter's death in this robust movie. When he discovers the body in the morgue is a different young woman, he descends into the depths of LA's underworld and encounters ruthless businessman James Caan. There are solid performances all round. TERRY STAUNTON (US 2014, violence, swearing)

The Football Factory ★★★ 11.00pm-12.50am

Legend Xtra 18

DRAMA Director Nick Love's unflinching look at soccer hooliganism portrays a firm of thugs who "support" Chelsea, with Danny Dyer as a member who has a crisis of conscience. Decently acted, the film is at its best when things are kept nice and gritty, with Frank Harper in particularly menacing form as an ageing hooligan who's old enough to know better. DAVE ALDRIDGE (UK 2004, violence, swearing, drug abuse, nudity)

Berberian Sound Studio ★★★★

2.00-3.55am Film4 15

HORROR A sound engineer (Toby Jones) leaves Dorking and nature documentaries to work for the Italian exploitation industry in this celebration of 1970s horror. Director Peter Strickland cleverly forces the viewer to question what they are hearing and how it links into Jones's spiralling nightmare, while every sound effect reverberates with meaning. AJ (UK 2012, sexual references, HD)

REMEMBER Alisa (right) in Potocari, on the day of the commemoration of the Srebrenica genocide, plus footage from the VHS tapes (above)

DOCUMENTARY

Srebenica Tape – Storyville

10.00pm BBC4 Catch up via iPlayer

In 1995, just before the end of the Bosnian war, the town of Srebrenica was surrounded by Serb forces and cut off from the rest of the world. The United Nations had declared the besieged Srebrenica "a safe area", an enclave under its protection. Yet when the time came, the UN's contingent of 370 lightly armed Dutch soldiers failed to prevent the town's capture and massacre. In the first legally recognised genocide in Europe since the Second World War, Bosnian Serb troops murdered around eight thousand Muslim men and destroyed every trace of their lives.

One VHS tape survived the destruction, however. A four-hour film made by Sejfo, a father who wanted to show Alisa, his then nine-year-old daughter, what life was like under siege. Here, Alisa returns to Srebrenica to retrace the footsteps of her father's film. Her hope is that she can piece together a story that currently feels incomplete. Both in terms of what happened to Sejfo, and how a genocide was allowed to occur in full view of the world with no intervention. STEPHEN KELLY

SOAP

Emmerdale

7.00pm ITV1 Catch up via ITVX

Bradley Riches made such an impression in the hugely successful Heartstopper, where he played lovelorn Jack, Emmerdale's producer apparently cornered him at the National Television Awards last year to persuade him to join the soap. This neat bit of networking has paid off, as Riches is settling in nicely as quirky Lewis Barton, long-lost brother of Ross and secret love child of deceased serial killer Emma.

Despite being polar opposite personalities, Lewis and Ross are attempting to build a solid sibling relationship, as well as a lucrative cannabis-selling business, both of which are now under threat thanks to Mack's interference. This never happens on Long Lost Family. JOHNATHON HUGHES

Reuben Owen: Life in the Dales

8.00pm 5 Catch up via 5 streaming

Not many 20-year-olds would choose to celebrate their 21st birthday aboard an ancient tractor, chugging along at 15mph. Then again, Reuben isn't your average youngster. He's been restoring mucky machinery since childhood, so what better way to mark his milestone than with a convoy of his beloved vintage vehicles? The birthday boy, girlfriend Jess, younger brother Miles and three of his best mates embark on a 100-mile road trip to Whitby. There's plenty of pushing, pulling, towing and tinkering, like a slo-mo Top Gear challenge. Can all six temperamental tractors go the distance, let alone handle one of the country's steepest hill climbs? MICHAEL HOGAN

DRAMA

Scrublands: Silver

9.00pm BBC2 Catch up via iPlayer

As police suspicions about his partner Mandy's involvement in Jasper's bloody killing mount, investigative journalist Martin digs deeper into the dead man's life. Exactly what did happen at the yoga retreat? And could Jasper have been involved with the traces of rohypnol that a blood test found in Mandy's system?

The second episode of the atmospheric Australian mystery drama slathers a few more puzzles on top of the set-up in Monday night's opener. And not just those related to Jasper's death – matters from Martin's own past rear their ugly heads too as an encounter with his Uncle Vernon forces him to shelve his world-weariness and deal with what happened between them decades earlier. CERI THOMAS

The Yorkshire Vet: at Home with the Greens

9.00pm 5 Catch up via 5 streaming

There are few things that rural folk love more than their favourite tractor. Britain's oldest working farmers are no exception. With Steve's 96th birthday approaching, Peter plans a special surprise. Trusty old tractor Oddjob has served the family well for 70 years but finally looks doomed for the scrapheap.

Peter embarks on a secret mission, calling in experts to get Oddjob running again. Elsewhere, a stray kitten arrives at Stoneybrough Farm and Peter helps out a convalescing Jean by doing her shopping at Thirsk market. We also meet the next generation of agriculturalists, animal-mad twins Ronnie and Reggie. Where have we heard those names before? MH

DRAMA

My Life Is Murder

9.00pm U&Alibi Catch up via U

It feels as though the mood board for this episode was a gallery of vintage Nancy Drew book covers. You might remember those illustrations – the way Nancy would be illuminating dank cellars or staircases with the light cast from a handheld torch? Well, Alexa is doing a lot of that this evening, though her latest mystery begins with a viewing at an Auckland home valued at six million dollars. There are rumours that the 100-year-old dwelling is haunted, and the body found floating in the pool isn't going to change the mind of anyone with a nervous disposition... DAVID BROWN

DOCUMENTARY

In the Footsteps of Killers

10pm C4 Catch up: C4 streaming

In the summer of 1991, a mother-of-two from Widnes received a mysterious phonecall that prompted her to leave her seven-year-old son with a neighbour and drive off into the night. Hours later she was found dead, slumped over the driver's seat of her blue Ford Cortina. Her throat had been cut.

The killer has never been found, yet in this edition of the cold case documentary, Silent Witness's Emilia Fox and criminologist David Wilson attempt to change that. It's a knotty mystery. The police won't comment. Locals will not be quoted on the record. And what was the motive behind such a savage killing? SK

INVESTIGATING Reality TV star and documentary maker Zara McDermott

DOCUMENTARY

To Catch a Stalker

9.00pm, 9.45pm BBC3 Catch up via iPlayer

In this disturbing two-part series, reality TV star and documentary maker Zara McDermott meets women who have been forced to live with the terrifying ordeal of stalking. Jen's stalker is a complete stranger who has been fixated on her for three years. He's followed her to work and has bombarded her with hundreds of often explicit messages. A serial stalker who's been imprisoned for his crimes three times, he's about to be released again, and Jen knows he won't stop terrorising her. She's fearing for her life. By sharing their stories, women like Jen are raising awareness of the stark reality of stalking and the severe long-term impact it has. But, McDermott asks, is enough being done to support victims? 8.00pm C4 Catch up via C4 streaming

Without most of us really noticing, the sweet-toothed spin-off has reached nearly 100 episodes across ten series. It does seem to have hit its stride in recent years, though, partly thanks to having a settled line-up at last. Co-hosts Ellie Taylor and Liam Charles are in their third series together. Judges Benoit Blin and Cherish Finden have been fixtures since the start. We've passed the midway mark of the latest contest and the patisserie pressure is on. Teams scrap for a spot in the final six by serving up 24 savoury Paris-Brest and 24 delectable savarin, before delivering a faultless tiered celebration St Honoré to serve 150 people. MH

*11.05pm, 12.10am C4

Catch up via C4 streaming

LAST IN SERIES

For the press, coverage of OJ Simpson's arrest and trial was a cash cow, while for late-night talk-show hosts, it became a topical punchline. But for the Brown family, the crime was a very real human tragedy, something we witness in the concluding chapters of this, at times, achingly affecting account.

Of Nicole's three sisters, it's Denise who remains the most visibly distressed – no surprise, as it's she who recalls preparing her sibling's body for burial. OJ would, infamously, hijack the family's grief at the funeral, but it's Denise who's able now to have the last word. DB

To Catch a Stalker 10.40pm Zara McDermott explores a crime that is increasing at an alarming rate

2.00pm Wimbledon

Further coverage of day two of the tournament, held at the All England Club in London, where first-round matches continue in the men's and women's singles.

Novak Djokovic took to Centre Court at this stage last year and recorded a dominant 6–1, 6–2, 6–2 win over Vit Kopriva. Djokovic has won a record 24 men's grand slam titles, including seven here, a total that has only been bettered by Roger Federer with eight.

7.00 Wimbledon

Clare Balding introduces live coverage of day two of the grand slam tournament, where first-round matches continue in the men's and women's singles.

Home favourite Jack Draper was involved in a five-set epic on Centre Court at this stage last year, eventually prevailing 3–6, 6–3, 6–3, 4–6, 6–3 against qualifier Elias Ymer. It proved to be a good day for British contenders, with Katie Boulter and Cameron Norrie claiming victories on the No 3 Court against Tatjana Maria and Facundo Díaz Acosta respectively.

Elsewhere, the 20th seed in the men's singles, USA's Sebastian Korda, suffered a shock five-set defeat to "lucky loser" Giovanni Mpetshi Perricard of France, who would make the most of his unexpected opportunity by eventually reaching the fourth round, his best performance in a grand slam event to date.

10.40 To Catch a Stalker

RT 1/2. Filmed over ten months, Zara McDermott reveals the terrifying impact of stalking and asks why more isn't done to stop it. The documentary follows four women as they attempt to navigate daily life under constant threat, including Isobel, a young mum who was terrorised by a former partner, and Jen, whose stalker is a stranger who was imprisoned for the crime but has just been given a release date. McDermott also meets other victims and police officers, asking why stalking cases so often fall through the cracks of the justice system and what can be done to improve protection for those being targeted.
Shown 9pm BBC3 (S) (AD) (HD)

11.25 2/2. Zara McDermott continues her exploration of the growing crime of stalking by meeting more victims, including Laura, who has endured years of relentless torment from an ex-partner who just won't let go, and Liv, whose life has been ripped apart by a faceless cyberstalker who has been harassing her for years. Both episodes on iPlayer from 6am. See p69.

FILM OF THE DAY

The Quiet Girl ★★★★

11.20pm-1.10am Film4 12

DRAMA Set in rural Ireland in the early 1980s, this gentle drama about the trials of childhood shows events through the eyes of Cait (Catherine Clinch), a shy, reserved nine-year-old from a poor, rambunctious family. Her summer stay on a dairy farm with her mother's cousin and her husband brings Cait out of her shell, while her guardians contend with secrets from their past. With note-perfect performances from the core cast, this is an impressively authentic debut from director Colm Bairead, a story with an emotional purity that will touch your heart. JAMES MOTTRAM (Ire 2021, swearing, HD)

Father Brown ★★★★

1.05-2.50pm Film4 PG

COMEDY MYSTERY Alec Guinness brings writer GK Chesterton's crime-solving priest to life in this hugely enjoyable movie. Fans of the stories will notice a slight shift of period, but the case of St Augustine's Cross is packed with incident and intrigue. Peter Finch is a languidly villainous Flambeau and Joan Greenwood huskily seductive as the devout Lady Warren. DAVID PARKINSON (UK 1954, BW, HD)

White Corridors ★★★

1.30-3.20pm

Talking Pictures TV U

DRAMA This Midlands-set hospital tale charts the various comings and goings of doctors and patients. The central plot involves doctor James Donald who, perfecting a serum to treat a blood disease, infects himself – requiring the intervention of the doctor who loves him (Googie Withers). It sounds hokey, but it's realistically played by the excellent cast. ROBYN KARNEY (UK 1951, BW)

September Gun ★★★

3.00-5.00pm Legend

COMEDY WESTERN Robert Preston brings a welcome grizzled edge to this movie. He plays the gunslinger well past his draw-by date who helps a nun trying to reclaim a church from outlaws. The byplay between Preston and Patty Duke as they trek across the plains is decidedly spicy, while Christopher Lloyd enjoys himself as a baddie. DP (US TVM 1983)

Van Helsing ★★★

9.00-11.35pm ITV4 12

FANTASY HORROR Stephen Sommers (The Mummy) directs this exciting, effects-driven romp set in the 19th century. Hugh Jackman plays Gabriel Van Helsing, who is dispatched by a Vatican organisation to Transylvania to help a Gypsy princess (Kate Beckinsale) battle Count Dracula (Richard Roxburgh). The CGI could have been better, but this is still good fun. SLOAN FREER (US 2004, violence, HD)

Father of the Bride ★★★★

9.00-11.20pm

Great Movies PG

COMEDY This 1990s spin on the old marriage-go-round comedy stars Steve Martin as the parent who can't find a single thing to like about his daughter's perfect fiancé, all while counting the ceremony costs. Diane Keaton gives sparkling back-up as his uncomplaining wife, but it's Martin Short who steals the movie as a camp wedding organiser. ALAN JONES (US 1991)

Hamburger Hill ★★★★

11.05pm-1.15am Legend 18

WAR DRAMA Not for the lily-livered, this Vietnam War movie follows American troops of the 101st Airborne Division as they attack Hill 937 in the Ashau Valley with 11 assaults over a ten-day period. John Irvin's film was overshadowed by Platoon and Full Metal Jacket on release, but is almost their equal; the story has the classic simplicity of a past era of war movies. ADRIAN TURNER (US 1987, violence, swearing, nudity)

Copa 71 ★★★

11.30pm-12.50am BBC4 PG

FOOTBALL DOCUMENTARY This crowd-pleasing movie tells the story of the biggest women's football tournament you have probably never heard of: the Women's World Cup of 1971. The event drew record crowds, but Fifa refused to sanction it and struck it from the official record. More than 50 years later, players and coaches – including England's "Lost Lionesses" – reflect on their memories. MAX COPEMAN (UK 2023, swearing, HD)

The Damned United ★★★★

12 midnight-1.35am BBC2 15

FOOTBALL DRAMA Director Tom Hooper gleefully re-creates the hairy, fag-smoking pre-Premiership days of English club football in this account of Brian Clough's 44 days at Leeds United in 1974. Michael Sheen is pitch-perfect as the arrogant manager in a stirring, tragicomic portrait of one of football's great characters. ANDREW COLLINS (UK/US 2009, swearing, HD)

Escape from Mogadishu ★★★

1.10-3.35am Film4 15

THRILLER Based on true events, this political thriller takes place in Somalia in 1991, during the overthrow of President Siad Barre. The focus falls on visiting delegates from both North and South Korea who get caught up in the coup. The action is fast and furious, but the film lacks any real depth when it comes to unpacking the reasons behind the unrest. JM (SKor 2021, violence, swearing, HD)

Women's Euro 2025

Iceland v Finland
4pm (k/o 5pm) ITV1 Catch up via ITVX
Switzerland v Norway 7pm (k/o 8pm) BBC1 Catch up via iPlayer

The talking stops and football begins as Iceland take on Finland, before hosts Switzerland face Norway on the opening day. England enter their first ever major title defence in 2025. By contrast, Wales are competing in their first ever tournament finals.

The Lionesses are among the favourites despite a rocky build-up to the tournament that saw Mary Earps, Fran Kirby and Millie Bright retire from international football. Boss Sarina Wiegman has reached the final in all four major international tournaments she has managed in, winning the last two editions of the European Championships with the Netherlands and England.

Wales venture into uncharted territory as they prepare to line up against England, Netherlands and France in a stacked Group D. Coach Rhian Wilkinson guided Wales to the finals after just one defeat in ten qualifying matches, including the play-offs. All-time record goalscorer Jess Fishlock is their key weapon and greatest hope of sparking a major upset in the group stages. All 31 matches will be shown across the BBC and ITV this summer. MICHAEL POTTS

Maria's incessant nagging drove harassed husband Gary away to stay with his mum for a bit of peace, which is understandable since he's constantly in his other half's bad books. A few weeks down the line and Gary still has not come home, even to celebrate stepson Liam's 16th birthday, which he doesn't even acknowledge. Maria has barely heard from him, and grows concerned this is more than just her fella having a big strop after she accused him of cheating. She and Liam have no idea Gazza is lying comatose in a hospital bed – how he got there is a mystery for now. Will there be yet another Corrie flashback in due course to fill in the gaps? JOHNATHON HUGHES

NEW SERIES

Why are Sarah and Alan struggling to sell their cottage near Wrexham? Could it be because the whole place smells of wet dog and the interior looks like a charity shop exploded across it? Might the Barbie bright pink interior of Michelle and Steve's terraced house be putting potential buyers off just a teeny bit?

Brother and sister property experts Stuart and Scarlette Douglas set out to transform both homes in the first episode of this new makeover show. With a budget of just £3,000 each and only two days to work a miracle, they take a property each and set out to clear, repaint, repair and present each place with the aim of finally getting a "Sold" sign propped up in front. CERI THOMAS

Long Lost Family: Born without Trace

9.00pm ITV1
Catch up via ITVX

Nicky Campbell, Davina McCall and the search team investigate two more cases where a baby was abandoned with no clues as to its identity. The series's youngest searcher Sarah was found in a Camberley car park in 2001, while in 1962, three-month-old Christopher was left with a north London childminder... but nobody came to collect him at the end of the day.

They're both given some answers but once again, these are complex, sensitive situations so not everyone is ready to respond to the request to meet, even though Sarah and Christopher hold no ill feelings towards their birth parents. JANE RACKHAM

Ghosts US

from 9.00pm BBC3
Catch up via iPlayer

The haunted house romp is a rare example of a British sitcom to get a worthy American remake. Thank goodness because the original is a firm RT favourite. The CBS version begins its fourth season with a triple bill. First up, Patience the Puritan ghost (Mary Holland) abducts two of her fellow spirits and drags them underground.

The next episode sees Sam (Rose McIver) struggle when her estranged father (played by Breaking Bad's Dean Norris) visits with his new girlfriend. Finally, Sam is accused of witchcraft and we meet the ghost of a Vietnam veteran. Genial ensemble comedy, snappily made – although still not the equal of our own beloved Button House. MICHAEL HOGAN

Britain's Most Expensive Houses

9.00pm C4 Catch up: C4 streaming

The music and dramatic drone shots of properties feel like the opening of 1980s soap Dallas. And peeking inside Southfork mirrors the excitement of nosing around pricey houses. Estate agent Constance seeks a London base for a lawyer – as long as it's in Chelsea and not over £5 million. Ian struggles to find the right price for his client's wheelhouse on the Cornish riviera, but this week's most breathtaking pad is Sunningdale Manor. The gaff is launched onto the market with an exclusive soiree for locals with 17 million to spare. JH

Frank McGuinness and Julie Nicholson Remember... A Song for Jenny

10.30pm BBC4 Catch up via iPlayer

"Only Jenny can forgive her killers," said Julie Nicholson when the drama about her daughter's death aired a decade ago. The one-off film told the true story of the Bristol vicar's response to 24-year-old Jenny's murder in the bombing at Edgware Road tube station. Starring Emily Watson, it was based on Nicholson's unflinching memoir of the same name, offering a gut-punch portrait of parental love, crippling grief and the possibility of forgiveness. MH

LIFE IN THE FAST LANE
1996 Formula One World Drivers' Champion Damon Hill

DOCUMENTARY

Hill 9.00pm Sky Documentaries Catch up via Now

Damon Hill always looked more troubled than other racing drivers. His wife Georgie tells us in this moving documentary that Hill was "one of the saddest people I've ever come across". That stemmed partly from his childhood: aged 15, Damon was watching TV with his sister when a newsflash announced that their father, Formula One driver Graham Hill, had died in a plane crash.

After that, Damon says, "It all went to pieces," and he spent years trying to fix something he now realises couldn't be fixed. It's a powerful psychological undertow to the tale of his F1 peak in the mid-1990s, notably his on-track rivalry with Michael Schumacher. The film also offers a new angle on the shocking death of Hill's teammate, Ayrton Senna. It makes for another taut tale from the F1 archives, given added heft by shrieking commentary from Murray Walker. DAVID BUTCHER

Darby and Joan 8.00pm U&Drama Catch up via U

Ex-cop Jack Darby (Bryan Brown) isn't a man who likes to be rushed, but a year and a half has been a long time to wait for him and widowed nurse Joan Kirkhope (Greta Scacchi) to resume their travels through the Australian countryside.

So long that it's quite the challenge to recall the details of how he plans to clear his name following a past scandal. But so determined is this series to put you at ease with its peaceful vistas and mellow mysteries that such concerns are soon cast away.

The best advice is to just go with the flow and let the charming Brown and Scacchi, and those Queensland views, work their magic. DAVID BROWN

Mary Earps: Queen of Stops

10.45pm BBC1 Available via iPlayer

Goalkeeper Mary Earps shocked fans of the England Lionesses in May by announcing her retirement from international football. Earps's decision brings to an end a journey that has seen her perform the rare trick of being well known for her personality and sporting prowess.

As well as being one of the best goalies in the women's game, Earps won extra plaudits for her relationship with fans, her campaign to shame kit manufacturer Nike into selling replica goalkeeper jerseys, and for being caught on camera screaming "F OFF!" at Spain after saving a penalty in the 2023 World Cup final. Earps herself tells a rich tale of sporting glory achieved without compromise. JACK SEALE

Inside No 9 10.00pm Off key: will piano tuner Jonah (Reece Shearsmith) hit the wrong note?

1.00pm Wimbledon
Isa Guha and Clare Balding introduce live coverage of day three at SW19, with the men's and women's second-round singles matches scheduled to begin.
Daniil Medvedev and Alexandre Müller opened proceedings on Centre Court on day three last year, and fifth seed Medvedev claimed a hard-fought 6–7, 7–6, 6–4, 7–5 victory. Also on Centre Court, Emma Navarro comfortably defeated four-time grand slam-winner Naomi Osaka 6–4, 6–1, before Jannik Sinner came through a considerably more difficult encounter against his Italian compatriot and 2021 runner-up Matteo Berrettini, winning in four sets.
Elsewhere, 2024 Queen's champion Tommy Paul needed five sets to see off Otto Virtanen of Finland on No 3 Court, while on No 2 Court, an attritional first-round match between Thanasi Kokkinakis and Félix Auger-Aliassime finally reached its conclusion, with the Australian Kokkinakis winning in five sets.
Coverage from other courts on the red button, iPlayer (Centre Court action available in Ultra HD) and at bbc.co.uk/sport. (S) (HD)

Public Enemies ★★★★

9.00-11.45pm Film4 15

CRIME DRAMA Director Michael Mann's movie makes a documentary-style fable out of the infamous moments in the short, sharp career of Depression-era gangster John Dillinger (Johnny Depp). The sumptuous production design and vibrant natural lighting enhance Dillinger's prison break-outs, bank robberies and doomed romance with hat-check girl Billie Frechette (Marion Cotillard) that all lead to a fateful meeting with G-Man Melvin Purvis (Christian Bale, above) and J Edgar Hoover's fledgling FBI. This is freshly conceived myth-making on a grand scale. ALAN JONES (US 2009, violence, HD)

You Were Never Lovelier ★★★

9.50-11.50am Talking Pictures TV U

MUSICAL The plot is silly and the budget skimpy, but this second wartime pairing (after You'll Never Get Rich) of the marvellous Rita Hayworth and the ineffable Fred Astaire is a delight to watch. Astaire declared Hayworth to be his favourite dance partner, and it shows, as they perform to a superb Jerome Kern score with Johnny Mercer lyrics. TONY SLOMAN (US 1942, BW)

Treasure Island ★★★

1.00-2.50pm Legend PG

ADVENTURE This entertaining canter through the pages of Robert Louis Stevenson has Orson Welles delivering a larger-than-life turn as Long John Silver. Welles initiated the project in 1966, but health problems and production gremlins forced him to abandon it, and the film was later finished, by director John Hough. ADRIAN TURNER (UK/Sp/Fr/WGer 1972, may be edited for content)

Doctor Faustus ★★★

3.00-4.50pm Legend PG

DRAMA Richard Burton used all his box-office clout to bring his stage version of Christopher Marlowe's play to the screen. He plays Faust, the man who sells his soul to the devil, with his wife Elizabeth Taylor as Helen of Troy. The result is more a fascinating record of the theatre production than a fully realised film, though Burton's reading of Marlowe's verse is sublime. AT (UK/It 1967)

The Gunfighter's Pledge ★★

5.00-6.50pm Legend Xtra PG

WESTERN In this made-for-TV western, gruff sheriff Luke Perry sets out to capture the escaped convict who murdered his wife and son. But a tragic twist binds him to another broken family and their battle against greedy land baron C Thomas Howell. The workmanlike script makes good use of the genre's well-trodden themes and archetypes. SLOAN FREER (US 2008, may be edited for content)

GI Joe: the Rise of Cobra ★★★★

6.45-9.00pm Film4 12

ACTION ADVENTURE The film transfer of Hasbro's other big toy line (after Transformers) is a nonstop thrill-ride. Director Stephen Sommers delivers a terrific Bond-style outing, as the special-ops team of soldiers battles the mysterious Cobra organisation. Channing Tatum and Sienna Miller lead the cast, but it's the cool gadgets that catch the eye. AJ (US 2009, edited for content, HD)

Rocky ★★★★

8.00-10.35pm ITV4 PG

BOXING DRAMA Sylvester Stallone became a superstar off the back of this knockout franchise opener, playing the struggling Philadelphia boxer who is given a crack at the heavyweight world champion (Carl Weathers). Sly also wrote the script and gained Oscar nominations for both acting and writing, while the film itself triumphed as best picture. JOHN MARRIOTT (US 1976, may be edited for content, HD)

Double Jeopardy ★★★

10.35pm-12.40am ITV4 15

ACTION THRILLER Ashley Judd plays a wronged wife in this revenge tale. A romantic sailing trip turns into a nightmare when she wakes up to find spouse Bruce Greenwood missing. Judd is charged with murder – but is Greenwood really dead? Tommy Lee Jones dials in his role as a parole officer, but Judd convinces in the lead. JOANNA BERRY (US/Ger 1999, violence, swearing, sex scenes, HD)

Casino Royale ★★★★

10.45pm-1.20am ITV1 12

SPY ADVENTURE Daniel Craig made the James Bond role his own with this 21st movie in the series. It's an origins story for 007, as he tackles villain Le Chiffre (Mads Mikkelsen) in a high-stakes poker game. Craig's Bond is fresh, flawed and humanised, while Eva Green provides an alluring love interest as Treasury agent Vesper Lynd. ADAM SMITH (UK/CzRep/Ger/US 2006, violence, col/BW, HD)

American Woman ★★★★

1.55-3.45am C4 15

DRAMA Produced by Ridley Scott and directed by his son Jake, this excellent indie movie has a decade-spanning story that follows Sienna Miller's working-class mother. Her life takes a desperate turn when her teenage daughter goes missing, and she spirals into a haze of alcohol and promiscuity. Christina Hendricks and Aaron Paul provide assured support. TREVOR JOHNSTON (US/UK 2018, swearing, HD)

Taskmaster: the Final

SERIES FINALE

The cleverest part of this show is that, thanks to its ever-rotating roster of contestants, it manages to feel comfortingly familiar and totally fresh every time. Greg Davies and Alex Horne might always be in place, along with the famous Taskmaster House and those wax-sealed envelopes – but the reactions of the five comics to their strange little quests always brings something new.

Take comedian and actor Jason Mantzoukas, a rare American competitor who left Hollywood behind to come to Chiswick and move sand from one wooden box to another... or stand frozen for ten minutes with a croquet mallet. Initially, he may have been an unfamiliar face for UK viewers, but over ten weeks his aggressive approach to tasks has made him a viewer favourite.

And his fellow competitors – stand-ups Fatiha El-Ghorri and Stevie Martin, Ghosts star Mathew Baynton and podcaster Rosie Ramsey – are no slouches, either, creating moments of comedy joy right to the end of this final episode. We'll miss them now it's over – until the next contestants arrive to put their spin on the format. HUW FULLERTON

Supercruising: Life at Sea

8.00pm C4 Catch up: C4 streaming

NEW SERIES

Welcome to the luxurious world of supercruising. This docuseries follows the 1,000-strong crew and 3,000 passengers aboard two top-end cruise ships as they drop anchor in stunning destinations worldwide.

For the first time in a decade, a vessel from the Holland America fleet has set sail for a full season from the UK, voyaging through North Africa and Europe. Nearly 5,000 miles away in Florida, its sister ship prepares to journey around the Americas. First stop? A private island in the Bahamas, complete with horse-riding in the ocean. Prepare to go green (and aqua blue) with envy. MICHAEL HOGAN

Full series available via iPlayer

LAST IN SERIES

The biography of French racing driver Alain Prost concludes, with the last two episodes dominated by his rivalry with the great Ayrton Senna. After we've recapped the early 1990s, a golden age for Formula One, Prost muses on the transformation he observed in his sporting nemesis pretty much at the instant Prost retired in 1993. Suddenly, a previously cold-eyed competitor became a friend.

So it was particularly traumatic for Prost to witness Senna's death a year later at the San Marino Grand Prix – the programme has startling footage not just of the fatal crash, but of Prost reacting in real time in a TV commentary box. JACK SEALE

DRAMA

Murder Most Puzzling

SERIES FINALE

If you had to compare this series to a crossword, it would be of the quick rather than cryptic kind, not requiring much in the way of lateral thinking. But for those who can't get enough of shows where violence is generally kept off screen and village eccentrics can be relied upon to outsmart inept police officers, then this is at least a guaranteed fix.

No screeners were provided for this finale (so potentially it could be an absolute bloodbath with more f-bombs than a Scorsese movie), but it looks as though we continue to be on safe ground, with a rock star-related murder and Cora (Phyllis Logan) being blinded by the prospect of new love. DAVID BROWN

DRAMA

Outrageous

9.00pm U&Drama Full series via U

"What on earth is happening to my family?" Nancy Mitford (Bessie Carter) wonders as a wide-eyed Unity (Shannon Watson), having badgered her parents incessantly, goes off to live in Germany where she stalks her hero Hitler like an obsessed adolescent pop fan.

Meanwhile, Pam (Isobel Jesper Jones) has announced she's going to drive through Europe on her own, Decca (Zoe Brough) is seriously impressed that Winston Churchill's nephew has disappeared to join the communists and Diana (Joanna Vanderham) is quietly furious that her sister has written a scathing book satirising her beloved Mosley and his British Union of Fascists.

And then the bailiffs arrive at Nancy's door... JANE RACKHAM

Murdoch Mysteries

SERIES FINALE

Canadian talent has often landed guest roles in Murdoch Mysteries, with everyone from William Shatner to Margaret Atwood kitting themselves out in period costume. Now it's the turn of Katherine Ryan to cameo playing (what else?) a stand-up comic involved in an attack on the Starbright Club. This being the season finale, there's also a sense of the stakes being raised as gangster Tony Petrucci has, we discover, escaped. And the sneering Mayor Vaughan springs a surprise on the staff at Station House 4. DB

LAST IN SERIES

It's a shame that Rosie Jones's foray into writing and starring in her own sitcom hasn't been sounder. It's all too often been a succession of one-note gags loosely strung together, although there's a last push to thread some jeopardy into the final episodes. And at least, if nothing else, you get the sense the cast had a real blast, wholeheartedly embracing the cartoonish and wacky scenarios their characters have been landed in – such as the one we already know Emily (Jones) is about to wind up in: on the floor, covered in blood with a gun in one hand and a fistful of cash in the other. FRANCES TAYLOR

SITCOM

Such Brave Girls

10.05pm, 10.30pm BBC3, 11.40pm, 12.05am (check listings for Scotland and N Ireland) BBC1 Full series available on iPlayer

Not every critically acclaimed sitcom gets a second series, so we're delighted – and rather relieved – to see Such Brave Girls back on our screens. Kat Sadler's deliciously dark creation launched in 2023 to rave reviews and a Bafta win. As we return to Crawley's most dysfunctional family, our antiheroines are still desperate to be "the sort of women that men marry, rather than avoid in Morrisons".

Josie (Sadler) is dreaming of true love, sister Billie (Lizzie Davidson) embarks on an age-gap affair and debt-ridden mother Deb (scene-stealer Louise Brealey) is hellbent on ensnaring a wealthy man. Rest assured, though, that life has other ideas for the tragicomic trio. An eventful double bill takes in a kidnapping, a car crash, a Travelodge tryst, lost teeth and long-buried secrets coming to light. Luckily, Deb is on hand to remind everyone of the family motto: "Ignore, repress, forget". MH

P The Integrity of Joseph Chambers

★★★★ 15 11.20pm Film4 Catch up via C4 streaming

American writer/director Robert Machoian made a fine breakthrough in 2020 with his film The Killing of Two Lovers, a beautifully shot and moodily paced drama about a divorced dad's bruised masculinity. Machoian reunited with his lead actor, Clayne Crawford, for this darker 2022 companion film: a parable that follows a family man on his sudden, stubborn trek into the woods on a solo deer-hunt that proves disastrous. The ensuing descent into rural madness is a must for fans of Deliverance, but this has a grim, satirical power all of its own. CALUM BAKER

10.40pm (11.10pm Scotland, N Ireland) BBC1 Catch up via iPlayer

Welsh men's football has enjoyed an international renaissance in recent decades, but the women's game has struggled to match that success. Or at least they had until they qualified for this summer's Women's Euro 2025, their first major international tournament. As they prepare to line up in Switzerland alongside the likes of Spain, Germany and holders England, this documentary tells the up, down and up again story of the women's game in the Principality. Famous former and current players including Rhian Wilkinson, Helen Ward and the great Jess Fishlock help explain the team's journey. CERI THOMAS See feature: page 22

4.30pm Women's Euro 2025

Belgium v Italy

Live coverage of the Group B match from Stade de Tourbillon, Sion (kick-off 5.00).

The Belgian Red Flames will be hoping to build on their showing at Euro 2022, when they reached the quarter-finals, only to lose 1–0 to a late winner from Sweden. Meanwhile, le Azzurre will be desperate to simply make it out of their group, after falling at the first hurdle at Euro 2022 and the 2023 World Cup.

Jeanette Kwakye presents, with commentary from Vicki Sparks and Izzy Christiansen, and analysis by Steph Houghton, Nedum Onuoha and Nikita Parris. A post-match forum follows on iPlayer at 7pm.

FILM REVIEWS

FILM OF THE DAY

P The Integrity of Joseph Chambers

★★★★ 11.20pm-1.10am Film4 15

DRAMA Decent but doltish salesman Joseph Chambers (Clayne Crawford) embarks on a solo hunting trip he's ill-prepared for in this doom-laden drama. Writer/director Robert Machoian (The Killing of Two Lovers) gives us plenty of notice that something momentous is coming, but it's what happens next that makes his film so compelling and appalling. Crawford's character is alternately empathetic and pathetic, and the film reinforces how utterly out of his depth he is through evocative use of cinematography, sound and score. DAVID PARKINSON (US 2022, violence, swearing, sexual references, HD)

They Call Me Trinity ★★★

1.30-4.00pm 5 Action PG

SPAGHETTI WESTERN Not shown on TV for 19 years, director Enzo Barboni's easy-going, slapstick cowboy comedy is more Laurel and Hardy than Sergio Leone. It made superstars out of Italian actors Carlo Pedersoli (Bud Spencer) and Mario Girotti (Terence Hill), playing brothers who find trouble wherever they go. ALAN JONES (It 1970, HD)

The Inspector General

★★★ 2.00-4.00pm

Rewind TV U

COMEDY This splendid Danny Kaye vehicle is based on the Nikolai Gogol play about a wandering buffoon who is mistaken for a dignitary. Warner Bros turned it into a musical, commissioning songs from Mrs Kaye – Sylvia Fine – and the brilliant Johnny Mercer. The tongue-twisting lyrics and use of romantic pathos serve the star well. TONY SLOMAN (US 1949)

Champions ★★★

4.30-6.45pm

Talking Pictures TV PG

DRAMA John Hurt was the perfect choice to play Bob Champion in this true story of how the jockey overcame cancer, an injured horse and the rest of the field at the 1981 Grand National. It may lack psychological depth, but director John Irvin's against-the-odds tale still holds the attention. PETER FREEDMAN (UK 1983, may be edited for content)

Steel Magnolias ★★★★

6.40-9.00pm Film4 PG

COMEDY DRAMA Sally Field, Daryl Hannah, Olympia Dukakis and Julia Roberts lead this adaptation of Robert Harling's 1987 play. It follows the women as they discuss men, menopause, manicures and marriage in Dolly Parton's Louisiana salon. Roberts was nominated for an Oscar, but Shirley MacLaine steals the show as the town's grumpy outsider. DAVID PARKINSON (US 1989, edited for content, HD)

Williams ★★★

9.00-10.45pm BBC4 15

DOCUMENTARY This is an intimate profile of the Williams family and the Formula One team it ran for 43 years from 1977. Director Morgan Matthews keeps the focus on Frank Williams and his rise from racer to team owner. But the discovery of audio tapes his wife Virginia had made also sheds light on a difficult relationship transformed by the 1986 road accident that left him a tetraplegic. DP (UK 2017, swearing, car-crash scenes, HD)

Lone Survivor ★★★

9.00-11.20pm Legend 15

ACTION THRILLER Based on a true story, Peter Berg's slick but brutal film stars Mark Wahlberg, Emile Hirsch and Taylor Kitsch as members of a Navy SEAL hit squad who are dropped behind enemy lines in Afghanistan to kill a Taliban warlord. It's unrelenting stuff that may challenge less hardened viewers. DAVE ALDRIDGE (US 2013, violence, swearing)

Bonnie and Clyde ★★★★★

SPY ADVENTURE In Roger Moore's first mission as 007, the secret agent is up against the forces of voodoo, with Yaphet Kotto as the chief villain and tarot-reading Jane Seymour as Bond's love interest. A speedboat chase is among the exciting action set pieces, and there's the usual array of gadgetry and gizmos. TOM HUTCHINSON (UK 1973, violence, swearing, HD)

Assault on Precinct 13 ★★★★★

11.20pm-1.10am Legend 15

THRILLER John Carpenter's siege movie is a model of low-budget film-making. The action centres on an LA police station, which is besieged by a vicious street gang. Paranoia abounds as the cops and convicts are attacked from all sides with no escape route. Carpenter's taut synthesiser score adds further atmosphere to this rollicking cult favourite. AJ (US 1976, violence, some swearing)

Riders of Justice ★★★★

1.55-3.50am C4 15

REVENGE DRAMA This quirky flick plays like a Danish mash-up of Death Wish and Revenge of the Nerds. Mads Mikkelsen plays a soldier who discovers his wife's death was down to a brutish biker gang. Director Anders Thomas Jensen isn't interested in gratuitous violence, though, instead focusing on the oddball relationship between Mikkelsen and the men who aid him. JEREMY ASPINALL (Den 2020, violence, swearing, HD)

BAGS OF FUN
Conleth Hill as Martin Parker

SITCOM
The Power of Parker 9.30pm BBC1 Full series on iPlayer

SERIES FINALE

Steve Pemberton's casting as Sandy Cooper has proved to be inspired. Following last week's shock twist, we discovered that the businessman wasn't murdered after all, and he is now firmly out for revenge against Martin (Conleth Hill), Diane (Rosie Cavaliero) and Kath (Sian Gibson).

It's this quest for retaliation that allows Pemberton to do what he does best and tread that fine Inside No 9-esque line between comedy and villainy. He purrs a sinister proposition: hand over a hefty sum of cash, or he will give the police a CCTV tape that shows just what unfolded in that hotel room. The trio's plan? Right the wrongs of one crime by... committing another crime. Unbeknown to them, however, Diane and Kath's dad is already at the police station confessing to having offed Sandy... FRANCES TAYLOR

GARDENING
Gardeners' World
8.00pm BBC2 Catch up via iPlayer

Adam Frost, Rachel de Thame and Frances Tophill report from the world's largest annual flower show, RHS Hampton Court Garden Festival.

The event is all about colour, and the gardeners we meet tonight include a flower farmer whose dahlias and seasonal cut flowers offer an amazing sight and a green-fingered couple who grow 100 varieties of chilli in Devon. The presenters are also promising ideas and advice in abundance, "whether you've got a back garden, a balcony or just a sunny windowsill". Plus we learn from a young garden designer how to create the right conditions to benefit hedgehogs – one of the UK's most beloved but endangered mammals. SIMON O'HAGAN

Not Going Out
9.00pm BBC1 Full series on iPlayer

Like many fans of the Gallagher brothers, Lee (Lee Mack) spent much of 31 August 2024 in a long online queue for Oasis tickets, only to see his dreams of seeing the band at Wembley crash and burn when he failed to reach the front. Now, a year on, he's looking back in anger on the experience and it's Lucy (Sally Bretton) who he suspects of being responsible for him coming away empty-handed.

Such is the set-up of a cracking episode that, on the surface, is concerned with an escalating blame game. But there's much here, too, about our fear of missing out, the daft lengths to which we'll go to recapture lost youth and the warming consolations of middle age. DAVID BROWN

And Just like That...
9.00pm Sky Showcase/Comedy Catch up via Now

This divisive Sex and the City sequel has gained a reputation for being compellingly terrible, but tonight's episode is the strongest of the series so far, albeit for reasons that can't be revealed here.

Suffice to say, there is finally some juicy drama between Carrie (Sarah Jessica Parker) and Aidan (John Corbett), whose long-distance relationship is beginning to strain. Charlotte (Kristin Davis), meanwhile, is trying to keep upbeat in the face of Harry's (Evan Handler) cancer diagnosis, but some shock news from Lisa (Nicole Ari Parker) throws the fragility of life into sharp relief. The poignant final scene is a welcome reminder of why these characters endure. STEPHEN KELLY

HISTORY
Thomas Jefferson
9.00pm Sky History Catch up via Now

NEW SERIES

He wrote the Declaration of Independence, that world-changing document about "life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness" which is still widely quoted 200 years later, yet Thomas Jefferson's ideals of freedom were often at odds with his own actions. This six-part series chronicles the life of the Founding Father and third president of the US, beginning with his early years. Born in 1743, Jefferson took over as head of his powerful Virginia family during his teens when his father died. Despite running a plantation and owning hundreds of slaves, the unlikely revolutionary soon advocated emancipation and independence from British rule. MICHAEL HOGAN

If you've been absent from the congregation of this comedy of clerical errors, the BBC gives us a prod in the week of the show's 15th birthday. Episode one welcomes us to inner-city St Saviour's and its flock, including growling, backstory-rich Colin (Steve Evets), flirty Adoha (Ellen Thomas) and "unbelievably strange" Nigel (Miles Jupp). Central to it all are new vicar Adam and his solicitor wife Alex (Tom Hollander and Olivia Colman), whose love and patience are tested daily. It's a divine cast, James Wood's script crackles with wit and insight, and there's a realness to it that's bittersweet. MARK BRAXTON

St Denis Medical

10.40pm, 11.00pm (11.20pm, 11.40pm N Ireland; 11.40pm, 12 midnight Wales) BBC1 Full series on iPlayer

After taking a week off to make way for Glastonbury, the American mockumentary returns to pull another shift in the emergency room. Two inmates from the prison arrive, with stab wounds and a sworn enmity that the nicer members of the St Denis team swear they can cure. Nurse Alex is wary at first, but she's soon goaded into action against her better judgement by the arch cynicism of Dr Ron. In the second episode of the double bill, delusional boss Joyce comes up with one of her schemes: an office relationship amnesty. JACK SEALE

MUSIC

Blondie Night from 9.00pm BBC4 Catch up via iPlayer

"We wanted to be a British band!" Blondie might have exuded New York City cool, but they always had a strong affinity with the UK music scene, where their angular but elegant pop went down even better than it did in the States. Airing to mark the 80th birthday of lead singer Debbie Harry next Tuesday, an evening of Blondie goodies begins with the hit-heavy compilation Blondie at the BBC. That is followed at 10pm by the documentary When Blondie Came to Britain, which tracks the band's Anglophilia from a student-union gig in Bournemouth in 1977 to a triumphant set at Glastonbury in 2023, and the party continues with a 1979 The Old Grey Whistle Test special filmed in Glasgow, a 1999 Omnibus profile, and a 2014 set recorded at Maida Vale Studios. REALITY

First Dates

10.00pm C4 Catch up via C4 streaming

The most loved-up couple in the restaurant tonight is the newly married Fred Sirieix and his visiting wife, known only as Fruitcake. The pair met the old-fashioned way – through a chance encounter in the street – and Sirieix hopes that his luck will rub off on this new run's crop of Tinder-tired hopefuls.

The most interesting of them in this series 24 opener is Sophie, a tattoo-loving mother-of-three from Cheshire, who hits it off with the equally inked Emily. All is going well, until one of them asks, "My husband is at the bar. Would you like to meet him?" SK

Jonathan Ross Special Guests: Oasis

11.10pm ITV1 Catch up via ITVX

When the Gallagher brothers buried the hatchet after their 15-year and got their era-defining band back together, it caused an unseemly scramble for tickets. The reunion gigs are finally upon us, kicking off tonight in Cardiff.

This compilation, first shown last December, rewinds highlights from Ross's encounters with Liam and Noel Gallagher, "two of his all-time favourite guests". The pair separately discuss sex, drugs, rock 'n' roll and their eventual split. "Maybe I cancelled a few gigs and stayed up too late some nights," says Liam. "But we're not in S Club 7. That's what we do." Noel is more succinct: "He threw fruit at me." MH

4.15 Women's Euro 2025
Denmark v Sweden
Seema Jaswal presents live coverage of both teams' opening match in Group C from Stade de Genève in Switzerland (kick-off 5.00).

The Scandinavian rivals were also in the same Nations League group, with Sweden winning 2–1 in Odense in February, then claiming a 6–1 victory just a month ago in Solna. They will be looking to build on that fine form as they aim to emulate their triumph in the inaugural tournament in 1984, having reached at least the quarter-finals in every staging since 1995, but without managing to add another trophy to their cabinet.

The Danes will be hoping to bounce back from their recent setbacks and enjoy a tournament that is at least as productive as their 2017 showing in the Netherlands, when they finished runners-up to the hosts. (S) (HD)

7.15 Germany v Poland
Live coverage of both teams' opening match in Group C, held at Arena St Gallen in Switzerland (kick-off 8.00).

Germany will be looking to go one better than in 2022, when they were runners-up to the hosts in England. They go into this tournament in excellent form, having comfortably topped their Women's Nations League group.

Their opponents are playing in their first major championship, but Poland also enter the tournament on the back of some good results so far in 2025, albeit without facing anyone of the calibre of the Germans. (S) (HD)

FILM REVIEWS

FILM OF THE DAY

Quiz Lady ★★★★ 11.25pm-1.00am BBC1

(not in Wales; starts 12.05am in N Ireland)

COMEDY Awkwafina and Sandra Oh prove a match made in comedy heaven in this sweet romp. When Jenny (Oh) sneakily films her uptight younger sister Anne (Awkwafina) correctly answering questions that come up on her favourite TV quiz show, the video goes viral, and Anne is offered the chance to appear on the show alongside her quizmaster idol (a genial Will Ferrell). The film is sharply scripted by Jen D'Angelo, who deftly balances the heart and humour of the story, while the two leads are enjoyably cast against type. EMMA SIMMONDS (US TVM 2023, swearing, HD)

The Swimmer ★★★★

11.00am-12.55pm Film4 PG

Film of the Day: p65. (US 1968, HD)

The Black Swan ★★★★

12.55-2.35pm Film4 PG

ADVENTURE This ripping tale stars Tyrone Power as a reformed sea wolf, whose former partner (Laird Cregar) is made governor of Jamaica and they join forces to rid the region of assorted rogues. Much swordplay – plus the courtship of Maureen O'Hara by Power – ensues, made all the more vivid by the Oscar-winning cinematography. PETER FREEDMAN (US 1942, HD)

A Reason to Live, a Reason to Die ★★★

2.00-4.00pm 5 Action

WESTERN The plot of this spaghetti western echoes that of The Dirty Dozen, with James Coburn's disgraced Union officer assembling a ragtag band for a death-or-glory mission. The final face-off with Telly Savalas is surprising for its poignancy – not least when set against the bloodbath that precedes it. JAMIE HEALY (Sp/It/Fr/WGer 1972, may be edited for content, HD)

Cover Girl ★★★★

2.35-4.45pm Film4 U

MUSICAL A milestone in the history of the glossy musical, this film features a stunning Rita Hayworth as the chorus girl whose career success complicates her relationship with nightclub manager Gene Kelly. While dated, the film remains a treat, with a fine score by Jerome Kern that includes the showstopping Long Ago and Far Away. TONY SLOMAN (US 1944, HD)

The Big Job ★★★

4.20-6.05pm

Talking Pictures TV U

COMEDY Sidney James is the leader of a gang of crooks who discover a police station has been built on the site where they stashed their loot. Partners-in-crime Sylvia Syms, Dick Emery and Lance Percival are overly slapstick, but Joan Sims's landlady, Jim Dale's goofy plod and Deryck Guyler's idle desk sergeant provide comic gold. DAVID PARKINSON (UK 1965, BW)

Rio Grande ★★★★★

4.45-6.50pm Film4 U

WESTERN Following on from Fort Apache and She Wore a Yellow Ribbon, this was the final film in John Ford's classic cavalry trilogy and tells the story of a daring response to Native American raids. John Wayne stars as a fort commander alongside Maureen O'Hara as his long-separated wife, and the two real-life pals would act in four more films together. ALLEN EYLES (US 1950, BW, HD)

I, Robot ★★★★

6.50-9.00pm Film4 12

SCI-FI Isaac Asimov's stories provide the inspiration for this well-paced thriller set in Chicago in 2035, when robots have been integrated into society. When a top scientist is killed, Will Smith's detective suspects the involvement of a prototype android. Alex Proyas's film cleverly blends the robots into the human world. TOM HUTCHINSON (US/Ger 2004, edited for content, HD)

Past Lives ★★★★

9.00-10.40pm BBC3 12

Film of the Day: p55. (US 2023, swearing, HD)

Predator ★★★★

9.00-11.10pm Film4 15

ACTION This stripped-down thriller cheerfully sacrifices characterisation on the altar of exhilarating action, as Arnold Schwarzenegger and his elite team are tracked by a lethal alien game-hunter. Director John McTiernan keeps tension at snapping point, aided by the gimmick of a cloaking device that hides the alien. JOHN FERGUSON (US 1987, violence, swearing, HD)

Attack the Block ★★★★

11.10pm-12.55am Film4 15

SCI-FI For his directing debut, Joe Cornish combines his love of 1980s creature capers with a more contemporary concern: fear of teenage hoodies. John Boyega steals the show as the leader of a bunch of tearaways who are forced to find the hero within when their "block" is targeted by alien invaders. ANDREW COLLINS (Fr/UK 2010, violence, swearing, drug abuse, HD)

Dante's Peak ★★★

12 midnight-1.45am C4 12

DISASTER MOVIE Pierce Brosnan's scientist anticipates major lava disturbance in a mountainside town, but, wouldn't you know it, no one will believe him. This movie is all about the special effects, as director Roger Donaldson papers over the deficiencies in characterisation and dialogue with some exciting set pieces. JASON CARO (US 1997, violence, swearing, HD)

ERIK THE GREAT

As Radio 3 marks the 100th anniversary of Erik Satie's death, Alistair McGowan celebrates the life of the French composer

Saturday Morning
Saturday 9.00am Radio 3

MUSICAL MAESTRO Well groomed on the outside – French composer Erik Satie

ERIK SATIE'S MUSIC pervades modern life. His most famous pieces are used in films and are constantly included on "Most Relaxing" albums and playlists, and on Radio 3's Unwind. Many modern composers and musicians cite Satie as a huge influence on their work – from Philip Glass to Brian Eno and Gary Numan. He died 100 years ago, aged 59, and Radio 3 has renamed Saturday 28 June "Satie-Day", devoting its programming to the French minimalist.

I first heard Satie's Gymnopédie No 1 as a ten-year-old on Schools TV and always remembered its odd name. When I returned to piano playing in my 30s (having stopped at the dizzy heights of Grade 2, aged nine) it was the first thing I played. And the picture of the young Satie on the cover looked strangely like me. I began to look into his life – was there a biopic here? – and I couldn't believe what I read.

He had three "images" in his artistic life. For 11 years he wore only a yellow corduroy suit of which he had seven identical versions. His final "look" was a black three-piece suit with a bowler hat – at a time when all the other artists in Montmartre were dressing like bohemians.

He only had one relationship – with the artist Suzanne Valadon. It ended after six months when he pushed her out of the window of her first-floor atelier on discovering she was seeing someone else. He wrote a play where a man simply counts to 100,000. He embraced poverty and once shared a pair of trousers with his friend, a poet who claimed to be descended from Napoleon. The poet wore the trousers by day and Satie wore them playing the piano at Le Chat Noir at night. He slept on a camp bed under which he lit candles to keep himself warm, in a room so small that friend and fellow composer Claude Debussy called it "The Cupboard".

Satie met Debussy while they were dreamy young men. Satie wanted them to create a new French sound to rival German music. He wanted it to be pure, the embodiment of the colour white: "Music, above all, 'without sauerkraut'." For a while, he only ate white food to engender the composition of his "white" music.

> 'Satie's perpetually neat appearance hid an inner turmoil'

He composed his famous Gymnopédie while lying shirtless on wet grass on a cold night in an attempt to catch pneumonia so that he could be sent home from military service. It worked. In the process, he wrote one of the most enduring pieces of music ever written. It dwarfs the rest of Satie's output – some of which is criminally neglected, much of which is best forgotten. It was, however, greeted with suspicion. Satie's musical life was a constant fight for recognition and acceptance.

It was Maurice Ravel who eventually played Satie's music, in 1911 declaring, "It was Erik Satie not Claude Debussy who was speaking the daring musical language of tomorrow a quarter of a century ago."

Satie eventually had to leave the artistic circle of Montmartre to move to a poor suburb of Paris, from where he would walk 11km to and from Montmartre daily. But his perpetually neat appearance hid an inner turmoil. On his death, friends entered his flat for the first time in 27 years and were horrified to find a grim space full of old umbrellas, shirt collars and over 1,000 cards covered in his obsessional castle designs.

He had two grand pianos, one on top of the other, and inside the top piano they found the score for a piece, Vexations, that bore the instruction: "Repeat 840 times". Probably never intended as anything other than a joke, Vexations has been performed many times – most recently in April at Queen Elizabeth Hall in London. Erik Satie: a fascinating composer; a unique man. My biopic has yet to happen.

Starmer's Stormy Year

Monday 11.00am Radio 4

It has been almost a year since Sir Keir Starmer swept to power on the back of a landslide majority, marking Labour's first election victory in nearly two decades. But the Prime Minister's honeymoon period was short-lived. BBC chief political correspondent Henry Zeffman reviews the stand-out moments from a turbulent first year that has been dominated by summer riots, the winter fuel payments U-turn and the rise of Reform at the local elections. Overshadowing it all is the return of Donald Trump. TOM GOULDING

In Mrs Dalloway, Virginia Woolf does with language what Jimi Hendrix did with the guitar, says The Hours author Michael Cunningham. And if you're new to the novel, listen to Juliet Stevenson's audiobook reading, advises novelist Naomi Alderman. I could listen all day to Fiona Shaw (below) in conversation with Woolf experts in the first of three programmes that seek to identify the writer's significance today – and blow away Woolf's reputation for being difficult.

Jo Whiley's church is a broad one. Not long ago she was interviewing Jarvis Cocker; now she welcomes Barbra Streisand (above), a showbiz figure who actually warrants the word "icon", all the more so as the passing of the years – she is now 83 – hasn't stopped her flow of creativity. The new album she'll be talking about – The Secret of Life: Partners, Volume Two – is testimony to the power of her allure as her contributors include Paul McCartney, Bob Dylan, Mariah Carey, Ariana Grande and a host of other big names. A star still shines. SIMON O'HAGAN

Long Story Short

Someone may have noticed that former Lionesses Jill Scott and Karen Carney have the right kind of relationship for a podcast. They can certainly keep the chat lively, and Carney plays the stooge to Scott's jokester; she's had more light entertainment experience. (After she retired from football in 2022, she won I'm a Celebrity, Get Me Out of Here! and was a captain on the panel game A League of Their Own). There's one regular feature – listeners are invited to send in an account of something that's happened to them. DAVID McGILLIVRAY

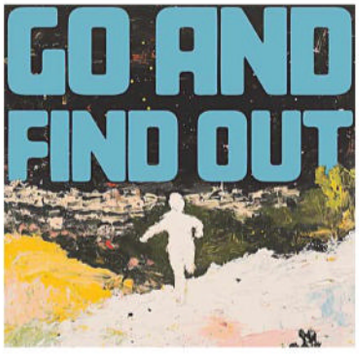
PICK OF THE WEEK

POLITICS

The Wargame

The second series of Sky News's effort to shake us from our slumber and get us to pay attention to the threats from overseas convenes a distinguished crew of former cabinet ministers, civil servants and senior military types to game out a response to an attack from Russia. This might come in the hi-tech form of an assault on the IT that is our central nervous system, but it could just as easily take the shape of an armed agent shooting a load of pilots in an RAF mess in Lincolnshire. We have to be ready for anything. As one expert says, "The rules-based order which has been guarding our lives for the past 70 years is dead and gone." DAVID HEPWORTH



TRAVEL

Go and Find Out

Jonny Wright signs off each episode with "Awright, that's all I got," as if he's spent after what he has just shared. In his 16-part series, he relives the intense journey he took from his comfortable North Carolina life with $7,000 to travel the world, following wherever the road led or the people he met took him. The podcast is dotted with the music that Jonny makes which, along with his creative retelling of it, ultimately gives meaning to his trip. FIONA HUGHES

COMEDY

Northern News

This is a rare thing: a podcast that delivers proper laugh-out-loud comedy throughout. As one of the hosts, Ian Smith, asks "Why hasn't this won a podcast award?" If there are audio judges reading this, it really should. Smith and comedian Amy Gledhill are both northerners who have lived in London for years (shaming their families). They pluck stories from northern newspapers to discuss and are joined by a fellow comedian. The results are funny – especially the Ross Noble episode. ANNA JONES

DRAMA

The Grimoire Diaries

Horror fans will know that should a strange little girl, out on her own in London's Highgate Cemetery, ask you to "give" her your name, you DON'T DO IT! This is the creepy start to a new ten-part drama from TikTok viral fantasy-master William Moore and Alex Edwards, the man behind a role-playing game called One for Sorrow (think HP Lovecraft meets Subbuteo). It's a well-plotted and eerie work that draws upon British folklore, while capturing an existential dread of unfathomable horrors beneath "normal" life. AJ

SPORT

For the Love of Cricket

Just the roll call of nicknames – KP, Stokesy, Rooty, Goughy, Swanny, Morgs – is enough to make the For the Love of Cricket listener feel that co-presenters Stuart Broad and Jos Buttler are admitting us to an inner sanctum. These two – prodigious England performers both – don't just have nice stories to tell, they are also thoughtful, observant and largely bantz-free. If you're curious to know why Broad wore a headband all the way through his career, that's the sort of thing you'll discover. SIMON O'HAGAN

Banned by the BBC

Remember all that fuss over Frankie Goes to Hollywood's Relax? It's claimed here that it wasn't the suggestive lyrics but the cover's risqué imagery that got the record banned by the BBC. Declan Harvey and guests discuss this and other offending songs (including George Michael's I Want Your Sex and Serge Gainsbourg's Je t' Aime) in this first instalment devoted to sex before moving on to drugs, politics, religion, violence and war in further episodes. It's a perfect blend of cheeky and nostalgic. FH

Streams of Consciousness

DAVID HEPWORTH

It's no accident that a few billionaires own the internet

In 1903, Ida Tarbell was said to be the most famous woman in America. Ida wasn't a movie star or a model. These were different times. Ida was a magazine journalist and what made her famous was her investigation of the monopolistic practices of John D Rockefeller's Standard Oil, which led to America's adoption of "anti-trust" legislation, designed to prevent commercial sectors being dominated by single companies.

It's not surprising that in his new series Understood: Who Broke the Internet? the internet activist Cory Doctorow devotes an episode In God We Antitrust to the fact that our new digital world is dominated by giant brands looming over search, retail, music streaming, smartphones and satellites.

In a world where the winner takes all and the all is about delivery, it's easy for the giant firms to market, to undercut, choke off and swallow up small operators, many of whom are only too happy to be bought. Once they've bought them, the price goes up.

Those modern-day Standard Oils fear only one thing and that's anti-trust legislation. That's why those tech bros turned billionaires were paying such big money for their places of honour at Trump's second inauguration; that's why they don't appear to have any qualms about using their digital bully pulpits to settle their scores.

They presumably want to ensure that Cory Doctorow never gets the "billionaire-proof internet" that he's still dreaming about and that the rest of us continue in the state of "technofeudalism" into which we have blithely wandered in search of cool things to do with our phones.

The story of Ida Tarbell was bought by Dreamworks Pictures in 2013. Strangely, there's still no sign of it being made into a film. You'd think all those actors whose biographies describe them as activists would be lining up to bring to the screen a feminist icon who brought a few over-mighty industries to heel. Until you see that Dreamworks is owned by a behemoth called Comcast, which is every bit as cuddly as it sounds.

8.00pm Radio 4

In a 60-year career, BBC World Affairs Editor John Simpson (above) has met or reported on some of the most heinous and "barking" dictators in history. His fascinating reflections range from meeting Colonel Gaddafi in a multicoloured tent in the Libyan desert and exiled Emperor Bokassa – the "Beast of Central Africa" and alleged cannibal – in a shabby French château, to witnessing the fall of Ceausescu in 1989 and the execution of Saddam Hussein in 2006. The intrepid reporter also recalls dicing with death himself, narrowly surviving US "friendly fire" during the 2003 Iraq War. JEREMY ASPINALL

6.00 Opera on 3: Cavalleria rusticana and Pagliacci
A recent Bavarian State Opera performance of the repertoire's most popular double bill (Cav and Pag): Mascagni's Cavalleria rusticana and Leoncavallo's Pagliacci, in a new production by Francesco Micheli.

Cavalleria rusticana (Rustic Chivalry) tells the story of Turiddu, a soldier who learns his love Lola has married another while he was away, so seduces Santuzza in order to spite his ex-fiancée. Pagliacci (Clowns) concerns a travelling theatre troupe that includes the clown Canio, his wife Nedda and her lover Silvio. Presented by Georgia Mann, joined by pianist and music specialist Iain Burnside.

Mascagni Cavalleria rusticana

Lola	Ekaterine Buachidze (mezzo)
Turiddu	Ivan Gyngazov (tenor)
Santuzza	Yulia Matochkina (soprano)
Alfio	Wolfgang Koch (baritone)

TODAY'S CHOICES

The Girls of Slender Means

3.00pm Radio 4

In 1963, two years after The Prime of Miss Jean Brodie, Muriel Spark (above) wrote The Girls of Slender Means. With the same shifting timeline and sharp wit, she tells the story of a group of young women, thrown together by economic circumstance, living in a single-sex hostel in postwar London where they are all trying to find their place in a new world. With help from director Anne Isger and the narrator Maggie Service, Simon Scardifield's new dramatisation reaches back to another age, bringing Spark's oddball characters to passionate life. Chief among them are publishing assistant Jane (hips, sized 38"), always busy with "brain work" and ferreting for "brain food"; elocution teacher Joanna, who wafts around reciting poetry; and Selina, the most beautiful of them (hips, 33"). FIONA HUGHES

10.00am Radio 4

Sir Gregory Doran was artistic director of the Royal Shakespeare Company for ten years, knighted for his trouble in 2024. He stepped down in 2022 after a period of compassionate leave to care for his terminally ill husband, Sir Antony Sher, whom he had directed a handful of times. You have to wonder whether this is a guest who has any use for the Complete Works offered to every castaway as he reveals to Lauren Laverne that he has seen with his own eyes around 200 of the 235 remaining copies of the First Folio, the original collection of plays printed seven years after Shakespeare's death and so considered the most reliable source. FIONA HUGHES

6.00 Words and Music
Yusra Warsama and Darren Kuppan read works that feature lost keys, magical ones, fumbling at locks, and learning and committing murder, with extracts from Tom Ramsey, Lewis Carroll, Emily Dickinson, Jacqueline Wilson, Marcel Proust, James Joyce and Dante as well as a vintage recording of TS Eliot. Featuring music by Chopin, Philip Glass, Bartok, Bach, Joplin, Scriabin and Victoria, with recordings by Bessie Smith, Melanie, PJ Harvey and Wendy Carlos. First broadcast in September 2023. (R)
7.15 Sunday Feature: Erik Satie – the Minimalist Muse
Music journalist Jude Rogers explores how French composer Erik Satie has influenced an astonishing array of composers and musicians in genres from prog rock to synthpop, while not out of place on an eerie film soundtrack, in a nostalgic TV advert or on an easy-listening compilation. Rogers looks at why his work and musical ideas so often are seen as a precursor to ambient music, minimalism, musique concrète, film and advert music, conceptual art and surrealism. Contributors include composer and pianist Roger Eno (brother of Brian), pianist Joanna MacGregor, cellist and composer Anton Lukoszevieze, music critic Ian Penman, singer, artist and musician John Foxx, electronic music pioneer Gary Numan, guitarist Steve Hackett (ex-Genesis), Brian Bath (former Kate Bush guitarist), musician and producer Yoshio Ojima and pianist and composer Satsuki Shibano. Producer Susan Marling

8.00 Brass Banding with Hannah Peel
10/10. Hannah Peel explores the university brass scene with a piece composed, conducted and played by students. Flowers Band manager Gregor Spence shares his vision for the future of banding. Plus a piece inspired by artist and sculptor Barbara Hepworth, and the National Youth Brass Band of Great Britain with a piece marking its 70th birthday.
9.00 20th Century Radicals
Kate Molleson explores the subtle music of French composer Eliane Radigue, leading to a full performance of her early synthesiser work Geelriandre (2003). On the way, she takes in the artistic worlds of Marcel Duchamp, Yves Klein and Agnes Martin, finds a pianist who left his own blood splattered on the keyboard, and discovers the love at first sight that would define Eliane Radigue's life.
10.00 Ultimate Calm
11/12. Hania Rani shares music that explores connection and rootedness, from Karol Szymanowski's folk-imbued piano to Julius Eastman's powerful minimalism. And in the Safe Haven feature, New York-raised London-based artist Alvaro Barrington shares his thoughts on memories and community. The full series is available on the splinter station Radio 3 Unwind
11.00 The Night Tracks Mix (R)
11.30 Unclassified

TODAY'S CHOICES

Between the Ears: Miniatures

9.45pm Radio 3

Miyuki Jokiranta is a Finnish-Australian audio-maker who describes herself as "in awe of the environment". Here she's near the Arctic Circle, exploring the "gentle deceitfulness" of the weather, in a programme which – in the absence of any preview – promises to be winningly experimental, if the track record of production company Falling Tree is anything to go by. Jokiranta's previous work has included following an eel migration path and "stories of leviathans, mythic and real", while Falling Tree's credits include the innovative Short Cuts strand of mini-documentaries that adorned Radio 4 for more than ten years. Four more features inspired by the weather follow over the course of the week.

SIMON O'HAGAN

Ed Reardon's Week

2.15pm Radio 4

Finally, the public appetite for the old-fashioned, bilious kind of critic has returned – or at least Ed Reardon hopes it has. Commissioned by a formerly demure ladies' magazine, Ed, that washed-up literary hack par excellence, is given licence to let rip with one of his trademark "vituperative" book reviews. So really it would be in keeping to give the new series of this sitcom a "right pasting". Sadly, though, the first episode is a note-perfect parody of our times, with Amol Rajan coming in for a couple of teasing jibes. He should be honoured. VANESSA THORPE

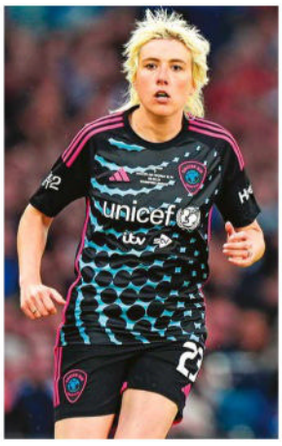
TODAY'S CHOICES



Maisie Adam: Euros Fever

6.30pm Radio 4

In the context of men's football, the idea of "the beautiful game" has long since rung hollow, but with women's football, the case for that epithet is still strong. Hence the anticipation for the women's Euros which begin in Switzerland tomorrow. England are the reigning champions, while Wales have qualified for the first time, and it's against this backdrop that comedian and football fan Maisie Adam (above) offers a guide that we can expect to show the love without taking itself too seriously. We're promised some "famous pals" to chat about what lies ahead, and you may want to make a note of England and Wales's first games on Saturday. SIMON O'HAGAN

Radio 3 in Concert

7.30pm Radio 3

A chance to hear one of the great works of 19th-century vocal music in a wonderful setting: Verdi's Requiem performed at King's College Chapel, Cambridge. Written in 1874 in memoriam for the great literary figure of the Risorgimento, Alessandro Manzoni, this is a deeply emotive work in which Verdi brings to bear all his undoubted powers. As much opera as mass, it requires two choirs – the City of London Choir and the Choir of King's College – four soloists (soprano Francesca Chiejina, mezzo Claire Barnett-Jones, tenor David Junghoon Kim and bass James Platt), plus the BBC Concert Orchestra under Daniel Hyde. MICHAEL HODGES

Watership Down

3.00pm/9.00pm Radio 4 Extra

Fiver has bad dreams: he sees a violent fate befalling his fellow rabbits in Sandleford Warren. But will his brave and sensible brother, Hazel, believe him and sound the alarm? Like many of the best children's classics, from Treasure Island to The Hobbit, Richard Adams's 1972 tale is both frightening and psychologically involving. The saga of the colony's escape journey, dramatised here in two parts by Brian Sibley, comes with a cast of convincing characters and an entire rabbit mythology, although it was first improvised as a bedtime story for Adams's two young daughters. The threatening atmosphere and the sounds of the natural world are captivating in this 2016 production. VANESSA THORPE

7.30pm Radio 3

Time to dig deep into the mystery and meaning of life with Mahler's sumptuous Third Symphony, a work that, as Mahler was wont to, seeks explanation for our place in the great void of the universe. From the opening horns through to the final throb of the timpani this is full-on symphonic music that travels from the beginning of consciousness to the triumph of love. Recorded at Manchester's Bridgewater Hall on 25 June, where the BBC Philharmonic were joined by the Hallé Choir and the City of Birmingham Symphony Orchestra Youth and Children's choirs. Contralto Jess Dandy guests in the fourth movement. MICHAEL HODGES

TODAY'S CHOICES

Ashley Blaker's Hyperfixations

6.30pm Radio 4

Just over two years ago, at the age of 47, polymath Ashley Blaker (above) was diagnosed with ADHD and autism. For his third series for Radio 4, he has decided to own his condition by detailing four of the obsessions that have ruled his life. He hasn't made it easy for himself by starting with 17th-century English history. This is not very fertile ground for comedy. Tom Jones comes to mind and not much else. And rather than riff on the celebrities and events we know, Blaker tells us about studying in libraries and trying to decipher 17th-century handwriting. Every so often two actors pop up to perform illustrative sketches. It's certainly different, but everyone has to work really hard to get the laughs. DAVID MCGILLIVRAY

The Documentary: Diabetes in Pakistan – a Nation's Struggle

9.30am/8.05pm

BBC World Service

With almost a third of adults affected, Pakistan has the highest prevalence rate of type 2 diabetes globally – a figure setting off alarm bells that the country is now in the throes of a severe public health crisis. British-Pakistani pharmacist-turned-comedian Lubna Kerr talks to doctors, sufferers and experts about a disease that is affecting millions and putting healthcare under huge strain. Many remain undiagnosed, either because of restricted access to hospitals, especially in rural areas, or from the myths and stigma that surround the condition – people still believe diabetes only affects the elderly or the overweight. Learning from prevention and treatment in neighbouring India and Bangladesh appears to be crucial. JEREMY ASPINALL

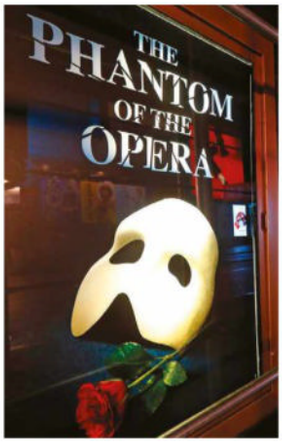
TODAY'S CHOICES



Friday Night Is Music Night

7.30pm Radio 3

Join the BBC Concert Orchestra under Owain Park for an unabashed celebration of musical theatre at Milton Court Concert Hall in London. Expect songs from Les Misérables, The Phantom of the Opera, Carousel, Sweeney Todd, and Company, delivered by the matchless BBC Singers. Also on the bill, the amateur Bantam of the Opera Choir from Bradford Football Club will perform. Part of Bradford's year as UK Capital of Culture, the choir is a collaboration between BBC Radio Leeds and football fans (the team is known as the Bantams) who are learning to sing opera from scratch, and will be singing Music of the Night from The Phantom of the Opera. The choir is 50 stout Yorkshire voices-strong so here's hoping, to paraphrase the work's lyricist Richard Stilgoe, that, softly and deftly, the music shall caress us. MICHAEL HODGES

We've become accustomed to stories about the restrictions put on women in countries like Afghanistan and Saudi Arabia. But Egypt? Egyptian-born presenter Salma El-Wardany grew up without hearing the Koran recited in public by women as the practice was banned. Yet in this programme she hears recordings from the earliest days of Egyptian radio, when female reciters were household names. If there ever was an official ruling that women's voices were haram (and nobody seems quite sure), it's over. A 2021 fatwa issued by the Al-Azhar Mosque lifted the ban. El-Wardany meets young female reciters who have become stars like their predecessors, but online. Horeya Boraey has one million followers on TikTok. DAVID McGILLIVRAY

Take a trip down Wandsworth Way

Community radio station Riverside Radio launches its own soap opera

It's pretty much unheard of for community radio to attempt drama, which doesn't come cheap. Nevertheless the first episode of a soap opera, The Wandsworth Way, will be heard at 5pm on 29 June on London's Riverside Radio, based in the London Borough of Wandsworth.

Both station and soap probably wouldn't have happened without one man, Jason Rosam, founder, managing director and breakfast presenter. He's just come off air as we speak, in the station's Steve Zetter studio. "Steve was one of our volunteers on the sports team. He was a wonderful character, a great broadcaster," Rosam explains. "He sadly passed away in his early 60s."

In another studio Dan Draper is presenting the 10am-12 noon show. He's a volunteer but with quite a high profile, having been on Radio 1. Riverside is also well connected. Rosam's show is sponsored by Battersea Power Station.

"I've got this thing about local radio, I love it," says Rosam. "I grew up listening to my local station in

Actors Russell Barnett (Mike) and Nadine Wild-Palmer (Tash)

Dorset, 2CR FM." He later spent 16 years at BBC Radio London. "I noticed community stations from around London popping up online and I thought Wandsworth deserves that. There's so much going on here."

In 2013 he announced in the local council magazine that he wanted to set up a radio station. Sixty people, "brimming with wonderful ideas", attended a public meeting. Wandsworth Radio launched online from rooms above a charity shop in 2015. "It became an overnight success," Rosam declares. "Everybody wanted to be on it." The rebranded Riverside Radio arrived in 2019. "It's a humungous organisation now, with over 200 volunteers. We've had to limit them because we're so over-subscribed."

Two years ago Wandsworth Council told Rosam about plans to apply for the London Borough of Culture. How could Riverside Radio be involved? Rosam immediately suggested a soap opera. Local pub theatre, Theatre 503, provided writer James Fritz, who came up with a concept. Star novelist Tash (Nadine Wild-Palmer) hooks up with local cabbie Mike (Russell Barnett), who drives her around Wandsworth. Forty episodes will be created by local writers and four episodes have been recorded at local St John Bosco College.

How does The Wandsworth Way end? Writer James Fritz isn't telling. Similarly we'll never know how this interview would have ended had we not been ejected from the studio. Volunteer Stephen Parkin, a retired supermarket worker, needed it to read the 11am news. It's all happening at Riverside Radio.

Take a trip down Wandsworth Way

It's pretty much unheard of for community radio to attempt drama, which doesn't come cheap. Nevertheless the first episode of a soap opera, The Wandsworth Way, will be heard at 5pm on 29 June on London's Riverside Radio, based in the London Borough of Wandsworth.

Both station and soap probably wouldn't have happened without one man, Jason Rosam, founder, managing director and breakfast presenter. He's just come off air as we speak, in the station's Steve Zetter studio. "Steve was one of our volunteers on the sports team. He was a wonderful character, a great broadcaster," Rosam explains. "He sadly passed away in his early 60s."

In another studio Dan Draper is presenting the 10am-12 noon show. He's a volunteer but with quite a high profile, having been on Radio 1. Riverside is also well connected. Rosam's show is sponsored by Battersea Power Station.

"I've got this thing about local radio, I love it," says Rosam. "I grew up listening to my local station in

Actors Russell Barnett (Mike) and Nadine Wild-Palmer (Tash)

Dorset, 2CR FM." He later spent 16 years at BBC Radio London. "I noticed community stations from around London popping up online and I thought Wandsworth deserves that. There's so much going on here."

In 2013 he announced in the local council magazine that he wanted to set up a radio station. Sixty people, "brimming with wonderful ideas", attended a public meeting. Wandsworth Radio launched online from rooms above a charity shop in 2015. "It became an overnight success," Rosam declares. "Everybody wanted to be on it." The rebranded Riverside Radio arrived in 2019. "It's a humungous organisation now, with over 200 volunteers. We've had to limit them because we're so over-subscribed."

Two years ago Wandsworth Council told Rosam about plans to apply for the London Borough of Culture. How could Riverside Radio be involved? Rosam immediately suggested a soap opera. Local pub theatre, Theatre 503, provided writer James Fritz, who came up with a concept. Star novelist Tash (Nadine Wild-Palmer) hooks up with local cabbie Mike (Russell Barnett), who drives her around Wandsworth. Forty episodes will be created by local writers and four episodes have been recorded at local St John Bosco College.

How does The Wandsworth Way end? Writer James Fritz isn't telling. Similarly we'll never know how this interview would have ended had we not been ejected from the studio. Volunteer Stephen Parkin, a retired supermarket worker, needed it to read the 11am news. It's all happening at Riverside Radio.

Take a trip down Wandsworth Way

It's pretty much unheard of for community radio to attempt drama, which doesn't come cheap. Nevertheless the first episode of a soap opera, The Wandsworth Way, will be heard at 5pm on 29 June on London's Riverside Radio, based in the London Borough of Wandsworth.

Both station and soap probably wouldn't have happened without one man, Jason Rosam, founder, managing director and breakfast presenter. He's just come off air as we speak, in the station's Steve Zetter studio. "Steve was one of our volunteers on the sports team. He was a wonderful character, a great broadcaster," Rosam explains. "He sadly passed away in his early 60s."

In another studio Dan Draper is presenting the 10am-12 noon show. He's a volunteer but with quite a high profile, having been on Radio 1. Riverside is also well connected. Rosam's show is sponsored by Battersea Power Station.

"I've got this thing about local radio, I love it," says Rosam. "I grew up listening to my local station in

Actors Russell Barnett (Mike) and Nadine Wild-Palmer (Tash)

Dorset, 2CR FM." He later spent 16 years at BBC Radio London. "I noticed community stations from around London popping up online and I thought Wandsworth deserves that. There's so much going on here."

In 2013 he announced in the local council magazine that he wanted to set up a radio station. Sixty people, "brimming with wonderful ideas", attended a public meeting. Wandsworth Radio launched online from rooms above a charity shop in 2015. "It became an overnight success," Rosam declares. "Everybody wanted to be on it." The rebranded Riverside Radio arrived in 2019. "It's a humungous organisation now, with over 200 volunteers. We've had to limit them because we're so over-subscribed."

Two years ago Wandsworth Council told Rosam about plans to apply for the London Borough of Culture. How could Riverside Radio be involved? Rosam immediately suggested a soap opera. Local pub theatre, Theatre 503, provided writer James Fritz, who came up with a concept. Star novelist Tash (Nadine Wild-Palmer) hooks up with local cabbie Mike (Russell Barnett), who drives her around Wandsworth. Forty episodes will be created by local writers and four episodes have been recorded at local St John Bosco College.

How does The Wandsworth Way end? Writer James Fritz isn't telling. Similarly we'll never know how this interview would have ended had we not been ejected from the studio. Volunteer Stephen Parkin, a retired supermarket worker, needed it to read the 11am news. It's all happening at Riverside Radio.

1.05pm The Explanation
The North Atlantic Treaty Organisation, better known as Nato, was formed in the wake of the Second World War, with the agreement that its members would support each other if they came under attack. But how has its remit changed in the seven decades since its foundation? Since Russia's invasion of Ukraine, more states have sought to join, but its expansion is perceived as a threat by President Putin. In this episode of the World Service series from 2023, diplomatic correspondent James Landale explains how Nato works and what challenges lie ahead for the organisation.

Take a trip down Wandsworth Way

It's pretty much unheard of for community radio to attempt drama, which doesn't come cheap. Nevertheless the first episode of a soap opera, The Wandsworth Way, will be heard at 5pm on 29 June on London's Riverside Radio, based in the London Borough of Wandsworth.

Both station and soap probably wouldn't have happened without one man, Jason Rosam, founder, managing director and breakfast presenter. He's just come off air as we speak, in the station's Steve Zetter studio. "Steve was one of our volunteers on the sports team. He was a wonderful character, a great broadcaster," Rosam explains. "He sadly passed away in his early 60s."

In another studio Dan Draper is presenting the 10am-12 noon show. He's a volunteer but with quite a high profile, having been on Radio 1. Riverside is also well connected. Rosam's show is sponsored by Battersea Power Station.

"I've got this thing about local radio, I love it," says Rosam. "I grew up listening to my local station in

Actors Russell Barnett (Mike) and Nadine Wild-Palmer (Tash)

Dorset, 2CR FM." He later spent 16 years at BBC Radio London. "I noticed community stations from around London popping up online and I thought Wandsworth deserves that. There's so much going on here."

In 2013 he announced in the local council magazine that he wanted to set up a radio station. Sixty people, "brimming with wonderful ideas", attended a public meeting. Wandsworth Radio launched online from rooms above a charity shop in 2015. "It became an overnight success," Rosam declares. "Everybody wanted to be on it." The rebranded Riverside Radio arrived in 2019. "It's a humungous organisation now, with over 200 volunteers. We've had to limit them because we're so over-subscribed."

Two years ago Wandsworth Council told Rosam about plans to apply for the London Borough of Culture. How could Riverside Radio be involved? Rosam immediately suggested a soap opera. Local pub theatre, Theatre 503, provided writer James Fritz, who came up with a concept. Star novelist Tash (Nadine Wild-Palmer) hooks up with local cabbie Mike (Russell Barnett), who drives her around Wandsworth. Forty episodes will be created by local writers and four episodes have been recorded at local St John Bosco College.

How does The Wandsworth Way end? Writer James Fritz isn't telling. Similarly we'll never know how this interview would have ended had we not been ejected from the studio. Volunteer Stephen Parkin, a retired supermarket worker, needed it to read the 11am news. It's all happening at Riverside Radio.

Unearthing the Past
Monday–Friday 11.45am Radio 4

Ask most people to name, say, five or six figures of the Italian renaissance, and I would bet good money you wouldn't find a woman on the list. Ask the same question in Italy, though, where they trade on their rich artistic past, and one name would almost certainly be there: Isabella d'Este, after which they would probably add the title "First Lady of the Renaissance".

Why? Well, to begin with, because she was the first female art collector and patron of her age, a considerable achievement in an early art market dominated by men. But she was also the most colourful of characters: precociously clever, brilliantly educated and politically savvy, she was as confident ruling the state of Mantua when her husband Francesco Gonzaga was away fighting as she was bargaining for new work from a Renaissance master.

As an author and historian, I first encountered Isabella when I was writing my series of novels about Renaissance women that history had either forgotten or maligned. I was teaching a semester at Washington University in St Louis and was halfway through rehabilitating Lucrezia Borgia (another great story) when Isabella roared into view as her fashionable, imperious and wonderfully combative sister-in-law. From then I was hooked – and my new novel, The Marchesa, was always going to be about her.

MISTRESS OF ALL THE ARTS
Portrait of Isabella d'Este by Titian

FIRST LADY OF MANTUA

In her latest novel, Sarah Dunant explores the life of Italian aristocrat Isabella d'Este, the archetypal Renaissance woman

Here, after all, was a woman who took no prisoners. And when it came to collecting art she had serious rivals. Popes, cardinals, bankers, kings, dukes of Italian city-states... they all had bulging purses and were keen to show off their cultured credentials by commissioning great names to decorate churches and palaces (think Michelangelo and the Sistine chapel) or snaffling up antique Roman statues being pulled from the ground. But Isabella was not daunted.

Born in 1474 into the thriving city-state of Ferrara, Isabella was educated in the new humanism (it seems she was reciting letters by Cicero in Latin at the age of six) and grew up soaked in great art. After her marriage into the state of Mantua at just 15 years old – not unusual for the time – she set about making her own mark as a collector.

Inside the city's great 15th-century castle of San Giorgio she designed a whole new set of rooms, including a special studiolo (something only men had had up until then) where she could study, play music and appreciate the work she would collect. Over the next 50 years those rooms would be filled with works by Michelangelo, Mantegna, Perugino, Raphael, Titian and Leonardo da Vinci to name but a few. She bought fabulous first editions from new printing presses, sniffed out ancient Roman coins and medallions, commissioned exquisitely decorated musical instruments (she was herself an esteemed lute player), and when she couldn't afford the big antique statues that were still being excavated in Rome, she commissioned her own perfect, miniature bronze copies of the greatest of them, which are now highly valued as artworks in themselves.

FORTRESS HOME
Isabella d'Este's Castello di San Giorgio in Mantua. Below: part of Mantegna's Triumphs of Caesar, commissioned by Isabella and her husband

By her death half a century later in 1539, she was – not surprisingly – something of a celebrity. Not only for her collecting, but for the sophistication of her court and political acumen – and for her ever-changing wardrobe and ability to shop till she dropped. Not everyone liked her: "pushy" women, whatever age they live in, have to accept that they will make some enemies along the way. "The Monstrous Marchesa", one of her detractors called her. (Though never to her face.)

It was an insult as much about her looks as her character; but she also had a thick skin. Never a beautiful woman, right from the start she had a fine eye for fashion, and was buying brocades, velvet and silks from all over the known world and designing her own and her ladies' outfits. Such was the brilliance of her eye, that what Isabella wore one year, women all over Italy were wearing the next. Even the King of France, aware of her influence on his wife, sent her a gift – a doll dressed entirely in her own fashions.

And how do we know all this? Because she herself tells us. Her personal archive (some 33,000 letters) is now squirrelled away in a former monastery and deconsecrated church in the centre of Mantua. The ink on the pages is fading, the wax seals leaking, but persevere and Isabella's voice – wheedling, charming, cajoling and dictatorial by degrees – sings out loud and clear.

As for her art collection, such was its quality that when Mantua fell on hard times three generations later, our own Charles I sent envoys to purchase a large slice of it. (You can still see Mantegna's Triumphs of Caesar in Hampton Court Palace.) The rest went to Cardinal Richelieu and from there eventually into the Louvre in Paris.

The First Lady of the Renaissance? After four years of researching and writing my novel about her, I can say, hand on heart, that Isabella certainly deserves that sobriquet.

Sarah Dunant reads five essays about Isabella d'Este in this week's Unearthing the Past, 11.45am Monday–Friday on Radio 4. Her new novel about Isabella, The Marchesa, is out now (Whitefox Publishing, £24.99)

LEADING FROM THE BACK
STEPH HOUGHTON
Women's Euros
Women's sports have been growing in popularity in recent years, with football one of the leading examples – 17.4 million people tuned in to watch the last Euros final in 2022. Steph Houghton, former Lionesses Captain with 121 caps to her name (as well as playing at three Olympic Games for Team GB), has played a huge part in helping the sport gain the recognition it deserves. Leading from the Back (Sphere, £12.99) tells her story in her own words, from growing up dreaming of the beautiful game to becoming one of its star players. Our women's Euros features begin on p12

AN ABSOLUTE CASSEROLE

Book at Bedtime
Mon–Fri 10.45pm Radio 4
Most of Edith Wharton's published works centre on the upper-class society of New York City, but Summer (Penguin Classics, £8.99) is one of just two pieces of her writing that is set in the countryside – Massachusetts, specifically. One of Wharton's favourites of her own publications, it was rather controversial at time of publication – 1917 not quite being ready for young Charity, chafing against the rules put upon being a young woman and rebelling via sexual awakening with a forbidden lover!

EXOTIC BEAUTIES

Agapanthus makes a dramatic addition to a sunny spot – and it's easier to grow than you think, says Joe Swift

Well, summer's coming in, and after this column RT's gardening page will take a break for a few weeks. (Not me, though – I'll still be working on Gardeners' World!). I'll be back here in August, helping you get the best from your garden in high summer, then taking us into early autumn, when there's some serious gardening to be done!

That doesn't mean there's nothing to do now, though – so let's have a look at the agapanthus. Commonly called the African lily or Lily of the Nile, these bold, statuesque South African natives are high-summer, high-impact plants.

Some see them as a "specialist plant" – tricky, perhaps. But if you get a few basics right, they're so easy to grow – and they thrive on neglect! The key is knowing what type you have: deciduous or evergreen. The Agapanthus campanulatus hybrids are deciduous, with narrow leaves which die back in winter. They make the most reliable plants to grow in the ground (or in a pot) if you have good drainage and a sunny spot.

The A praecox types have larger, strappy leaves and bigger flowerheads, and tend to be evergreen. These may need some winter protection so are probably best grown in pots, which can be moved to a cool greenhouse or under a porch in the winter.

Now's a good time to buy them as they'll be coming into flower, so you can see their flower colour (they do vary a lot, even the named varieties). Look for lush green foliage and avoid any that have mottled leaves (a sign of virus).

A common mistake when growing them in pots is to put them into a much larger one than they were bought in – so they use their energy to fill the pot with roots and put on leaf growth but may not flower well. Instead, go up one pot size at a time, using peat-free John Innes No 2 compost or equivalent.

In the ground, plant in sun, in moist but well-drained soil. Water regularly but sparingly, and feed with a high-potash feed (tomato feed or liquid seaweed) every two weeks or so during the growing season.

IF YOU DO ONE THING THIS WEEK...

Deadhead annuals

Annual plants are grown in pots, hanging baskets or directly in the ground. They are programmed to grow, flower and set seed in a single season when grown in the UK (they may behave differently in a frost-free country). By deadheading them regularly we trick them into using their energy to produce more flowers all summer long – happy days! Here's what to bear in mind...

■ MOST ANNUALS, such as cosmos, zinnia, marigolds and petunias, respond well to regular deadheading.

■ REGULAR DEADHEADING doesn't just improve the plant's general appearance – removing spent flowers also prevents the build-up of decaying matter, which can attract pests and diseases and creates better airflow around the plant, further minimising the risk of fungal infections.

■ TO DEADHEAD PROPERLY, simply snip off the faded flower head just above the next set of healthy leaves, thus encouraging the plant to produce new buds. Use snips or kitchen scissors – or with some plants, you can simply pinch them off between thumb and forefinger. Throw spent flowers onto the compost heap.

■ EVERY TWO WEEKS after deadheading, feed and water your annuals using a high-potash liquid tomato feed or seaweed to promote new flowers.

■ WITH SOME FLOWERS, you may want to save a few for sowing yourself next year – in which case let them go to seed, collect them in a paper bag, label and store.

Secrets of Supercruisers
Thursday 8.00pm C4

PUSH THE BOAT OUT

Five times as big as the Titanic, one of the world's biggest cruise ships is worth splashing out on

It was when I tried to ask the robot barman to laser me up some pork scratchings that I knew things had gone too far. I was onboard Wonder of the Seas, which was, at the time, the world's biggest cruise ship. (This was in 2022 but, hard to believe, it has already been surpassed in size twice since then, with Channel 4's new series, Secrets of Supercruisers, focusing on two of the current crop of biggies.)

I had been at sea for a couple of days, and had become so used to the frankly bonkers stuff aboard (waterslides, ziplines, pianists playing in the lifts, inflatable laser-tag labyrinth on an ice rink…) that I barely batted an eyelid when I walked into one of the two-dozen-odd bars and found a robot arm mixing the drinks.

Ordering my Old Fashioned via a keypad, and having it dispensed with a speed and precision not even Tom Cruise in Cocktail could match, I unthinkingly opened my mouth to ask about a little bag of something salty and crunchy to go with it. The machine stared blankly at me, and I wandered off to find sustenance elsewhere (not hard with a full 40 restaurants and bars available across the ship's 18 decks).

> 'Wonder of the Seas is a perfect, Pleasantville utopia'

That's what life is like aboard the supercruisers: a strange mix of sybaritic spoiling (I'll say it again: 40 restaurants and bars), exciting adventure (waking up each morning with a whole new destination to explore) and absurd gimmickry (a "FlowRider" artificial wave machine so you can practise surfing on the sundeck? Why ever not – see the pictorial evidence in the picture, right).

Wonder is a big old boat – with space for 7,000 passengers and 2,300 crew – but it's not an ugly monstrosity. Ships this size are regularly referred to as "cities at sea", but with no vandalism, vape litter or fried chicken shops, it's not like any city I know. Instead, I find a perfect, Pleasantville utopia of merrily bustling boutique-lined avenues, pocket-sized tree-shaded parks and suntrap squares where musicians tootle winningly (when they're not rostered to play in those elevators).

Meanwhile, if being trapped in a lift with a beaming busker is your idea of hell, you can avoid them at least some of the time by taking Ultimate Abyss instead. It's the longest enclosed slide at sea, proclaims the cruise line Royal Caribbean proudly, and it whizzes you from deck 16 (the Sports Zone) to deck 6 (the Boardwalk) quicker than you can say, "Aaaaarrrrrggghh!". It's also handy if you're prone to getting lost – which isn't difficult to do on a ship this size.

I see some truly spectacular shows over my weekend onboard (most notably the one where acrobats dive 30 feet into tiny pools of water while others tight-rope around them in a display of killer choreography), but manage to miss the ice-dance extravaganza because I can't find the ice rink. Only on a supercruiser, I suspect, could a man misplace an actual ice rink.

Finding your cabin can be pretty confusing, too (certainly after a couple of Old Fashioneds, anyway). With 9,000 souls onboard, the stateroom corridors are so long they look like something the heroine would run down in a Hollywood-movie nightmare sequence – but worse, because they have inspiring slogans on the walls. "Dream big", "Reach for the stars" and "Love out loud", they tell us (though I wouldn't advise the latter. Cabins use their limited space really cleverly, but the walls are pretty thin…).

In the end, the numbers tell their own story. Wonder of the Seas is 32 London buses long, 2.6 blue whales wide, five times as large as the Titanic, and I counted 126 different options

> 'Practise surfing on the sundeck? Why ever not!'

ALL AT SEA
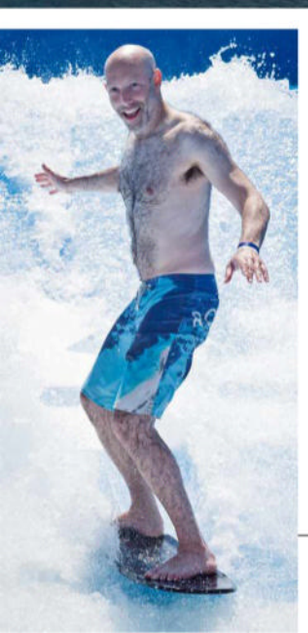
The open-air Vue Bar on deck 15 of Wonder of the Seas serves cocktails against a backdrop of panoramic ocean views available at breakfast in the main restaurant (which, incidentally, can cater to more than 1,000 muesli-munchers at a time). But the real "secret of the supercruisers"? The almost life-saving tip I'm here to pass on, thanks to my own first-hand experience on these gigantic ships? It's to write yourself a "leaving your cabin" checklist.



Stick a piece of paper to the inside of your stateroom door listing all those easily forgotten items you potentially might want or need while away from your cabin (keycard, sunglasses, swimming costume, suncream... the works). Because the most important statistic I learnt onboard Wonder of the Seas wasn't its 362-metre length or 236,857 gross tonnage – it's that it took me 16 minutes to get from my lounger to my cabin and back when I realised I'd come out without my hat.

You have been warned. ED GRENBY

ENERGY BILLS WILL FALL...

But that's not the end of the story, as Paul Lewis elaborates

From 1 July the cost of electricity and gas in England, Scotland and Wales will fall, as energy regulator Ofgem lowers the cap on the prices. So just when we use less energy, the price goes down!

For the typical consumer who pays by direct debit, and has both gas and electricity, Ofgem says the price cut will mean a reduction of £129 a year or 7%. But that calculation is over a year and assumes the price will stay fixed for 12 months (though the cap is changed every three months). It's better to look at the price change of each unit of electricity or gas and the daily standing charge: the amount you pay regardless of how much energy you use.

If you have electricity and gas, it will still cost nearly £5.70 a week to be connected, and nearer £6.80 a week if you are on quarterly bills – even if you use no energy at all!

Overall, electricity charges have fallen by just over 4.5% and gas twice as much. So if you just use electricity you'll see a smaller reduction in your bills than Ofgem's 7%.

Prepayment meter customers now pay almost the same as those on direct debit. But the eight million who pay their bill quarterly as it arrives have higher standing charges and pay more for each unit of energy they use. The biggest saving they can make is to change to direct debt.

Energy suppliers also offer fixed-rate one-year deals that are cheaper than the capped rates: search "best energy deal" at which.co.uk.

QUESTIONS? Send any questions to Paul.Lewis@radiotimes.com. I cannot answer you personally, but I will reflect them in this column.

RT MONEY PARTNER

If you're aged 55 and over and have big dreams for retirement, equity release could allow you to access some of the value that has built up in your home. You could use the funds to renovate your home, help loved ones financially or take that once-in-a-lifetime holiday.

You may be able to release from a minimum of £10,000 up to 60% of your property's value, depending on the age of the youngest homeowner, the value of your home and your individual needs. The funds can be accessed either as a lump sum or regular payments, which you can enjoy spending once any existing mortgage has been repaid, without needing to move home.

Equity release may involve a home reversion plan or a lifetime mortgage, which is secured against your property and will reduce the value of your estate and impact funding long-term care. Any money released, plus accrued interest, is repaid when you pass away or move into long-term care.

Advice is required before proceeding with equity release and there may be options that better suit your circumstances. Radio Times has teamed up with Age Partnership+ to provide an equity release service where you can find out more and get a free no-obligation quotation. Only if your case completes would an advice fee of £1,995 be payable. Other lender and solicitor fees may apply.

DICTIONARY CORNER Susie Dent

Phrase of the week Keen as mustard

We have been using mustard with our food for thousands of years. People in the past would crunch mustard seeds to clean their teeth during meals, while mustard was used both as a food preservative and as a treatment for various illnesses, from hysteria to snake bites.

Traditionally, mustard was brought unprepared in the form of seeds that guests would crush before adding it to a liquid such as vinegar. In 1742, a factory was established to make prepared mustard by Messrs Keens, whose name was to become synonymous with mustard-making until they were bought by Colman's in the early 20th Century.

It's tempting to assumed that the name of Keen is the origin of the expression "as keen as mustard", but the expression already existed long before. Instead, the idiom rests on the association between the heat of mustard and zest and energy.

JOURNEY'S END...

Race across the World (BBC1) is good for both my geography and general knowledge, although nothing beats the real experience of travelling. I think this was the best series yet: landscapes that were totally new to me and rich cultures to learn about. Each couple was good to watch and I was invested in all of them. It would seem each pair bonded emotionally, too.

And the final message ringing out loud and clear? No matter what the nationality, people have pretty much similar values, hopes and dreams, and are kind and decent.

Pam Baxter
Harrogate, North Yorkshire

...I love this programme despite the fact that my favourites rarely win! However, I thought this latest series concentrated far too much on the back stories of the pairs to the detriment of showing more of the work placements and time spent with the locals.

Please let's get back to the original format.

PHYLLIS'S TIME

Murder Most Puzzling (Thursday 5) may well be Phyllis Logan's first lead role in a TV series, but I was surprised neither she nor RT (14 June) mentioned her starring performance in the 1983 Film4 production Another Time, Another Place (directed by future Oscar nominee Michael Radford).

Playing a young Scottish housewife who has an affair with an Italian PoW in 1943, she won the 1984 Bafta for most outstanding newcomer to film and a best actress nomination, ultimately losing out to Julie Walters in Educating Rita. No need to be so modest, Phyllis!

COLOUR CO-ORDINATED

Congratulations to Clare Balding and Colonel James Coleby for their unobtrusive, but informative, commentary on Trooping the Colour: the King's Birthday Parade (14 June BBC1). It made for refreshing and relaxing viewing of a great piece of military ceremonial. All too often commentators tend to dominate, but these two were excellent.

Christina Wallace
Shrivenham, Oxfordshire

...The coverage of Trooping the Colour was marvellous. Clare Balding brings such a lot to these events through her love of horses. She asks the best questions – and finding out that sun cream is put on the pink noses of the pale-coloured horses was jaw-dropping!

NEGLECTED WRITERS

The letter from Sophie Baylis (Feedback, 21 June) has prompted me to make a plea for a TV life story of the neglected author Frances (Fanny) Burney, 1752–1840. She was born in King's Lynn, the daughter of musician, composer and writer Dr Charles Burney, and was one of Britain's first important novelists and letter writers. Jane Austen was familiar with her work and drew inspiration from some of her novels. A Burney broadcast, please!

Andy Tyle
King's Lynn, Norfolk

...Sophie Baylis cries up Mrs Gaskell. God forbid! Repeat the TV adaptation of North and South, maybe. But the novelist who is neglected is Benjamin Disraeli. Sibyl, or the Two Nations did make Radio 4. But its predecessor, Coningsby, or the New Generation, is still better. May a Disraeli season begin!

THE JOY OF LEARNING

In Our Time (Thursday) really must be the jewel in the crown of Radio 4. Over the decades, the three ingredients – an eclectic choice of subjects, the calibre of experts participating and the ringmastery of host Melvyn Bragg – have combined to produce a delightful whole.

The programme on the evolution of the lungs (12 June) taught me about buccal pumping in frogs, salamanders without lungs, residual gills in humans and the origin of hiccups! What was particularly enjoyable, though, was the genuine joy expressed by the guests as they learnt startling new

LETTER OF THE WEEK

Bring back Shardlake!

I do not have Disney+ so missed the first screening of Shardlake (Monday ITV1), but was aware that further filming had been shelved. I loved all the Shardlake novels by CJ Sansom, but despite inevitable changes found this a fairly good adaptation. There were occasions in Arthur Hughes's performance as Matthew Shardlake when Mark Rylance came to mind as Thomas Cromwell, with his ability to convey thoughts by his expression. And it was breath-stopping to see Hughes's torso naked and get an insight into the difficulties of his upper-limb difference.

I do hope someone picks up this drama and makes another series, not least so that Arthur Hughes can show us more of his acting skills.

COOL ADVICE

The Great House Revival (BBC2) is a hidden gem! Architect and presenter Hugh Wallace has a great eye for detail. When a couple renovating a cow barn said they could only afford to insulate one wall, intending it to be in the children's bedroom, he walked them to the other end of their house and pointed out it was a few degrees colder, because it was north-facing. Insulating that wall instead would save them in heating expenses and prevent damp. We could all benefit from Hugh's practical advice.

SPACE INVADERS

To whoever is in charge of the scheduling or advertisements on Sky Mix: is it really necessary to have the first advert break less than four minutes into Star Trek: Voyager? This has happened on several occasions in repeats of this series.

In case you need help with the answer, it begins with an N.

CASE NOT CLOSED

So after a long and gripping investigation in Murder 24/7: the DPD Murder (BBC2) into the brutal killing of a young man, we were left without that most vital bit of murder mysteries – the motive. Was the victim random and blameless? We had seen previous footage of him involved in a fracas with another group at a sporting event.

Was this a turf war, a drugs war or even a tribal sporting rivalry? The latter seemed unlikely given the ferocity and the lethal weapons used. It was an anti-climax for viewers who had stuck with the programme hoping for a more rounded picture.

SAY IT IN SWEDISH

In The Archers (16 June Radio 4), I was delighted to hear the pinpoint accuracy of the Swedish language as Kate told Jakob the term he could use as grandfather to Phoebe's baby (morfar, meaning "mother father"). A brilliant way to avoid family confusions! So why wasn't Jakob impressed?

BRUSH WITH LAUGHTER

Perhaps Joanna in Conversations from a Long Marriage (16 June Radio 4) might consider trying some rather useful brushes I found online rather than using poor Roger's toothbrush to clean around the bathroom taps. Although I have not been averse to using my husband's toothbrush myself for the aforementioned task!

My husband and I roar with laughter every week at this superb and loving comedy that chimes in every way with our own marriage.

CELEBRATING THE UNSUNG HEROES

The 2025 Radio 4 All in the Mind Awards, which recognise unsung heroes who have made a difference to people's mental health, were broadcast recently (9.30am, Tue 24 June/BBC Sounds), hosted by Claudia Hammond. The winners in the group category were KidsTime Haringey of north London (part of the Our Time Charity), which holds monthly workshops for families where a parent has a mental illness. Adult and child psychiatrists are on hand as the children do drama and play while the adults discuss their problems, and then the families come back together to share what they've learnt.

KidsTime was nominated by Chukwunyere (Chuks) Agu, 44, who has paranoid schizophrenia. For him the workshops were a "safe space" where he could work on rebuilding his relationship with his three children, aged six to 11, and his ex-wife Shereene. Chuks thanked KidsTime for helping his family to "heal" following his illness.

ANIMAL ANTICS

Chris Packham remembers a children's classic

Sixty-five years ago on Thursday, children were introduced to the bucolic and whimsical escapades of Hammy Hamster and his friends, who lived in furnished houses and got around by boat, car and plane. The 39 black-and-white Tales of the Riverbank ran through the 60s; colour episodes were shot in the 70s and more in the 90s. We asked naturalist Chris Packham, 64, to share his memories of a show where animals were the (only) stars of the show...

"I can remember being sat down in front of a rented Rediffusion television and watching Hammy, GP the guinea pig and Roderick the rat on their various adventures.

"Hammy Hamster was the star, the principle carrier of all of the narratives, but not much happened. The adventures they were on were never particularly adventurous!" He concedes this must have been due to the problems of animal behaviour.

"I remember Hammy having a little boat that was wobbling around in a tank. I can only imagine the frustration and the difficulties they had making it and trying to get those animals, which are among the least directable of any animals on the planet, to do the right thing, particularly if there were two of them in shot at the same time. It must have been an absolute nightmare to make."

In fact, co-creator Dave Ellison once said, "I think I'm the only producer in the world that has to be regularly inoculated against its cast. Hamsters are nocturnal so they only work at night. During the day you'll probably get about five minutes of performance out of them and then they'll go to sleep on camera." To give an idea of the patience required, 12,000ft of film was used for each episode, the final length of which was only 500ft – the show occupied a 15-minute slot.

RIVERSIDE Chris Packham says the 60s was a golden age for children's TV Below: GP isn't as tempted by flying as Hammy Hamster

Ellison and Paul Sutherland made a pilot for Canadian television that was turned down – it was the BBC that bought the format. But there was one facet of the production that didn't go down well with the young Packham: the voiceover by Johnny Morris, who was also the host of the long-running Animal Magic.

"My mum used to try to get me to watch Animal Magic. I didn't mind it when they had animals climbing all over them – that was interesting and I wanted to be them because I wanted animals climbing all over me. But I really didn't like Johnny Morris putting voices on animals.

"I was such a snob about that, I thought that was entirely wrong and babyish and giving animals names and imagining all of these things he thought they were thinking went against everything I was trying to learn in terms of science. So no, I didn't like that."

Was it a more innocent age? "Yes, I think it was – the animals were presented in a really benign way – and what I don't remember was any of the sort of sarcasm and cynicism that was often an integral part of children's programmes." (A later favourite for Packham was Roobarb.)

As for whether Riverbank could be made today, "Probably not, legally, in terms of animal welfare! It would work if it had the right pitch to it. I think there would have to be social comment and politics and all sorts of cultural points of reference to ground it. I don't think you could just make a show about a bunch of rodents on a river, it would have to be much, much cleverer than that."

For all the misgivings of hindsight, Packham says that the show was made during a golden age. "It was part of a childhood where TV took risks and was far more inventive. It was a time when I imagine you could turn up with an idea and people would say, 'Yeah, come on, let's give it a go.' We lack that now, everything is 'series 28' and seems to run for too long. Now it's all so formatted and tame."

Packham is a great fan of the children's shows of Gerry and Sylvia Anderson (Thunderbirds, Captain Scarlet). "When I read about the budgets they had and the amount of effort and inventiveness of the people and also the commitment to commission those things and put them on the air, it must have been an absolute joy to be working in TV at that time. It was a space where you could just be far more creative than we can now." CAROLINE FROST AND MARK BRAXTON

FRED SIRIEIX

The maître d' had his own first date in Peckham – and reader, she married him!

What's the view from your sofa?
There are a couple of TVs in the house. There's one right in front of me in the kitchen surrounded by a cabinet and shelves, cook books, bottles of wine – and weights. I have tennis elbow, so I've got to do some rehabilitation. Getting old – being 53, going on 54 – is the problem!

How do you stay active?
I still train. Yesterday, I did 40 minutes of shadowboxing and skipping and all sorts of boxing exercises. It's such a good all-round workout. If I'm travelling, I can do it in a small bedroom. Two square metres is all I need!

What have you enjoyed watching recently?
I'm watching a lot of gardening programmes – Alan Titchmarsh and Monty Don. I love getting into the serenity and peace of gardening. It really does wonders for me. It's a constant source of satisfaction and joy. One thing I don't watch much of at the moment is the news, because it's doom and gloom and gets me completely depressed. As long as I've watched it once a week, I know what's going on.

First Dates* is back for its 24th series. It's been hugely successful in its 12 years, with loads of weddings – and babies. Do you get invited?
No, I don't get to go to the weddings! Our job is to put people together and then it's up to them to live their lives. We have so many daters and so many weddings that I wouldn't even have time to go to them all! I love weddings though, especially the speeches – and the vows are always really beautiful.

In February, you got married to Fruitcake [the name his wife goes by]. How is wedded life?
It's been very good! The wedding took so long to organise. It was so much work and there were so many arguments and tantrums, but it was amazing! We spent a week in Jamaica and had drinks for everybody on the beach two days before with Red Stripe and jerk chicken. Then the wedding happened, and then we had another party two days later. It was very small, lovely and intimate.

What's the most romantic thing you've ever done?
I can't think of anything more romantic than our wedding, but last year, it was Fruitcake's 50th, so I organised a surprise trip for her in the South of France, going around Nice, Cannes and Marseille. It was beautiful.

You met Fruitcake when you passed her on the street in Peckham, London. What did you do on your first date?
We went to a local place in Peckham and had some bar food. There was lots of eye contact and smiling. It was really electric and supercharged, because we were so attracted to each other. We were on fire... and we did kiss on the first date!

Did you worry that you wouldn't meet the right person?
Of course! When you go through a break-up, you think the sky is falling on your head and you're never going to find love. We all have back stories and baggage – things that didn't go so well, things that are constantly nagging us at the back of our mind because we've been traumatised by this or that. All the people in the First Dates restaurant want another chance at love. We can all relate to it, because we've all been there. But... Fruitcake said yes!

I quite like Married at First Sight – and Love Island! It's a different generation; a different kind of show. What I like about First Dates is that it's the show of love. It's real and has noble intentions. Nobody's going on it saying, "I want to just have a one-night stand!" First Dates is entertaining, but we're very serious about it. We are not here to make fun of the daters – our one objective is to match these people with the right person. It's a real responsibility, and people trust us. LAURA RUTKOWSKI

The new series of First Dates starts on Friday at 10.00pm on Channel 4

DOWN TIME

FIRST TV MEMORY
I loved French TV adverts. They were so creative, and I remember all the jingles!

SNACK/DRINK OF CHOICE
A nice bottle of wine or an Earl Grey tea. I made an apple tart at the weekend that Fruitcake and I ate while watching TV.

Music isn't just music. It's a time machine. It takes Patrick back to Glastonbury, with his daughter and baby granddaughter. Under the night sky, watching an incredible show by a band he wasn't even a fan of.

It's a moment he'll never forget. Forever tied to a song he somehow knew the words to. Singing along with those he loved most, having not slept well for days. It's a memory his late wife, Pam, never got a chance to make.

And that's why Patrick left a gift in his Will to Cancer Research UK.

So that others can keep listening, humming

and remembering.

Which is exactly what Nevo did when she finally finished her treatment for breast cancer in 2017 – she sang at the top of her lungs.

Diagnosed five years earlier, she was treated with a lumpectomy and radiotherapy, followed by years of Tamoxifen; a breakthrough drug that CRUK trials helped approve.

Not only did the treatment save Nevo's life. It's meant she can have even more "pinch me" moments. Like when she sang at a friend's birthday in the Caribbean last year. Pianist and all.

Leave a gift that changes lives.

PREDICTION BBC pundit HELEN WARD says: "It's a tough group, but I think Wales have a decent chance. People might think I'm crazy for saying this, but I feel that Wales, as the underdogs, could go under the radar. Some individuals have got an opportunity to become superstars."
