From the Editor

Our cover star this week, David Mitchell, is a man of many talents. Whether crossing comedy swords with Lee Mack on Would I Lie to You?, bringing Ben Elton's world-weary Shakespeare to life in Upstart Crow or voicing Police Officer Panda in Peppa Pig, he always brings a slightly exasperated view of the world that is edging him closer to national treasure status. In Ginny Dougary's revealing interview on page 12, he talks about the strange dichotomy that many comedians say shapes them: "In lots of ways I am a shy, introverted person. But I'm also a professional performer and that's a very extrovert thing to do."

He also talks of his acting job as a puzzle-setting sleuth in the comedy drama Ludwig. It's almost as if writer Mark Brotherhood has created the perfect TV series for my family: gentle crime capers, fiendish puzzles and the comedy chops of David Mitchell... Not since Jonathan Creek has there been quite so much excitement at Law Towers.

Elsewhere, we bring you chats with David Morrissey and Jason Watkins, who star in new Radio 4 adaptations as part of a Charles Dickens season. Nicholas Lyndhurst tells us how he can't believe his luck to be acting with comedy legend Kelsey Grammer in series two of the Frasier reboot out in Hollywood. And we discover the inspiration for ITV's latest true crime drama, Joan – the extraordinary tale of how Joan Hannington became one of the most successful jewel thieves in 80s Britain. Behind the glamorous veneer, her tough upbringing and the harsh reality of a life of crime are slowly revealed. I think I'll stick to the gentler world of fictional crime, especially coupled with a good brainteaser. Talking of which, I hope those with a predilection for a poser or two have seen our new Seven Queens puzzle (page 141). Ludwig would approve...

NEW PERIOD DRAMA

DOWNTON MEETS ALL CREATURES

The Hardacres is a classic fish out of water story – literally. The rags to riches tale, set in 1890s Yorkshire, follows three generations of the Hardacre family who are laid off after an accident at the herring docks where they are all employed.

Enterprising matriarch Mary has the idea of starting her own fried fish stall and soon the family is bringing in more money than they could have dreamt of.

After a smart investment comes good, a windfall allows them to upgrade to a huge manor house – but having only ever known working-class life, the Hardacres then have to learn about etiquette and rubbing shoulders with the aristocracy.

What ensues is a drama full of heart, warmth and humour. Claire Cooper, who plays Mary, says, "Mary tries exceptionally hard to weave her way into this new world but she's met with a hostile environment. Fitting into that sort of society life isn't easy.

"Their new neighbours, the Fitzherberts, are landed gentry and enormously posh. The Lady is a snob and very disparaging of the Hardacres, so it's enormous fun and great drama when the two families meet." EMMA COX

The Hardacres is coming soon to Channel 5

JOE
ADAM LITTLE
Joe struggles with his new life, having always grafted at the docks. Little says, "When they fall into this money, it goes to Joe's head. There's a dark side to him, though there is love for his family underlying it all."

MA
JULIE GRAHAM
A former gin smuggler, Ma is not somebody who plays by the rules – and her new fortune changes none of that. Graham says, "Ma has very loose morals, but in a way she is also the backbone of the morality tale in that she refuses to fit in with that world. As far as she's concerned, they're where they are because they were born into that wealth."

MARY
CLAIRE COOPER
Mary is determined to make their new life work and throws herself into it. Cooper says, "Mary's an optimist and sees opportunity in everything. She doesn't shy away from anything. She's the driver."

TINNY
Tinny is Ma's faithful companion. Julie Graham says, "He is actually a she, whose real name is Munchie. She is a beautiful dog but she just wanted to be with her owner all the time. The writers had written, "Tinny sits by the fire" but she wouldn't do that, I had a hold of her all the time."

The TV stories that are getting us talking...

FIVE GO ALL NOSTALGIC

Back in the 90s, Jemima Rooper starred as tomboy George in ITV's adaptation of The Famous Five. Now, she's rejoining Enid Blyton's gang in the BBC revival of the children's stories. Rooper is playing Angela Clutterbuck, a guest staying at a mysterious hotel, when the series returns for two new feature-length episodes.

WOULDN'T YOU LIKE TO KNOW?

What's the story in Balamory? Well, it's that cameras are set to roll again on the Isle of Mull for the CBeebies show, two decades since it last graced our screens. The BBC is hoping that grown-up fans of the original show, which starred Miles Jupp, will introduce their own offspring to the colourful town and its characters when it airs in 2026.

LATE KNIGHT VIEWING

How does Peaky Blinders creator Steven Knight keep up his work rate? Simple, he says: he doesn't watch any television. This can, however, lead to tricky situations: when a producer told him a potential cast member had appeared in Game of Thrones, Knight discovered a nice-sounding show about dragons that his then ten-year-old son wanted to watch might not be as kid-friendly as he'd thought...

IN DEMAND

Baby Reindeer is one of four UK-shot dramas that topped Netflix's latest global viewing charts. Now the streamer has doubled down on creator Richard Gadd with first option on future projects. However, his next series, Lions, which begins production next year, is a BBC/HBO co-production. ROBIN PARKER

TEN QUESTIONS WITH

NICHOLAS LYNDHURST

The veteran UK sitcom star on the joys of LA sunshine and working with his pal Kelsey Grammer on a revived US classic

As lovable "plonker" Rodney in Only Fools and Horses, Nicholas Lyndhurst reached comedy legend status in the UK. His star ascended further thanks to roles in sitcoms like Goodnight Sweetheart, The Two of Us and Butterflies, as well as turns in more serious fare like New Tricks and the comedy drama Rock & Chips. Now, the 63-year-old has traded Peckham for Hollywood, as he returns to play a slightly sozzled Brit abroad in series two of Frasier, the revival of the classic US sitcom starring Kelsey Grammer.

From one classic sitcom to another – how did you end up working on Frasier?

Kelsey and I worked together in Man of La Mancha at the London Coliseum. He was sensational. The Coliseum holds two and a half thousand people. It's the largest stage in London and to watch what Kelsey did eight times a week was just stunning. In rehearsals, he said to me, "If Frasier ever comes back, would you be interested?" My response was, "Duh! Of course." That was in 2019, so it's been bubbling under for quite a long time – I'm very pleased to be part of it.

Did the two of you hit it off immediately?

I'd say so. We come from similar histories, so we have a lot in common.

Frasier is filmed with a live studio audience. Do you get nervous?
I'm quite used to the live audience, so that's not been a problem. But the way Frasier is written and the way it's shot are very different from the UK. The writing team is big here, and the rewrites happen every day. In the UK, if we were shooting in front of an audience on a Sunday, we'd lock in the script on a Friday, at the latest. At that point, you'd have at least a day to figure out what you're doing. Here, the script changes daily. It even changes when the audience is in the building!

How do you cope with that?
You've got to keep on your toes! You can't learn it too early because, personally, I find it difficult to forget a script. You keep one half of your brain going, "That's probably going to change, so don't set it in stone yet."

What sort of feedback do you get from the studio audience?
Well, they love Kelsey. There's a tangible feeling of love towards him in the studio every week – and rightly so. For me, it's great because I can just get on with things. It's lovely to be on a team again.

Your character Alan Cornwall is incredibly English. Are you a Brit consultant for the writers?
Maybe there are times when I will say to an American writer, "That's not how we'd say it." I'll Anglicise some of the dialogue, but very rarely. The writers are good guys. They know what they're doing.

So, have you made the move to Hollywood for good?
No, no, no. I'm just here for the duration of the show. I'll go home to the UK afterwards, but it's absolutely wonderful to be here for now. I'm in my mid-60s – at this stage of my career, I wasn't expecting to be walking through the gates of Paramount Pictures every morning. I probably pinch myself every 20 minutes in this job, because working with Kelsey and working in this building is heartstoppingly wonderful.

How do you like to unwind in Los Angeles?
I love the sunshine, that's been great; I like going to the beach. Apparently, the weather is horrible at home – here, it's sensational. And if you look hard enough, there's some great history to be found here. I've enjoyed going to see where Stan Laurel lived, he was always a hero of mine. Buster Keaton's studio is literally down the road, too. I often think that if it wasn't for Laurel and Keaton, we probably wouldn't be here now. They were pioneers. I very much wanted to pay my respects.

Do you have any more work lined up in LA?
To be honest, this takes up quite a lot of the year. I've got no plans for anything else at the moment.

Do you keep up with television back home in the UK?
I actually haven't watched television for quite a long time. My living room faces the garden, not the TV, because that feels a bit "worky". I watch the news and I watch some documentaries, but otherwise I don't turn on the TV very often. I don't stream, or binge... I know that's not the answer you want to hear – but no!

ADAM TANSWELL

WHAT IT'S LIKE TO...

teach actors an American accent

WORD PERFECT Harry Lawtey and Kit Harington in Industry. Inset right: Rebecca Gausnell

US-born voice coach Rebecca Gausnell is an American-dialect specialist who trained at London's Royal Central School of Speech and Drama. She has coached actors on Emily in Paris, All the Light We Cannot See and the third series of BBC drama Industry, which begins this week.

PRACTICE MAKES PERFECT
If you want to learn an accent, listen to a recording of a native speaker, steal a short phrase, replay it ten times and start to mimic it. Alternate between that "magic phrase" and lines of text.

TALK "AMERICAN" TO ME The accent that comes up the most is called general American, but I've probably coached on all the US accents – Wyoming, New Orleans, California, Southern... The consonants "R" and "L" are the toughest to get right in American English, because they're so radically different from how Brits pronounce them. You have to open your mouth a little bit more.

MOUTH WORKOUT You've got 43 muscles in your face. I always start with a vocal warm-up – some muscles need to be turned "on", while others need to take a break. With an American accent, the tongue sits higher, so we might do exercises to get the tongue up. Americans stress the personal pronoun more. We say, "Well, I really feel..." and Brits might say, "Well, I really feel that..." Americans say "been" as "bin" – it's my biggest pet peeve when that's pronounced wrong on TV!

DON'T MENTION IT When I do my job well, the dialect is invisible. When I read reviews, I don't want it to be mentioned – it's usually only when someone didn't like it.

PREP TIME Sometimes a dialect coach gets hired as a bit of a sticking plaster and it's a last-minute call. Ten hours of prep time with an actor is ideal, but that rarely happens. I do a lot of Zoom sessions, but if I'm on set, I can give the actor a note, or request another take if the accent isn't there. It's also up to me to tell the production if the accent isn't achievable. Maybe the actor could do a different accent – or even use their own if it isn't integral to the storyline.

REPORT THE NEWS, DON'T MAKE IT

Following the Huw Edwards case, there are essential "learnings" for the BBC, says Mark Lawson

In an alternative universe, Huw Edwards, the £475,000-a-year lead BBC news anchor, is beginning his prep before flying to Washington DC for the election of the 47th US President. His schedule might also include meetings over the events to mark the birth centenary of Queen Elizabeth II in the BBC schedules of April 2026.

In the real world, he will never work on TV again. On 16 September, Edwards led the BBC1 10pm News, not as a presenter but as a headline – for his six-month sentence, suspended for two years, over possession of child sexual abuse imagery. Earlier appearances in the 63-year-old's unwanted peak-time box set include suspension (after reports in The Sun of unrelated and non-criminal instances of paying a teenager money for sexualised images), then resignation from the BBC, arrest and his guilty plea.

Immediate social media reaction suggested that his sentence was too short and that BBC director-general Tim Davie should resign/be sacked over having continued to pay Edwards while he was suspended or under arrest.

Let's defer to legal and HR specialists on this. The sentence is in line with the average for such a first offence; courts can't apply a fame tax. And employment law makes it perilous to fire someone on suspicion; if Edwards had been exonerated, Davie might have had to pay out millions (from licence fee-payers) in compensation.

However, one of the DG's favourite pieces of corporate jargon is "learnings" (the noun previously known as "lessons"). And here are some from this case:

DOWNFALL
Clive Myrie reporting after Huw Edwards's sentencing

'Edwards had too much BBC airtime – nobody should dominate'

• Never again should one person so dominate BBC schedules. Edwards had too much airtime. His blameless predecessor, David Dimbleby, only did elections, royal ceremonies and a weekly Question Time. Sharing out the job (Laura Kuenssberg, Clive Myrie, Kirsty Young, Mishal Husain) improves the coverage and leaves smaller potential holes.

• It is alarming that even despite the cases of Jimmy Savile and Rolf Harris the BBC did not respond adequately to the parents of The Sun's reported complainant and had to apologise formally to them months later.

• After the news presenter's guilty plea, Davie emailed all staff referring to the "shocking news about Huw Edwards, and other stories concerning some of our high-profile shows". The sub-clause seemed to refer to presenter Jermaine Jenas, and Strictly Come Dancing pros Giovanni Pernice and Graziano Di Prima, who left the BBC after internal – and at the time of going to press unpublished – investigations into workplace conduct issues that would never merit police attention. (It is not clear if Davie also knew then about Jay Blades, host of The Repair Shop, who will enter a plea at Worcester Crown Court next month to a charge of controlling and coercive behaviour against his estranged wife.) But, by promising to "make the BBC a great place to work", the DG seemed to risk conflating convicted criminal sex offences with workplace complaints. This seems risky. The relative severity of – and proportional punishment for – each individual case should be recognised.

• Though unrelated, The Sun's 2023 stories identified complexities in Edwards's mental state and lifestyle. Many – inside and outside the BBC – dismissed this detail because it came from a Murdoch-owned tabloid. After the first Sun story, Emily Maitlis and Jon Sopel suggested, on their News Agents podcast, that the initial allegations should have been reported to HR rather than turned into a news story.

While these allegations were lesser than the later ones, there would have been more editorial caution on a formal broadcast – and such rules should sometimes apply to podcasts. But a big learning for all the liberal media is that a story from such a source can still be correct, important and culture-changing.

‘THERE ARE LOTS OF IRRITATING THINGS AND I LIKE THEM’

Subtitles, new versions of Cluedo, mint KitKats, loud social gatherings… David Mitchell takes delightful exception to them all

THE RT INTERVIEW BY GINNY DOUGARY

EXCLUSIVELY PHOTOGRAPHED FOR RADIO TIMES BY ROBERT WILSON

HMU ARTIST: VICTORIA BARNES; SET DESIGN: PROPPED UP; STYLIST: NATALIE READ
STYLING CREDITS: SUIT GRESHAM BLAKE; SHIRT, M&S; TIE, ASOS; TIE PIN, NEXT

Imagine the exhilaration of having a one-man comedy show performed for you as the only VIP guest. Not a tiresome, "wacky", trying-too-hard, parade-of-funny-voices performance, not even a conscious performance, either – more a gentle glide into a delicious rant here, a quietly witty observation there and an effortless scattering of bons mots everywhere.

David Mitchell – the actor, writer, comedian, sometime Observer columnist, panel and quiz show host and guest – starts by acknowledging that, as in his new BBC series Ludwig, he has been in the fortunate, audition-free position of having all of his roles created for him. "It's never happened as directly before," he says, "but every major part I've played before has been written for me.

"Peep Show was written for me and Rob [Webb], and then when Ben Elton wrote Upstart Crow [with Mitchell as Shakespeare], he sent the script to the BBC and initially said, 'I'm looking for a younger David Mitchell.'" We both laugh, a touch ruefully... tempus fugit, and all that. "But with make-up and figuring that in the 16th century by the time you were 30, you looked like you were 50, it was fine."

Mitchell's instinctive brake if he feels he's steering too close to self-serving waters is humour: "It's the best way of being cast. I would advise it to all actors. If they've got you in mind already, you're ahead of the pack, because no one is going to be as much like you as you are."

'I'm embarrassed by how few books I've read'

We move onto the co-creator and writer (with Sam Bain) of Peep Show, Jesse Armstrong, and his more recent global hit series all about the appalling behaviour at the heart of an American media empire family, Succession. Both shows share great writing but could hardly be more different, could they?

"It's definitely there in the whole sense of the futility and laughability of human endeavour," Mitchell observes. "What he's had the imagination to create is a world where you realise these people in positions of enormous power and influence are just like the people in the flat in Croydon who can't get their relationships right.

"People in positions of power may in general have above-average intelligence, but they're still flawed, feeble, self-interested, disappointing humans, a lot of the time. I think taking the warm but also contemptuous view of humanity that he has in Peep Show, and putting that on the huge stage of these incredibly wealthy, entitled people was brilliant. So there is a continuity thread. And obviously the dialogue – and he ▷

MADE TO MEASURE

'I'd love to have been in Succession... I just worry I'd look British and st'

◁ wrote a lot of it – is superb throughout."

Did he want a part in Succession? "I probably wouldn't have said no." A quick pivot away for ironic distance... "It would have been amazing to have been in Succession but I couldn't have played any of the parts better than the people in it, unfortunately. You don't look at any of those actors and think, 'Oh, they've dropped the ball there.' I always worry I'd look British and st in that context."

John "Ludwig" Taylor – Mitchell's new character – is a solitary puzzle-setter whose identical twin brother James, a sociable family man and DCI in Cambridge's Major Investigations Team, has gone missing. James's wife, Lucy (Anna Maxwell-Martin), a friend of the twins since childhood, has summoned John to assume the identity of his brother and – highly challenging for anyone, let alone a reclusive oddball – go into the office police headquarters to solve the mystery. The problem for Lucy is that Ludwig (John's chosen nom de plume after his favourite composer since childhood) can't help but solve murders in each episode, using puzzles, which distracts him from the job at hand.

On set he will do a crossword when waiting – "although not on Ludwig," a giggle, "because it would be a bit like a busman's holiday."

What personality traits does he share with his character? "I think the fundamental thing is that both he and I are risk-averse. In lots of ways I am a shy, introverted person. But I'm also a professional performer and that's a very extrovert thing to do. However, there is a side of me that fully empathises with the life John wants [as a hermit]. But it wouldn't make me happy and I suspect that means I'm not a real introvert.

"A lot of performers have that oscillation between tremendous self-confidence and tremendous self-loathing. The self-loathing is the thing to emphasise when you're talking about yourself because the self-confidence sounds unbearable. So sometimes I feel like I've failed myself and I want to do better, but also sometimes I feel, 'That was amazing! They all clapped!'"

He is sweetly delighted when I confess that my wife and I love "soft murder" – "That's a great phrase," he says, adding slightly dreamily, "soft murder is 'fun' murder, 'puzzle' murder, not traumatising 'a child has disappeared' murder." Yes, Miss Marple, Midsomer Murders, Death in Paradise... "Scandi murder, though, that's hard."

One of the appealing things about Mitchell is that his self-deprecation is so recognisable and authentic. He jokes several times that he would like to present an image of himself as someone different to who he is – the fantasy Mitchell is a bien-pensant intellectual who always has a novel on the go (he loves reading but is slow at it; "I'm embarrassed by how few books I've read"), a devoted theatre-goer whose taste in cinema is intense and foreign.

When I say he should watch the Professor T detective series in the original (Belgian) before our one starring Ben Miller (also excellent), his wary response is: "But it's subtitles, isn't it?" Is that a problem? "It's... not an advantage. It's not a deal breaker, but it just means you can't watch it while you're eating dinner because if you look down...

"I know I ought to love subtitles and I would like to project myself as 'That is where I am in the culture' – somebody who loves nothing more than a wonderful piece of foreign language cinema. And what a terrible disadvantage it is for it to be in our horrible vernacular. So officially I am on Team Subtitle, but I just find it slightly impractical, not being able to understand what they're fing saying."

His parents Ian and Kathy are still alive and Mitchell, who turned 50 this summer, recalls his childhood with an amused affection. He has a brother Daniel, younger by seven years, almost the same gap as that between his daughters – Barbara, born in 2015, and June Violet in October last year – with Victoria Coren of Only Connect fame.

The Mitchells Senior were hotel managers for Trusthouse Forte and it's part of their family folklore that David, as a baby, would be put in a large cupboard where the cleaning equipment was kept because in those days there was also a telephone there: "You could get a baby-minding service from the reception, but what you did was leave your phone off the hook and the person in reception would hear if the baby cried.

"Not something that today would be considered sufficiently safe. And, anyway, the family mythology is that I was in this cleaning cupboard and that my first word was 'Hoover'."

PLAYERS Victoria Coren Mitchell is a poker ace, while husband David prefers a good game of Cluedo

As he grew older, his parents moved to the Oxford suburb of Headington to lecture in hotel management at what was then Oxford Polytechnic – "I grew up in the house my parents still live in. They always described it as: 'We stopped managing hotels to be there for you.' But my dad found it quite stressful, and my mum I think always missed it."

FROM CHILDHOOD ON, he has always been fascinated by murder stories – the Joan Hickson Miss Marples, David Suchet's Poirot, Holmes – both Basil Rathbone and Jeremy Brett. "Growing up in Oxford, of course we loved watching Inspector Morse – it was one of the last programmes I watched with my parents as a teenager. These shows, such as Only Murders in the Building, are my complete comfort zone for television."

He reminisces about family holidays in Brittany, getting the ferry from Portsmouth to Cherbourg to stay in a static caravan, later graduating to gites. An abiding memory is of the family in the car, he and his baby brother listening to a tape of Bernard Cribbins reading an abridged version of Swallows and Amazons.

"I remember the hot car, the long journey and this tape that we'd listen to again and again to the extent that Daniel could do the tune of the words. It would go 'Swallows and Amazons by Arthur Ransome' [he recites in a bright RP voice] and he would go, with the exact same intonation, 'Swarrrann and Aranaaans by Artharrransaan.' It was adorable."

A typical Coren Mitchell family activity at the moment is playing Cluedo. "It's brilliant! We've started playing it a lot with the eldest – the youngest is not quite up to it yet but will hopefully be persuaded to play in her little fenced-off zone."

He doesn't like the way there have been efforts to modernise the game – "It was set in an idealised 1930s country house murder scenario – the golden age of crime. So, to bring it up to date is to miss the point."

Does it irritate him a lot? "Yes, I don't think they understand the appeal of the product they're trying to 'improve' and that's often the way. I don't approve of mint KitKats, either."

Oooh, who doesn't love a Mitchell irritability jag.

"There are lots of irritating things and I quite like them," he says. "I've always found, as somebody who tries to find something funny to say, that a lot of that comes from things that irritate me."

Can he give me some more? "Well, you say 'give me' – that's like doing the prep for an episode of Room 101. What you're asking for is dense comic ▷ ◁ material. Blimey, if I could do it that quickly I'd be touring in a one-man show!"

I still remember Tracey Emin's two bugbears: clowns and cocaine. "Well, I've never had cocaine so I don't think it would be fair of me to speak ill of it," – which may be just the funniest line in more than four decades of interviewing – "for all I know, it's great!"

He settles on the "Cluedo thing", before – boom – he lands on one and takes off on a magnificent rant…

"I know I'm not going to sound young when I say this, but it has always irritated me that a large number of social gatherings – when the entire purpose of them is for people to chat – are drowned out by music.

"Now, I understand there are social gatherings where a key part is to dance. And I'm fine with that – and the music needs to be loud for that. But you go to parties and there's no dancefloor, no one is going to dance, it would be absurd to dance, it's just about chatting and you can't hear a thing. Now that, I think, is so unnecessary and I don't understand it. I mean, you must be familiar with this?

"It's quite often, like, a BBC drinks do. They've given the organisation to someone who organises such events and people like that think what people want is to be drowned out by music all the time. Because they come from a different milieu than the middle-aged people who are coming out generally to have a chat. I'm not sure it would be worthy of the one-man show, it might not be funny enough, but it's definitely exquisitely annoying."

QUIET MAN
Mitchell prefers to party without loud music – so he can chat

'One thing I love about Victoria is – I think she really loves me...'

Do millennials annoy him? "I would try not, in any circumstances – particularly in an interview, to dismiss a whole generation. I just don't know if that's a way to push DVDs. Not that millennials buy DVDs [which he still watches]. But it does feel, for the first time in a while," he concedes, "that there is a generational divide."

The back story to David and Victoria's marriage in 2012 is quite well known. They met at a party, he was instantly smitten, but she, alas, chose Another Suitor, leaving him – a man who likes nothing more than to amuse – pining for three long years of melancholia. But eventually Victoria was ready for him and – so far so good, a happy ending.

We must assume that he does believe, in his case, in love at first sight? "Oh yes, but the complication there is that I think I met her briefly several years earlier."

Really? "Victoria disputes that, and then she gets irritated with me for not having fallen in love with her on the first occasion when we met – when I say we met," he corrects himself.

As well as being a quiz show presenter, Coren Mitchell is a poker champion and David accompanied her to big and small poker tournaments – the first one in Nottingham and another in a place he least expected to go, Las Vegas – which he, also unexpectedly, completely fell for.

He's extremely proud that his wife is the first woman to have won the European Poker Tournament and is the only person – man or woman – at this point to have won two. Mitchell has over the years been notably uxorious about his wife. Does he believe there is a lover and a lovee in any relationship and if so, is he the former?

"Oh, I don't think so. One of the things I love about her is – I think she really loves me. For a relationship to carry on and succeed, it's got to be mutual.

"She's obviously my favourite person in the world and very bright, but if I were to try and define it more, the thing I find incredibly attractive is that she has the intellectual self-confidence not to project her self-confidence all the time.

"This is sort of vital as to why we've got a good marriage – she thinks intelligence should primarily be used for jokes. And I completely agree with that."

If I were to interview Victoria, would she speak about him with a similar heartfelt eloquence? "The thing about it is – in an interview people often ask about her. And when I'm asked about her, I'm going to say that I love her and she's amazing. But I wouldn't have brought her up. And I don't mean that disrespectfully. She's often on my mind. At the same time, I think I have a very happy marriage to a wonderful person, but I don't consider that to be of broader interest.

"And so I always feel in this situation that I don't want to be coy and say, 'I refuse to discuss my wife – let's talk about scene 15, it's such a wonderful puzzle.' But at the same time, by answering the implication can be that, 'He can't stop going on about his wife – OK. You like your wife. Get over it.'"

David Mitchell – the one-man show on tour? He should definitely do it.

‘STEALING DIAMONDS WAS MY DRUG’

Joan Hannington was one of the UK’s most notorious jewel thieves. Anna Symon brings her powerful story to the screen and describes meeting her

LEADING LADIES

GETTY

Ah, the glamorous 1980s. Shoulder pads, high heels, big hair, Madonna, Princess Diana. A time of opportunity, if you were a woman who wanted to make it – and Joan Hannington knew all about opportunity.

Stealing cars, faking passports, swallowing loose diamonds to sell on the black market, in and out of prison; nothing, it seems, was off limits for Joan Hannington. Now in her late 60s, she lives quietly on the English south coast with her dogs, but her considerably unquiet story has been turned into a beguiling six-part series for ITV, starring Sophie Turner.

Writer Anna Symon was given the task of transforming Hannington’s memoir, I Am What I Am: The True Story of Britain’s Most Notorious Jewel Thief, for the screen. “I was so intrigued by her as a character,” says Symon. “Strong, fierce, but a vulnerable woman with a terrible back story that scarred her deeply. She was very glamorous and beautiful, and used her feminine wiles, shall we say, to achieve her crimes.”

This once-dangerous woman needed to agree to Symon’s script. “I met her in a café in north London,” explains the writer, who also adapted The Essex Serpent starring Tom Hiddleston and actor Ruth Wilson’s real-life family drama, Mrs Wilson.

> ‘Beneath the fur coats and diamonds was a vulnerable person’

“It was terrifying. Although she was charming, it was clear she knew how to look after herself. You knew she was someone not to mess with. And she said, quite clearly, ‘I don’t want you to tell my story unless you include what I went through as a child.’ She was very severely beaten by her father. Amid all the glamour of fur coats and diamonds, there was this vulnerable person underneath.”

Hannington gave Symon a unique chance to re-create London’s dangerous, gangland world of fake identities and stolen jewels – but with a woman, for once, at the helm. Quite a different proposition. “We hold female characters on TV to a higher standard; we have to decide whether we root for Joan, in a way that I don’t think would be asked of a male character,” observes Symon. “We have never seen the inside story of a female criminal unless it’s Myra Hindley or an invention, like Villanelle in Killing Eve. Joan grew up with nothing and was constantly let down by men. At the same time, she didn’t want to be seen as a victim.”

Indeed, from the first episode, when we see Hannington speeding down the motorway in a stolen Triumph TR7, this is clearly a ▷

45 YEARS EXPLORING THE WORLD SINCE 1978

SAFE SPACE
Sophie Turner as Joan with Mia Millichamp-Long as her daughter Kelly

◁ woman with agency. "She took responsibility. She got a buzz from being good at stealing," explains Symon. "As she says, 'Stealing diamonds was my crack cocaine.'"

Did Symon ever worry that the series, with what Hannington describes as the "victimless" offence of stealing jewels, might glamorise crime? "Of course, we talked about this during the process. We're not inviting mimics because things have changed, you can't switch rings in jewellery shops now. Shoplifting was a lot easier then. No cameras in stores, no mobile phones. It was an easier time to be a thief.

"I also think as viewers carry on with the series and see how the story develops, it becomes less glamorous. Reality catches up with Joan. It doesn't encourage people to go down a criminal path." Although, Symon admits, there is an unavoidable shimmer to the world in which Joan Hannington thrived. "The glamour was an attraction for her. She loved having lovely clothes and wearing jewels."

> 'Joan came on set and has watched the series. She sobbed through a lot of it'

Sophie Turner is easily as glamorous as Hannington was, but plays the role with sensitivity under the lashings of make-up. You believe that Hannington loves her daughter Kelly; you believe that she wants a better life for her child. "Sophie is extraordinary," says Symon of her leading lady, who got her first television role at the age of 14, when she was cast as Game of Thrones' Sansa Stark. For the past few years Turner has rarely been out of the papers, thanks to a messy divorce and custody wrangle for her two small children with singer Joe Jonas.

"When I wrote the series, we didn't have anyone in mind," Symon continues. "She sent us a self-recorded tape; when the director and I saw it, it blew our socks off! We were so confident in her right from the start." As, it seems, was Hannington herself. "They [Hannington and Turner] met before we started filming," says Symon. "Joan then came on set and she's now watched all the episodes. She sobbed through quite a lot of it. But she's proud. I felt a real responsibility to ensure she was truthfully represented." ROSIE MILLARD

UNMISSABLE NEW RADIO SERIES

WOMEN BEHAVING BADLY

Lucy Worsley is fascinated by historic female criminals

Your new radio series, Lady Swindlers, is a follow-up to your Lady Killers series – have you ever done anything illicit yourself?
If you're asking whether I have a criminal record, then the answer is no! But I did once steal an easel from London's Somerset House. We were filming a pair of paintings there and we needed two easels, but we only had one. I had seen some in the restaurant, so I went and "borrowed" one. The next thing I know, the security guard's radio crackled and a voice said, "A blonde woman has just stolen an easel from the restaurant, do you know where she is?" I have never done anything like that ever again! And yes, I returned it.

You're best known for your TV work; why did you choose to make this for radio?
We are able to cover stories which would never get made on TV because they're not mainstream. This isn't about kings and queens, it's about individual women who nobody has ever heard about.

Each episode deals with an extraordinary woman – from 1920s shoplifter Alice Diamond to Mary Baker, who, in 1817, pretended to be the fictional Princess Caraboo from a far-off island kingdom...
My Lady Swindlers all do something that they aren't expected to do. All swindlers operate with stereotypes – you expect one thing, you get another. Perhaps there's a thing about looking meek and unthreatening that women use to their advantage. One of our subjects is Madame Rachel. Part of the reason she was pilloried was not so much about her crimes, but her transgression of succeeding in the male world of business.

Why was having an all-female team on the series so important to you?
In "true crime" shows, often the woman is either dead, or running through woods, naked, with a killer on her trail. We thought it would be fun to flip that and have women experts doing the talking. Our in-house historian is Professor Rosalind Crone of the Open University, who knows everything about prisons. We then have Professor Lorraine Gamman of Central Saint Martin's, who is founder of the Design Against Crime Research Lab, which helps protect shops against shoplifting, for example. She is so fabulous! She freely admits her father was a thief. Speaking to her makes me realise I live in a middle-class bubble and there are areas of the world I don't know.

You also had an all-female team for Lady Killers. Has this been commented on?
Absolutely, yes. One complaint we got was from someone who wrote in and said, "Where is the balance? All these experts are female! What's gone wrong?" From a genuine person!

What was your response?
What's gone wrong is centuries of patriarchy! I own the fact that we use women who are in bad places as a way in, but we do this with a particularly female gaze and tell these stories as feminists. It gives us confidence to look for details and attitudes, which can help us learn to live our own lives better today. One of the prevalent attitudes today is that somehow, we are better than people of the past. Actually, the answer is that no, we are not.

Do we look at female criminals using a different moral scale?
Yes, I think we possibly do – and possibly should. You can't always condone what these criminals did, but you can see why they did it. Given that they are living in a world which is made by and for men, they come from a position of the underdog.

Do you think women ought to be given custodial sentences?
I'd say the consensus of experts is that putting a woman into prison for a short sentence is very damaging. And that any punishment is dwarfed by the damage done to her children, to her job, to her accommodation, to the wider community. RM

In search of Nicola

Following Nicola Bulley's disappearance, social media "sleuths" added to her family's agony. Now they want to tell her story...

MISSING PERSON
Locals with placards lined the streets of St Michael's on Wyre

For 23 days during her disappearance at the start of last year, the loved ones of Nicola Bulley faced a social media onslaught. Self-appointed "sleuths" arrived in their neighbourhood, not only scouring gardens and private land around the riverside path where she was last seen, but digging for her body, while broadcasting themselves live on TikTok.

Paul Ansell, Nicola's frantic partner of 12 years and the father of her children, desperately hoped she'd walk through their front door. The 45-year-old had not returned home after dropping their two daughters, then aged nine and six, at school in the village of St Michael's on Wyre and going on her usual riverside dog walk.

Lancashire Police believed that Nicola – whose phone was found on a bench, still connected to a work call, with her springer spaniel Willow close by – had fallen into the river. But with no evidence of suspicious activity or third party involvement and extensive searches involving divers, helicopters, sniffer dogs and drones finding nothing, a vacuum ensued.

Thousands of social media commentators notched up clicks by sharing baseless theories. Paul was accused by TikTokers, who chose to ignore every established fact, of murdering her. While desperate for news of Nicola and trying to care for his two children amid their mother's disappearance on 27 January 2023, he received direct abuse on his phone.

Now Paul, along with Nicola's heartbroken parents Ernie and Dot, and her sister Louise Cunningham, have participated in a moving documentary, The Search for Nicola Bulley, which takes viewers through the period in which her family desperately waited for news before her body was finally found.

"We wanted to do this for Nikki," say the family in a collective statement. "Only we can speak about her as a mummy, partner, daughter and sister... Our sole aim is to ensure Nikki has the legacy she deserves."

"The family tell their story in their own words, unfiltered," says director Rachel Lob-levyt. "So much of what happened to them was about the exposure of their lives to the public." Have they seen the film? "We had a viewing with the family. It was difficult – obviously emotional for them. They feel the documentary really honours their experience, and honours Nikki.

"At the time she went missing, Paul was subject to a really difficult level of scrutiny. The idea of putting himself back in the public eye is nerve-racking but ultimately, he thought it the right thing to do. The social media sleuths felt entitled to say whatever they wanted. In the past we'd have talked about these things in the pub, whereas now people broadcast it online and everything is accelerated. Opinion takes on similar weight to verified information."

With the public's fascination with Nicola having added to the family's agony, Lob-levyt acknowledges it's reasonable to ask how they hope viewers of the documentary will differ from those who followed every move on social media at the time of her disappearance. "That's a good question," she says. "What hasn't been done is people listening to the family, and to some extent the police, the media and the social media commentators. It's only when you hear what that was really like that you understand what happened, and can learn from it."

> 'Our sole aim is to ensure Nikki has the legacy she deserves'

TOGETHER
Nicola Bulley and Paul Ansell were partners for 12 years

GETTY; DAILY EXPRESS

While the investigation was ongoing, the police's poor media communication – including revealing private details of Nicola's struggles with perimenopause and alcohol – only fuelled fevered speculation.

Even when her body was eventually found a mile downstream on 19 February, members of the public (not journalists) crossed police cordons to take photos of her. One man was arrested after videoing the removal of her body from the river, to use on his social media.

The inquest in June last year found that Nicola died from drowning as a result of cold water shock, after accidentally falling in the river. While the frenzy abated, some have continued to perpetuate theories online.

The documentary also features interviews with some social media commentators, to "fully understand why events took the course they did," says Lob-levyt. But what shines through the programme is love, everyone's love for Nicola, and the love shared between Paul, Nicola's parents and her sister.

"I met them around a dozen times and it was so apparent from the start that they really care for him," says Lob-levyt. "Looking after their girls is a huge focus of Paul's life now, with the support of Ernie, Dot and Louise. He's coping. There will always be sadness in their lives because of her loss. But the care and warmth they give each other have created strength, which has got them through this time." KATE BATTERSBY

MYTHS AND LEGENDS

This Country's Charlie Cooper now delves deep into UK folklore

Rural myths and legends have always bewitched Charlie Cooper. "I'm a country bumpkin at heart," the writer and actor laughs from his cottage in Gloucestershire. "I love history and nature – and folklore, in all its forms, just combines those things."

There weren't any mythical beasts or pagan sacrifices in This Country, the pastoral sitcom he co-created and starred in with his sister Daisy May Cooper, but there's definitely some connective tissue between that show and his latest documentary series for BBC3. Charlie Cooper's Myth Country (get it?) sees the 35-year-old Bafta-winner exploring some of the UK's more eccentric myths and legends, from Black Shuck, a giant dog that's said to roam the hills of East Anglia, to UFOs over Wiltshire.

Though he'd always had an interest in all things folkloric, Cooper reveals that it was the making of This Country that really fuelled his passion for these agrarian myths. "I came across so many peculiar rituals and traditions, and it just opened my eyes to a whole new world," he says. "We were really analysing our upbringing and the characters around us and the stuff we did, and that's all folklore, really."

For this series the actor travels the UK in his converted AA camper van to visit, in his words, "weird little historical places". The documentary, made up of three half-hour episodes, is clearly a labour of love for the actor, and he's an endearingly wide-eyed host, talking to everyone from Black Shuck eye-witnesses to crop circle devotees. Anyone, he says, "with a strong connection to our pagan past".

It's a timely series. In recent years, there's been an explosion of folk horror movies and TV dramas, stories that plug into ancient traditions and the mystery and menace of the British countryside. Cooper believes this resurgence of interest in folklore and our far-away past has a lot to do with us wanting to break free from an increasingly hurried and noisy world.

"Everything's so hyper-connected now and we spend most hours indoors watching screens," he says. "We've disconnected from our environment, and folklore helps us go back to what it means to be human. We're so lucky to live in a country that's so rich in history, and there are so many weird little folk traditions and rituals. And if this encourages people to visit the places we went to, I'd love that."

There's a scene in the opening episode where Cooper attempts to film a meeting of the Norfolk Folklore Society. The group is wary at first, but soon charmed by Cooper's unfeigned passion, and the show itself approaches all these stories with an open mind, however fanciful or far-fetched.

"There have probably been TV crews that have taken advantage and shown these people as cranks and nutters," Cooper admits. "But I think we do live in a world where, because there is such a folk revival, we're talking about paranormal stuff more. So it feels like we've created more of a safe space in recent years for different voices. With this series, we didn't want it to be where you got loads of celebrity friends on board and you go to weird, haunted places – I want it to be authentic."

> 'TV has shown these people as cranks, but there's a folk revival'

That said, Cooper's famous sibling Daisy May does pop up, gently poking fun at her brother over Zoom. It may not be the full Cooper reunion This Country fans have been waiting for, but Charlie does let slip that he and his sister do have another project in the offing.

"I can't talk about it too much, but it'll be an unscripted thing," he teases. "It's a good way of getting back to working together again. What's nice, since This Country finished, is that now we have a relationship outside of work. She had a baby a few months ago, so we go around to hers every Sunday for a roast, and the kids play together. It's nice not having that external pressure. We're not talking about work, we're talking about stupid stuff, and I really cherish that."

But what of This Country itself? Though the Cotswolds-set mockumentary aired its last episode in 2020, it didn't definitively close the door on cousins Kerry and Kurtan Mucklowe.

"You can never say never," Cooper says now. "It often crosses my mind; what Kurtan would be doing now. What would they have done during Covid? Would he be a big germaphobe now? Kurtan is such a big part of me, and as I've had two kids since This Country ended, I'm always wondering what he would be like as a dad. It would be criminal not to revisit it."

FOOTBALL

MONEY CAN'T BUY ME LOVE...

And it only partly explains why the Blues and the Magpies are flying high, says Simon Barnes

SUCCESS Erling Haaland celebrates the 2023 Uefa Super Cup win with City chairman Khaldoon Al Mubarak

SIGNING Newcastle chairman Yasir Al-Rumayyan with manager Eddie Howe

It's not easy to be calm and rational about football; that's not what it's for. There's surely scope for sane, balanced views about the game, but somehow they never get expressed.

You can meet football with kneejerk cynicism: it's all about money these days. Or you can actually watch a match and get sucked in by the beauty of the action. Wow! Another thumper for Erling Haaland, as Manchester City set ever loftier standards of excellence. Pow! A wonderful winner from Harvey Barnes (great surname) as Newcastle United come from behind to win at Wolves.

City travel to Newcastle for the Sportswashing Derby on Saturday – so-called by critics of how Big Money from oil-rich countries has been used to give their reputations a spin cycle. City have been owned by the Abu Dhabi United Group since 2008; and Newcastle controlled by a consortium led by Saudi Arabia's Public Investment Fund, majority shareholder since 2021. It's a long way from the days when football clubs were owned by the local brewing family, but the principle's the same. The brewers hoped to be well thought of by potential customers through association with a beloved club; oil-rich countries are also seeking love – though I'm not sure if Barnes's goal made any of us think, "Good old Saudis, never mind their human rights record while we get football like that."

> 'Football is about goals and passes, not money and politics'

Such international involvement brings money and with it – if wisely managed – greater success. Newcastle failed to win any of their first 14 matches in the 2021/2 season, making them relegation certainties – then the Saudis moved in, they finished 11th and now they're improving fast.

Money! Manchester City are currently facing 115 charges of contravening the Premier League's Financial Fair Play rules, all of them denied. Those with a taste for cynicism – or who support rival clubs – will be inclined to say that that explains why they've won six of the past seven Premier League titles.

It doesn't, of course. Manchester United, Liverpool, Tottenham Hotspur, Chelsea and Arsenal are, like City, among the top ten richest football clubs in the world – and none of them is currently even close to having City's dominance. It's possible, then, that money isn't the entire explanation for City's success.

The trouble with Big Money is that it makes ordinary people feel sick and dizzy. Trying to grasp the concept of a leveraged takeover is like trying to explain the theory of general relativity. I mean, how can you buy a football club by borrowing the money you need from the club you're buying? But that's what happened when the Glazers took over Manchester United in 2005 – the club carries a debt of £650 million while, until last year, the club paid the Glazers dividends. I'm sure that's fair play, if only I were smart enough to understand.

Financial Fair Play regulations were introduced in 2009 to stop clubs spending money they didn't have. But FFP can also be used to stop clubs operating the sugar daddy system – clubs like Chelsea when Roman Abramovich owned them. In other words, established clubs with large assured incomes now have some kind of protection against ambitious upstarts. The status has a better chance of remaining quo.

And while all this is sordid enough to bring out the cynic in us all, it still ends up with football, which, unlike finance, can be inspirational: a jinking run from Newcastle forward Anthony Gordon; a sublime cross from Manchester City midfielder Kevin de Bruyne; goalkeepers Nick Pope and Ederson turning the course of a match with a spectacular save.

In football, the only truth lies in the action. We don't think better of dodgy regimes because we like football, any more than we liked the dodgy beer the previous club owners tried to sell us. Football is about players, not owners. It's about goals and passes and tackles and headers off the line, not money and politics.

And here's a fact that lawyers, owners, financiers and sports administrators tend to overlook: football is about competition. If you haven't got brilliant rivals, your own brilliance has no meaning. You depend on the brilliance of your rivals for a brilliant match that the world longs to see. Perhaps Newcastle United and Manchester City will supply that brilliance on Saturday.

CAROLINE FROST

LIFE BEFORE SMARTPHONES... Ceefax was the only way of keeping up to date in the 80s

REMOTE ACCESS

Fifty years ago, the Ceefax service was the place for breaking news

Why did we ever think we needed the internet? A screen that we could dial up to get all the latest football scores, weather forecasts, news headlines and even the recipe of the day? It was already there at our fingertips, courtesy of BBC Ceefax, the world's first teletext service, which arrived 50 years ago this week.

It was born of a glorious accident. Back in 1974, BBC broadcast engineers tasked with working out how to create subtitles on screen discovered that "spare lines" at the top of the picture could be used to transmit words or numbers. On 23 September, Ceefax, a service to let us "see facts" – well, of course! – was launched, providing an instant news service while viewers waited for the next bulletin.

For most of the population without teletext-enabled sets, it wasn't until March 1980 that the fun really began, when the BBC began airing a selection of pages before the start of programming each day. From then on, everything from travel updates, including a long list of roadworks, to overseas weather, share prices, music reviews and Delia Smith's latest dish, turned up on page numbers forever remembered: page 101 for news headlines, 301 for sports stories, 500 for entertainment and, of course, the TV guide on 606 – and 888 for lyrics to sing along to Top of the Pops. All this to the sound of an upbeat bossa nova performed by an overseas artist deliberately cheaper to broadcast than Ronnie Hazlehurst. Purists, including my pal in the Test Card Circle, collected and catalogued these tunes, and attended conventions for some serious horse-trading over CDs. Disappointingly for them, the music got toned down after 1982, when editors realised an Argentine tango might not be quite the most fitting soundtrack for news of the Belgrano's sinking.

The user experience could be a challenge. The "hold" button was clearly a godsend for reading football scores and the like, until you "unheld". You might have stayed on page 4, but Ceefax had moved on – a bit of a bind when you arrived at page 10 out of 27, and had to wait for the carousel to come back round to page 5. Thus did many a school holiday pass. Those tasked with creating the content didn't have it any easier. Everyone from the BBC travel unit to the Met Office had a shift updating the pages, where the rules were legion: sports reports had to be just four paragraphs long, headlines of exactly 33 characters. One former weatherman tells me of the travails of trying to build a map of the British Isles using Ceefax's distinctive pointillist pixels: "By the time you'd fitted in the temperature as well, you'd lost half the Devon coastline."

The 1990s saw more than 20 million viewers use the service at least once a week. National Lottery winners learnt their lives had changed by checking the numbers, QPR football manager Bruce Rioch discovered he'd been sacked when Ceefax told him, and Prime Minister John Major tapped into the cricket scores between meetings in Downing Street. For 38 years, the service provided an invaluable window onto the world, especially via the latest newsflash (page 150) – the equivalent of today's breaking news alerts on smartphones, except back then we had to seek it out, which was rather like phoning up the TV at our convenience. How civilised.

Like all good things, Ceefax gradually came to an end, finally closing its doors in 2012. The good news is that you can still find the BBC text service, via the red button, on some TV sets that are older than 2019, following a viewer protest, including in RT's Feedback pages – and also find Ceefax on YouTube via one tireless enthusiast's efforts to replicate it in the present day.

For others, the 50th anniversary is a chance to remember it fondly. My Test Card Circle friend sums it up: "There was something for everyone. Whatever else was going on in your life, you could turn on your telly, lose yourself and feel connected."

Sounds like they should bring it back.

UNWAVERING SUPPORT
Nick (Kit Connor) helps Charlie (Joe Locke) through the hard times

ALLSTAR/OPEN ROAD FILMS; ALLSTAR/FOCUS FEATURES

DRAMA

Heartstopper Series 3 available on Netflix from Thursday

The latest run of the rites-of-passage drama goes to some dark places, particularly when it comes to the eating disorder affecting Charlie (Joe Locke), but what's reassuring about this series is that it never loses a sense of hope.

Contrast that with a soap, where the same subject matter might well be tackled; there, it would be geared towards melodramatic excess, and characters would inevitably be left in a state of despair for the sake of a cliffhanger. Here on Heartstopper, though, the support that Charlie receives from both his peers and boyfriend Nick (Kit Connor) is a constant companion on his emotional journey. Friendship rather than friction is usually in focus.

Granted, some may see this storytelling approach as being overly sweet. And OK, these actors now look a little too old to be playing 16- and 17-year-olds. But in choosing to consistently spotlight teenagers at their empathetic best rather than their self-centred worst, this unwaveringly optimistic show does remain kind of unique. DAVID BROWN

SCI-FI ADVENTURE

Uglies ★★★ 12

Available now

Beauty is the drug of the masses in the dystopian future of this sci-fi thriller. This is a world in which, on their 16th birthday, all kids must undergo "the transformation", a form of cosmetic surgery that turns them from "Uglies" into "Pretties". Tally (Joey King, above, with Chase Stokes) awaits her own makeover, until a less image-obsessed friend goes rogue and reveals the dark secrets of this society. Aimed at teens looking for Divergent-style thrills, this is pacey, undemanding eye-candy. DAVE GOLDER

DRAMA

Armageddon Time ★★★★★ 15

Available now

Film-maker James Gray (Ad Astra) reflects on his own adolescence in this thoughtful coming-of-age drama. The film is set in 1980s New York, where 12-year-old Paul (Banks Repeta), who is part of a Jewish-American family, and his African-American classmate (Jaylin Webb) learn hard lessons about race and class at school. The young leads hold their own alongside co-stars Anne Hathaway, Jeremy Strong and a superb Anthony Hopkins, as Paul's grandfather. MAX COPEMAN

ACTION THRILLER

Memory ★★★ 18

Available now

This action thriller stars Liam Neeson as a hitman suffering from early onset dementia. He's also being pursued by both the cops and the bad guys after refusing to kill a girl who's been sex-trafficked to the US. The quality supporting cast includes Guy Pearce and Taj Atwal as bantering FBI agents, Ray Stevenson as a belligerent cop and Monica Bellucci as a purring criminal mastermind. It lacks originality, but director Martin Campbell (GoldenEye) ensures the action is slick. STEVE MORRISSEY

COMING-OF-AGE DRAMA

Rez Ball ★★★

Available from Friday 27 September

By turns emotive, insightful and comfortably rote, this low-key drama, inspired by a true story, follows the trials of a high-school basketball team after their star player takes his own life. Native American film-maker Sydney Freeland directs a fine, lived-in ensemble cast as this Navajo team overcomes grief, domestic turbulence and a height disadvantage to regain their form in the fast-paced world of "reservation ball". Debuting actor Kauchani Bratt stands out as the team's new captain. CALUM BAKER

Amazon Prime Video

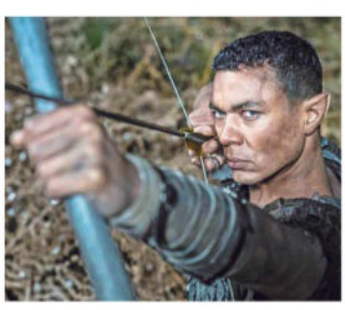

RELATIONSHIP DRAMA

Challengers ★★★★ 15 Available now

Zendaya aces this rip-roaring romance set in the world of tennis. She plays Tisha, a former star of the game who is now a much sought-after coach. Her husband Art (Mike Faist) is set to compete in the US Open, until their perfect life hits a rocky patch when he suffers a losing streak. Tisha suggests he play in a low-key tournament to get his form back, pitting him against his old friend and partner, Patrick (Josh O'Connor, above right with Faist and Zendaya). The film zips back and forth to flesh out the back story in this love triangle, and director Luca Guadagnino keeps events fizzing faster than a doubles rally. JAMES MOTTRAM

COMEDY DRAMA

Dumb Money ★★★★ 15

Available from Thursday

Like The Wolf of Wall Street and The Big Short, this absorbing true-life tale explores chicanery in the world of high finance. Paul Dano stars as Keith Gill, a stock-market guru who advises his followers to buy into an ailing high-street video game retailer. The stock escalates, and day traders – dismissed as "dumb money" by the fat cats – get a chance to stick it to the man. Director Craig Gillespie (I, Tonya) delivers a propulsive exploration of community and solidarity. JM

FANTASY

The Lord of the Rings: The Rings of Power

Episode 8 available from Thursday

There are rumblings of dissent around this megabucks Tolkien prequel – should it return for season three? The second run ends with an episode showing all the strengths and failings of what has come before. It's spectacular on occasion, always looks fab and the cast is flawless. But hopping between discrete storylines feels like boxes being ticked, and it's all a bit too talky: it constantly feels like something big will happen at an unspecified point in the future. That day might never come. JACK SEALE

COMEDY

English Teacher

Available now

Brian Jordan Alvarez, known for his characters on TikTok, dials it down a little for a comedy that has inevitably been compared to Abbott Elementary. This is a kookier, lower-key take on a school comedy, with Alvarez as Evan, a high-school teacher (so the kids are older and more involved in the action than in Abbott) who has ideals about his job that he's never quite able to fulfil. It can feel very issue-driven, but it's skilled at creating comic moments that undercut apparent stereotypes among the characters. JACK SEALE

HORROR DRAMA

Grotesquerie

Eps 1 and 2 available 26 September

Ryan Murphy (the man behind Glee, Nip/Tuck and American Horror Story) is a co-creator of this series that bears a lot of his hallmarks. His latest effort to examine what's wrong with America via the medium of schlocky horror stars Niecy Nash as a detective who teams up with a nun to investigate a run of ritual killings. It has a bit of everything: a naughty priest; a mentally fractious protagonist; Lesley Manville vamping it up as a sinister nurse; and the surprise casting of Kansas City Chiefs' tight end Travis Kelce, aka Taylor Swift's other half. JS

DOCUMENTARY

After Baywatch: A Moment in the Sun

Available now

This candid look at life behind the scenes on the lifeguarding drama is full of revelations, from one cast member revealing that he had to hide his addiction issues, to star David Hasselhoff openly admitting that he chose money over prestige in accepting the gig. It also doesn't shy away from addressing the contradiction at the heart of a show which was wholesome yet filled with slow-mo shots of nearly naked actors. Both fans and students of 90s pop culture will be fascinated. DAVID BROWN

DOCUMENTARY

Social Studies

Available from Saturday

Award-winning documentary director Lauren Greenfield delivers a sobering five-parter that meets Los Angeles teenagers and then shadows them on social media. The teens talk frankly about how the majority of their personal interactions are via social networks, with all the problems that brings: unrealistic beauty ideals, sexually inappropriate content, bullying... But being online can also let the kids be themselves in a way school often doesn't. Watch it with your children or through your fingers. JS

ANIMATED COMEDY

Inside Out 2 ★★★★ U Available from 25 September

Pixar's sprightly sequel picks up with Riley after the onset of puberty, as the colourful characters representing her emotions are joined by a more complex, difficult crew, including Anxiety and Envy. The film covers recognisable coming-of-age territory, but with less of an acid tongue – and arguably more insight – than peer-pressure movies like Mean Girls or Heathers. Meanwhile, the backdrop of a young girl's mind provides endless avenues for invention, creating a film rich in colour, texture and gags. TERRY STAUNTON

LAUREN GREENFIELD/FX/DISNEY; GETTY

THE EYES HAVE IT
Adolescent emotions are represented by Pixar's colourful characters

COMEDY DRAMA

Only Murders in the Building Ep 6 available from Tue

In a break from the norm, events are captured on Howard's home video camera and Super 8 footage filmed by the eerie Brothers sisters (Siena Werber and Catherine Cohen, above), who are essentially the Grady twins from The Shining all grown up. Yet while this handheld approach is certainly different, it also stress-tests the format almost to breaking point. After all, what is Only Murders without its stylish staging and snappy back and forth? Let's hope this is a one-off experiment and the next episode is shot more traditionally. DB

Available now

It's the 20th anniversary of the cult tropical island drama, which at its 2004 launch was the most lauded show on TV and, by the time of its finale in 2010, the biggest letdown. There's no denying that the finale failed to answer many of Lost's long-standing questions, but – unlike the passengers of the ill-fated Oceanic Airlines Flight 815 – it's best just to enjoy the ride. There are, after all, some bracing and exhilarating cliffhangers along the way. DB

PSYCHOLOGICAL HORROR

Apartment 7A ★★★ 15 Available from 27 September

Rosemary's Baby was one of the most controversial films of the 1960s; this prequel is set just prior to the events of director Roman Polanski's influential horror. Julia Garner (above) is Terry, a young dancer who is taken under the wing of a kindly old couple (Dianne Wiest and Kevin McNally), who move her into their spacious apartment block. Terry's fortunes take an upturn as her benefactors become increasingly involved in her life, but sinister goings-on suggest all is not as it should be. What the story lacks in surprises (until the final minutes) is counterbalanced by Garner's captivating performance. TERRY STAUNTON

SITCOM

Frasier

Episode 4 available from Friday

Yet again, Nicholas Lyndhurst is the funniest thing in an episode of the rebooted sitcom pivoting around an idea that could have featured in the original Frasier. The pompous shrink's envy of a fellow therapist leads to an impulsive theft and then a sort of reverse heist to return the stolen item: it's not set up or paid off with the elegance of the old Frasier, but when it comes to delivering physical farce, Lyndhurst – as Frasier's pal Alan – is more than up to the task. JS

Ten Questions: page 8

COMEDY DRAMA

Tulsa King

Episode 3 available from Sunday

It was already great fun, but season two of the mobster comedy drama really kicks into gear this week. Dwight Manfredi (Sylvester Stallone) is on trial and is, naturally, representing himself, in his own unique fashion – he's also facing off against the Kansas City crime lord who isn't pleased about Dwight stepping on his turf. There will be blood, but there will also be silly comedy at Dwight's new house, as the busybody head of the local homeowners' association belatedly realises just who he is messing with. JS

SPY DRAMA

Slow Horses

Episode 5 available Wednesday

Slow Horses doesn't usually go in for old-fashioned villains, so Hugo Weaving is a refreshing change as snarling mercenary Frank Harkness. This episode is a showcase for his particular brand of menace, which unsettles even the deadpan spies of this world when he draws near. But of course, the more consistent threat to the spooks at Slough House is the grasping bureaucrats on their own side. Never has cynicism been so much fun to watch. HUW FULLERTON

COMEDY DRAMA

Bad Monkey

Episode 9 available Wednesday

Reaching its penultimate episode forces this lazily paced series to ratchet the action up a notch or three. Rosa (Natalie Martinez) has been sent under cover by Yancy (Vince Vaughn) to bring down the murderous con artists at the heart of the story, but gathering storm clouds are about to cut off the pair's escape route. Meanwhile, Jodie Turner-Smith rounds off a strong performance as spell-casting "Dragon Queen" Gracie. JACK SEALE

COMEDY DRAMA

Where's Wanda? Episodes 1 and 2 available Wednesday

Ingenuity and dark comedy collide in Apple TV+'s first German-language series. When 17-year-old Wanda goes missing, the Klatt family take matters into their own hands in the search for their daughter, launching an undercover surveillance operation and spying on their neighbours in a desperate attempt to find her. Visually fresh, with arresting dialogue and amusing antics, it takes the traditionally dark missing-person drama and gives it a quirky, comic twist – a wry reminder that you never really know what's happening behind closed doors. CHRISTOPHER GOODING

Watergate

Full series available now

The 40th anniversary of Richard Nixon's resignation has resulted in Norma Percy's definitive Watergate series being uploaded in its entirety. First shown in 1994, it traces events all the way from that initial bungled break-in at the Democratic National Committee's HQ through to the eventual toppling of the president, while a new interview with Percy asks whether this was the moment faith in political leaders became fatally undermined. DAVID BROWN

WHAT I'M STREAMING

JASON WATKINS

"I'm rewatching the first series of Sherwood," says the McDonald and Dodds actor. "I'm a huge fan of the writer James Graham and it's really nice to see good acting. It's so brilliantly done because it's couched in a murder mystery, but it says so much about us and class and the present and the past. I'm really looking forward to easing into the second series."

Pain and Glory ★★★★★ 15

A middle-aged film director looks back on his life in this Oscar-nominated film from Spanish auteur Pedro Almodóvar, who turned 75 last week. Antonio Banderas is incredibly moving as the lonely maverick who rebuilds his friendship with a former leading man, although the pain of the past is never far away. This revealing, deeply emotive film is arguably Almodóvar's most mature work to date. TREVOR JOHNSTON

The Fall ★★★ 15

Tarsem Singh's surreal fantasy is one of the most beautiful films ever made. Set mainly in a hospital in 1920s Hollywood, it stars Lee Pace as a man recovering from an accident. A young patient demands he tell her a story, and so begins an epic tale of a masked bandit (also Pace). The meandering narrative isn't important, but the cinematography is gorgeous and makes for a dazzling portrayal of childhood logic. Justine Waddell (above) co-stars. JAYNE NELSON

This week marks the centenary of Marcello Mastroianni, one of the icons of classic arthouse cinema. He enjoyed one of his best-known roles in Federico Fellini's mesmerising drama, a complex and painfully honest study of a man in a personal and professional crisis. After La Dolce Vita (which also starred Mastroianni), Fellini was faced with the problem of repeating his success and this soul-searching classic, with its mix of daydreams, memories, nightmares and frustrating confrontations, is a fantasy chronicle of his attempts to sustain his reputation. Mastroianni is exceptional in the role of the frustrated film-maker. DAVID PARKINSON

COMEDY DRAMA

The Persian Version

★★★★ 15

Available from Sunday

Layla Mohammadi plays Leila, an LGBTQ+ film-maker who is estranged from her Iranian-American family. When her father falls ill, a fractious return to the nest follows. Director Maryam Keshavarz reflects Leila's personality with style, ladling on voiceovers, colours and alt-pop songs. Niousha Noor, who plays Leila's mother, gives a nuanced turn that sells the film's moments of emotional truth. KEVIN HARLEY

MUSICAL

The Color Purple

★★★ 12

Available from Friday

This version of Alice Walker's novel is a musical, based on the 2005 Broadway show. Set in the Deep South in the early 1900s, it tells the rousing story of Celie, an African-American woman forced to marry the violent and abusive Mister. While the show tunes occasionally jar with the dark subject matter, there are strong performances, notably Taraji P Henson as the jazz singer whom Celie befriends. JAMES MOTTRAM

HORROR

In a Violent Nature

★★★ 18

Available from Monday

This rural slasher is as grim and relentless as it is genuinely innovative. Director Chris Nash follows an awakened demon (Ry Barrett) through the woods as he trudges after a group of unwitting youngsters. The grisly effects are spectacular, but the film's artfully plodding pace and distanced style may prove harder to stomach. JM

ANIMATED COMEDY

The Garfield Movie

★★★ U

Available now

Jim Davis's lazy, gluttonous, Monday-hating cat returns to the screen with this unoriginal animated outing. Chris Pratt is on autopilot voicing the hero, who has a run-in with a vengeful Persian cat (Hannah Waddingham) and reunites with his absentee dad (Samuel L Jackson). It all starts out quite obnoxiously, but a game support cast and some inventive cartoon silliness make the end result oddly likeable. CALUM BAKER

AFGHANISTAN FLOODS EMERGENCY

YOU CAN HELP UNHCR TEAMS REACH DISPLACED PEOPLE IN THE MOST REMOTE AREAS OF THE COUNTRY

By UNHCR's Caroline Gluck, from Ghor Province, Afghanistan.

When a torrent of water smashed through the doors and windows of her house, quickly rising to more than a metre, Said Khanim and her children ran for the safety of higher ground. But in the chaos, her four-year-old daughter Atifa was separated from them. Villagers found the girl's tiny body a few hours later, washed into a culvert.

The family is now staying with neighbours, afraid to return home and worried that deep cracks left in the walls have weakened the structure and could trigger another tragedy. Said Khanim is fearful of the future: "We don't have anything.We are deep in debt. We're living in great difficulty, without everything we had." She knows her family is far from alone.

"This was a disaster in which everyone suffered."

Catastrophic flash flooding and heavy rains in May killed at least 347 people, leaving more than 10,000 homes destroyed or damaged, displacing thousands of families and damaging land and infrastructure.
Then, in July, further devastating flooding swept across the Central and Eastern regions, leaving thousands more displaced.

UNHCR, the UN Refugee Agency, has the staff and logistical capabilities to reach the most remote areas of the country. But with our work in Afghanistan already underfunded, we urgently need your help.

Said Khanim holding her youngest, 18-month-old Enamulla, outside the remains of their home in Ghor Province in the western Hindu Kush.

Please give £85 to help provide materials such as wood, bricks, cement and tools, so an Afghan family can repair their flood-damaged home.

Following four decades of conflict, insecurity and instability, families in Afghanistan were already struggling to survive. When the floods came, people had few defences. Now, homes are caked in mud, walls and ceilings have collapsed, people's meagre belongings have been destroyed and they've been left with nothing.

With your support today, UNHCR can provide materials to help people repair their flood-damaged homes ahead of the freezing Afghan winter.

£85 could help provide shelter repair materials such as bricks, wood, cement and tools.

Classic Soul: Later... with Jools Holland

8.30pm BBC2 Catch up via iPlayer

Seeing big rock bands, obscure new artists and the latest critical darlings are all parts of the Later... magic, but the appearances by old legends must be the days when the show's talent bookers have been pinching themselves. This grab-bag of archive performances has a few real spine-tinglers, including Bobby Womack doing a raw, acoustic Across 110th Street in 2004, George Benson's lithely funky On Broadway back in 1998, and Bettye Lavette in 2012, sounding exactly as good as she had half a century earlier, singing Let Me Down Easy backed by a visibly awestruck Rhythm and Blues Orchestra.

Other clips range from amusing – Solomon Burke camping up Cry to Me in 2002, lounging on a crimson throne – to somewhat bewildering: Al Green in 1993, dressed like an estate agent and seeming somewhat agitated, makes a pudding of two of his own classics. But we are in the presence of royalty throughout.

Strictly Come Dancing

6.15pm BBC1 Catch up via iPlayer

As expected, there was no mention of scandal in the launch show. Instead, the team worked up a sweat to promote it as "one-big-happy-family" entertainment. However, it now gets serious because the first celebrity is shown the door (my money's on a certain former sportsman).

There was a lot of online love for comedian Chris McCausland while there are some promising hoofers in the line-up: Jamie Borthwick, Montell Douglas, Shayne Ward and Sarah Hadland. But, even if you had two left feet, being paired with Strictly pros Aljaz Skorjanec or Amy Dowden guarantees you'll keep dancing for several more weeks. JANE RACKHAM

Well done to Talking Pictures TV for securing the rights to repeat Z Cars, surely one of the most-requested archive shows. Many will be unhappy that the earliest editions (hundreds survive right from the start in 1962) have yet to be cleared, but there's hope. Tonight, we'll still be gazing back half a century to an episode first shown on BBC1 in December 1973.

The Cinder Path doesn't feature James Ellis's Bert Lynch, who'd just been made an inspector, but we are reacquainted with stalwarts John Slater and Derek Waring. Most interesting will be seeing Stephanie Turner as WPC Howarth – seven years before Juliet Bravo. PATRICK MULKERN

The Weakest Link

8.30pm BBC1 Catch up via iPlayer

It might be a little less highbrow than Mondays on BBC2 but Saturday now boasts a shout-at-the-TV quizzing triple bill, too. Expect zingers a-plenty as stand-ups including Phil Wang, Maisie Adam, Iain Stirling and Geoff Norcott bid to bank up to £50,000 for charity.

Alan Carr's Picture Slam also makes a comeback (5.30pm BBC1). Carr then turns team captain for the raucous, Stephen Mangan-hosted word association game Password (10.10pm ITV1). Daisy May Cooper heads the opposing team. Stay tuned for a white-knuckle final round.

8.30pm Channel 5 Catch up: My5

Even if you've never visited Hatfield House in Hertfordshire, the childhood home of Elizabeth I, you might recognise it because it's been the location for so many royal films.

Experts such as Laurence Llewelyn-Bowen, Paul Burrell and Tessa Dunlop agree it's much grander than Buck House, boasting a majestic marble hall and sweeping oak staircase. But its history – especially during the Elizabethan age – is as melodramatic as a soap opera with toxic relationships, nepotism and plotting.

Coming up to date we also hear how Elizabeth II joined the jet set here and the supposed origins of the expression "Bob's your uncle". JR

LAST IN SERIES

Among the striking statistics in this series about the music industry is that getting a million streams for a song on Spotify will gain the recording artist a mere £3,000–£4,000, while the major record labels cut deals that gave them valuable equity in the platform.

None of it smells right, but it's the latest chapter in a long history of rigged deals that disproportionately hit black musicians. Tonight's first episode traces how Motown and Stax tried to break the mould, then the second explores how social media took away barriers to entry for young artists – but at a cost. DAVID BUTCHER

The Killing Kind
11.00pm ITV1 Catch up via ITVX

Each week, this wily thriller slots a piece of the puzzle into place, the revelations in episode three concerning the identity of the woman who died in the fire at Ingrid and Mark's home. Until now, all we've seen are short, almost subliminal shots of motionless legs in a bed as flames lick the surrounding walls. But here, there's information imparted that may just change your perception of a key player.

In other news, Ingrid is once again feeling frustrated by what she sees as the lack of progress being made by the detectives assigned to her case. She's told that lawyers aren't meant to be doing the work of the police, but that obviously doesn't stop her from pursuing her own leads. DAVID BROWN

Apples Never Fall
9.15pm BBC1

You can see why writers keep returning to the device of a stranger coming to town, as outsiders have an innate ability to upset the social order and provoke. And so it has proven with the mysterious Savannah (Georgia Flood), who knocked on the Delaneys' door in an agitated state, embedded herself in their home and brought various tensions to light.

Thanks to Apples Never Fall's split past/present timeline, we're aware that Savannah arrived on the scene months prior to the disappearance of Joy (Annette Bening), but has this cuckoo in the nest committed any crime? There are some in the family who believe so, whereas others remain suspicious of Stan (Sam Neill), who's seen tonight claiming that the livid gash on his face is the result of a fight with a cactus. Yet it's debatable as to who is pricklier: the patriarch or the plant. DB

9.30 The Battle for Black Music: Paid in Full

RT 2/3. Examining the triumphs and failures of record labels owned and run by black people as they battled a hostile industry. In the 1950s, soul star Sam Cooke started Swan Records and started investing in other black artists on favourable terms, with his mantle picked up by Motown, Philadelphia International and Stax, but all ended up selling their stakes to the white-dominated industry. (S) (AD) (HD)

10.30 3/3. Exploring the digital revolution, which has inspired black artists to bypass the major labels. The likes of Ice-T, Jay-Z, Drake and Stormzy realised the power of their global brands and became richer than their predecessors had ever imagined. But not all artists have had it so good, and with the rise of streaming services, many received just a fraction of the income their songs were generating. See p39. Director Alison Duke Series producer Guy Evans (S) (AD) (HD)

FILM REVIEWS

FILM OF THE DAY

Bridesmaids ★★★★★ 9.00-11.35pm ITV2 15

COMEDY Featuring an incredible ensemble cast, Bridesmaids offers a heady romp through western bridal culture. Kristen Wiig plays the singleton who is asked by lifelong pal Maya Rudolph to be maid of honour at her upcoming wedding. However, their friendship is torn asunder by Rudolph's new friend, Rose Byrne, who undermines Wiig at every turn. The film is spiked with outrageous scenes that show off Wiig's lightning-quick comedy timing, while credit should also go to Chris O'Dowd as her love interest and Melissa McCarthy as the awkward but lovable oddball in the bridal party. KAREN KRIZANOVICH (US 2011, swearing, sex references, HD)

Cat on a Hot Tin Roof ★★★★

9.45-11.30am BBC2 15

DRAMA This is Tennessee Williams at his most fiery, with familial strife in the Deep South coming alive during the birthday celebrations for dying patriarch Big Daddy (Burl Ives). Elizabeth Taylor overdoes the Southern accent as his daughter-in-law, "Maggie the Cat", but Paul Newman is splendid as Brick, the sullen but only upright member of a dislikeable clan. SUE HEAL (US 1958, HD)

Star Trek: Insurrection ★★★

2.35-4.45pm 5 Action PG

SCI-FI Travelling where Star Trek had already boldly gone before, this concerns a planet of perpetual youth and the two races who are locked in a struggle for the right to use it. There's nothing really new, but F Murray Abraham does get to play an unusual villain, while Donna Murphy is affecting as the love interest of Captain Picard (Patrick Stewart). ALAN JONES (US 1998, may be edited for content, HD)

The World Is Not Enough ★★★★

4.35-6.55pm ITV1 12

SPY This 19th James Bond film effortlessly juggles a plot about the global domination of oil pipelines with all the superspy thrills. In his third outing as 007, Pierce Brosnan is as comfortable in the dramatic sequences as in the action scenes, which include a spectacular boat chase along the River Thames. AJ (US/UK 1999, edited for violence, language, HD)

17 Again ★★ 7.00-9.00pm Comedy Central 12

COMEDY Aimed squarely at the teen market, this body-switch comedy sees Matthew Perry's grown-up transformed back into his 17-year-old self (and played by Zac Efron). The scenarios that ensue are predictable, but Efron charms, while Thomas Lennon as his nerdy best friend supplies plenty of comic substance. ANDREW COLLINS (US 2009, edited for language, HD)

P Morbius ★★

9.00-11.05pm C4 15

FANTASY HORROR Sony's Spider-verse continues to take shape with the origin of Morbius the Living Vampire. A moody Jared Leto stars as the ailing biochemist, whose choice of vampire bat serum to cure his rare blood disorder sees the souped-up scientist prowling the night in need of liquid refreshment. Sadly, the film is lacking in drama despite some effective CGI transformations. JEREMY ASPINALL (US 2022, violence, HD)

Battleship ★★★

9.00-11.35pm 5 Star 12

SCI-FI ACTION The third Hasbro toy-to-film franchise (after Transformers and GI Joe) doesn't mess with a winning format. Taylor Kitsch plays the rebel no-hoper who turns naval hero in the fight against invading aliens. Once the initial over-the-top soap operatics settle down, director Peter Berg goes completely overboard on the CGI special effects and disaster spectacle. AJ (US 2012, violence, swearing, HD)

Once upon a Time... in Hollywood ★★★★★

11.05pm-2.00am C4 18

COMEDY DRAMA Quentin Tarantino's thrill-packed epic is set in Los Angeles in 1969. Leonardo DiCaprio plays a fading TV western star, while Margot Robbie is the real-life Sharon Tate, whose career is just taking off. Brad Pitt's stuntman completes the star trio for an audacious, mind-bending narrative that sees Tarantino firing on all cylinders. TERRY STAUNTON (US/UK 2019, violence, swearing, drug abuse, col/BW, HD)

A Bigger Splash ★★★★

12.20-2.20am BBC2 15

DRAMA This sun-baked tale is set on an island off Sicily and revolves around Tilda Swinton's rock star, who is enjoying a holiday with her partner. But their peace is shattered by the arrival of music producer Ralph Fiennes and his daughter (Dakota Johnson). Tensions soon begin to rise, in what is a funny and sexually charged affair. STEPHEN CARTY (It/Fr 2015, swearing, sex scenes, nudity, drug abuse, HD)

Deerskin ★★

2.00-3.25am C4 15

COMEDY HORROR This strange, slow film stars Jean Dujardin (The Artist) as a man obsessed with the "jacket of his dreams". It's a typically quirky premise from French writer/director Quentin Dupieux (Rubber). The film does amuse in places, but it is also self-consciously odd. MATT GLASBY (Fr 2019, violence, swearing, HD)

Films to stream from p30

ICE MAIDEN
Joan (Sophie Turner) turns jewel thief to make ends meet

DRAMA

Joan 9.00pm ITV1 Catch up via ITVX

NEW SERIES

Jewel thief Joan Hannington called her 2002 autobiography I Am What I Am – a fitting title as it speaks of defiance, self-sufficiency and an unapologetic nature. And they're qualities that also translate to this 80s-set TV version of her story, which finds Sophie Turner playing Joan as someone whose cool calmness belies a scrappy drive to thrive, even if that means turning to a life of crime.

Whether you like Joan is, of course, another matter, but this drama is doing its best to give her dignity within the murky world in which she operates. Her origins were, after all, brutal: beaten by her father and then again by her criminal husband Gary, who put her in very real danger from his gangster associates.

When Gary absconds, Joan seizes the opportunity to forge a new life for herself and her daughter – one that involves targeting jewellers' and surreptitiously swallowing their most expensive stock. This opening episode opts not to debate Joan's moral choices, but focuses instead on her survival instincts, which are, it must be said, pretty formidable. Continues tomorrow at 9.00pm. DAVID BROWN

NATURE

Big Cats 24/7

8.00pm BBC2 Catch up via iPlayer

LAST EPISODE

Sometimes this series can feel like looking at a beautiful sunset with someone who won't stop talking about it. The chatter between the camera-folk on their walkie-talkies is intrusive at times, but the series is worth it for all the stuff they film in between – the stunning Okavango delta and its wildlife.

Just getting to watch a well-fed pride of lions lazing about can be very calming: with its new arrivals, the Xudum pride we've been following is now 40-strong, one of the largest in the world, apparently. And the final episode has fresh drama. If a five-year-old ever asks you who would win in a tug of war between a lion and a crocodile, tonight you'll have the answer. DAVID BUTCHER

DRAMA

Nightsleeper

9.00pm BBC1 Catch up via iPlayer

Whose blood got splattered across the carriage window? Who is the mysterious hooded stowaway? What else is the Transport Minister hiding? And is Abby's jilted friend still standing on the concourse at Victoria station?

There are answers to all these questions and more in a rollicking and perilous penultimate episode that sees more stricken passengers, lives and careers in the balance and murky pasts probed. Joe swerves telling cyber security the truth about what's happening on board, and as Abby is carted off for questioning about the code used in this attack being found on her laptop, a breadcrumb trail featuring clues the size of tin loaves hints at the culprit.

Mortimer & Whitehouse: Gone Fishing

9.00pm BBC2 Catch up via iPlayer

Bob Mortimer and Paul Whitehouse don't indulge in much musing about life and death while they're fishing for salmon in Ireland's stunningly beautiful River Finn. Instead, there's a running joke about Bob's annoying reaction to winning the card game Uno, a ludicrous riff on a "bucket party" and a quick round of "Who would live in a house like this?" over their accommodation. Not Bono, Paul reckons, before guessing Feargal Sharkey or Helena Bobham (sic) Carter.

It's as delightful, relaxing and funny as ever – even without the presence of the lugubrious Ted. JANE RACKHAM

Celebrity SAS: Who Dares Wins

9.00pm C4
Catch up via C4 streaming

The celebrity recruits are probably wishing they'd signed up for I'm a Celebrity... instead of this. Eating a witchetty grub has got to be easier than falling backwards into icy water in the dark or running down the side of a dam wall. No wonder one celebrity threw in the towel 32 minutes after the brutal training started.

There's more screaming and swearing tonight (from both the super-tough instructors and contestant Bobby Norris) as the celebs tackle another series of demanding challenges including vicious hand-to-hand combat – while several more recruits are told to hand in their arm bands. It continues tomorrow at 9.00pm. JR

This dispiriting documentary views the Israel /Palestine conflict through children's eyes. In the West Bank, ten-year-old Jena lives in the impoverished Jenin refugee camp, besieged by Israeli airstrikes. Her greatest aspiration, she says, is to grow up and become a "martyr".

Meanwhile, 16-year-old Renana belongs to a Jewish settler community in Havat Gilad – considered illegal under international law. The killing of her father by Palestinian militants, combined with the Hamas attack of 7 October 2023, has radicalised Renana to view all "Arab monkeys" as sub-human. It is a haunting portrait of polarisation and cycles of never-ending violence. STEPHEN KELLY

LAST EPISODE

The hold Dena Thompson had over the men in her life is quite astounding – to the point where her third husband, Richard, didn't initially call the police after she had attacked him so severely it was evidently an attempt on his life. His story mirrors that of her previous spouses. Richard was also spun yarns about a financial windfall, a cancer diagnosis and the promise of a new life in Florida. One of the detectives says that he still doesn't know what her fascination was with the Sunshine State.

Some justice was eventually served, although the frustrating postscript to this horrifying true-crime tale will likely leave you reeling. FT

DRAMA

Tom Jones
11.15pm, 12.10am ITV1 Full series: ITVX

LAST EPISODE

We've seen classic dramas with more brio but, if you've made it this far, keep going: it picks up now, largely thanks to an expansive performance from Hannah Waddingham as Lady Bellaston.

Tom (Solly McLeod), the foundling banished after falling for higher-class Sophia, is adrift and loveless in London, and ripe for the clutches of the randy Lady Bellaston. But is it a trap? Waddingham is brilliant as a woman with complexities beyond the vampiric sexpot she appears to be. Writer Gwyneth Hughes, meanwhile, has tweaked Henry Fielding's plot to give a more rewarding ending – and guides us towards it with assurance. JACK SEALE

TRAVEL

Paddy and Chris: Road Tripping
8.00pm BBC1 Catch up via iPlayer

NEW SERIES

As Top Gear pals Paddy McGuinness and Chris Harris hit their half century, they've decided to travel around Europe, hopefully finding out the secret of happier, healthier and longer lives. Think Gordon, Gino and Fred with less booze and a bigger emphasis on exercise, the outdoors and good health. They start in Sweden, home of Abba, Ikea and... saunas.

The sight of the Raisins, a group of middle-aged Swedish men who regularly strip off and get sweaty together, is quite something. Paddy and Chris keep their trunks on. They also ride a roller coaster, play ice hockey, eat seaweed and do an extreme forest work out. But mainly they have a right laugh. Which is good, because having fun apparently boosts the immune system. JR

9.00 The Magic of Mozart at the Proms

Katie Derham presents a concert from 2022 celebrating Wolfgang Amadeus Mozart, the child prodigy who rewrote the musical rule book. The programme begins with the overture from The Marriage of Figaro, an opera that changed music and challenged the social status quo. The international Mahler Chamber Orchestra, whose members are drawn from 20 countries, are joined by their artistic partner, Norwegian Leif Ove Andsnes, who plays piano and directs the orchestra, as Mozart did, from the keyboard.

Mozart Overture: The Marriage of Figaro; Piano Concerto No 20 in D minor, K466; Piano Concerto No 22 in E flat, K482

Director Matthew Woodward
Producer Rhonagh O'Donnell (R) (S) (HD)

FILM REVIEWS

FILM OF THE DAY

Schindler's List ★★★★★

10.00pm-1.05am BBC2 (not in N Ireland) 15

BIOGRAPHICAL DRAMA Steven Spielberg's outstanding Holocaust drama uses stark, brutal realism and a potent documentary style to tell the story of Second World War entrepreneur Oskar Schindler, whose operation to supply the German war effort led him to be the unexpected saviour of more than 1,000 Jewish factory workers. Liam Neeson gives a heartfelt performance in the lead, Ben Kingsley is superb as Schindler's Jewish accountant, while Ralph Fiennes invokes revulsion and sympathy as a Nazi commandant. ALAN JONES (US 1993, violence, swearing, sex scenes, nudity, col/BW, HD)

Tracker ★★★

10.50-1.00pm Great Action 12

ADVENTURE New Zealand is the setting for this period tale, in which a Boer War veteran (Ray Winstone) tracks down a Maori seaman (Temuera Morrison) wanted for killing a British soldier. The resulting chase unfolds like a Kiwi western, and although it is predictable, director Ian Sharp delivers the twists in entertaining fashion. TREVOR JOHNSTON (NZ/UK 2010, edited for content)

Baby's Day Out ★★★

1.05-3.00pm Film4 PG

COMEDY John Hughes (Home Alone) here comes up with another successful spin on the small-people-humiliating-adults theme. The titular tot is snatched by a bungling trio of kidnappers and proceeds to make their life hell. Wit and subtlety are hardly to the fore, but the action rips along at a cracking pace. JOHN FERGUSON (US 1994, edited for content, HD)

Alice through the Looking Glass ★★★

2.05-3.50pm BBC1 PG

FANTASY In this sequel to Tim Burton's 2010 filming of Alice in Wonderland, the Mad Hatter (Johnny Depp) asks Alice (Mia Wasikowska) to help him find out what happened to his lost family. While it isn't the most focused of plots, the visuals are dazzling and kids are likely to just take it as it comes and enjoy the ride. STELLA PAPAMICHAEL (US 2016, HD)

Return to Oz ★★★

3.00-5.10pm Comedy Central PG

FANTASY Disney recaptures the dark side of L Frank Baum's Oz stories in this exciting sequel. Fairuza Balk is wonderful as Dorothy, who ends up back in a now ruined Oz facing the evil Nome King and Princess Mombi with her friends Pumpkinhead, Tik Tok and a talking chicken. Director Walter Murch's sombre non-musical vision is imaginative and hugely appealing. AJ (US 1985, HD)

Babe ★★★★

5.10-6.55pm Film4 U

COMEDY Based on Dick King-Smith's book The Sheep-Pig, this Australian yarn was a surprise hit on release and continues to enchant. The "babe" of the title is an orphaned piglet, adopted by a family of Border collies, who learns how to handle sheep under the patient training of farmer James Cromwell. It's a delight from start to finish, and won an Oscar for its visual effects. JF (US/Aus 1995, HD)

The Power of One ★★★

9.00-11.30pm Legend 15

PERIOD DRAMA It's a rare showing for this solid and gritty adaptation of Bryce Courtenay's rites-of-passage novel set in South Africa in the 1930s and 1940s. Stephen Dorff stars as an outsider whose friendship, as a young boy, with tutor Armin Mueller-Stahl and prisoner Morgan Freeman (both excellent) inspires him to fight against racial injustice. DAVID PARKINSON (US 1991, violence, swearing, racist themes)

To the Devil a Daughter ★★

9.00-10.55pm Legend Xtra 18

HORROR This Hammer film is a muddled mix of post-Exorcist shock and the more traditional House of Horror style. Based on Dennis Wheatley's occult best-seller (he hated it), the plot has Satanist Christopher Lee coercing nun Nastassja Kinski into having the Devil's offspring, while writer and occult expert Richard Widmark tries to foil his plan. AJ (UK/WGer 1976, violence, swearing, nudity)

The Terminator ★★★★★

10.20pm-12.25am ITV4 15

THRILLER Released 40 years ago next month, director James Cameron's low-budget calling-card remains a terrifying classic. Arnold Schwarzenegger is perfectly cast as the cyborg who is time-warped from the future to kill waitress Linda Hamilton and alter the course of history. The thrills are kept up from the first frame right through to the nerve-jangling climax. AJ (US 1984, violence, swearing, a sex scene, nudity)

Been So Long ★★★

1.40-3.45am Film4 15

MUSICAL Urban reality and fantasy are cleverly blended in this adaptation of the Young Vic stage production about a single mum (Michaela Coel) and a mysterious stranger (Arinzé Kene). The songs that essay their relationship span various musical styles, and director Tinge Krishnan captures contemporary London with a confident, restless energy. CALUM BAKER (UK 2018, swearing, sexual references, drug abuse, HD)

Films to stream from p30
Netflix, Amazon, Disney+ and more

U - suitable for all; PG Parental Guidance - for general viewing, but some scenes may be unsuitable for young or sensitive children; 12, 15, 18 - for viewers of these ages and over.

A LUCKY LIFE
Jilly Cooper has salacious stories to tell

DOCUMENTARY

In My Own Words: Jilly Cooper

10.40pm (11.40pm Wales, 12.05am N Ireland) BBC1 Catch up via iPlayer

When Jilly Cooper was at school, she admits, "The only thing I was ever interested in was men." It may explain why her series of racy novels set in the appropriately named Rutshire and featuring the "devilishly handsome" Rupert Campbell-Black was so successful. Fans of her sagas of country-set shenanigans should note a new adaptation of Rivals is coming to Disney+ on 18 October.

Cooper's wicked sense of humour, eccentricities, self-deprecation and saucy attitude are evident in this refreshingly jolly portrait. Men are "heavenly" or "gorgeous", while her fertile imagination constantly comes up with salacious stories about anyone she spots.

It's a fabulous romp through her "lucky life", which really took off when she landed a column writing for the Sunday Times in 1969.

The only moment of sadness is when she's asked about her beloved husband Leo's affair. She shuts down further discussion by saying, "I had a lovely husband." JANE RACKHAM

QUIZ

Mastermind/Only Connect/University Challenge

7.30pm BBC2 Catch up via iPlayer

Who needs fast bowling when you've got quick brains? Now the cricket season is over, the full quiz hat-trick has been restored. Clive Myrie gets play under way, welcoming four more contenders into the chair. This week's specialist subjects are MR James, Thunderbirds, Ronnie O'Sullivan and Hans Holbein the Younger.

Victoria Coren Mitchell takes over as umpire when the whisky-loving Uisge Beathas take on the calculating Crunchers. And Amol Rajan – a cricket fan himself – officiates a first-round clash between Birkbeck, London, and Darwin College, Cambridge.

Feel free to punctuate the proceedings with tea, cake and ripples of applause. MICHAEL HOGAN

ENTERTAINMENT

The Traitors: NZ

8.00pm BBC3 Catch up via iPlayer

NEW SERIES

Faithfuls and traitors are popping up worldwide, as the hit game show rolls out across the globe. Hot on the heels of the Dutch, UK, US and other versions comes this Kiwi edition.

At a mountain lodge north of Auckland, 19 people play the ultimate game of deception for a prize equivalent to £33,000. Twists on the familiar format include "The Bribe" and "The Ultimatum".

Replacing Claudia Winkleman's chunky knitwear and fingerless leather gloves are host Paul Henry's flamboyant fedora, cane and brooch.

There are no owls, faux-funerals or poisoned chalices of fizzy rosé, but there are the requisite murder, manipulation and mind games.

Let the backstabbing begin. MH

MUSIC

Mozart: Rise of a Genius

LAST EPISODE

The last years of Mozart's life are a riotous coda, and a gift for this kind of series. He lurches from triumph to disaster, battling depression and debt, swinging from the doomy flop of Don Giovanni to the comic success of Cosi fan tutte. What the series calls "cinematic vignettes" (reconstructions) try to convey the saga, but you'd need a Hollywood budget to do it justice.

Meanwhile, interviewees compete in their adoration for the music. "The best thing in Cosi fan tutte is the best thing full stop. In music. Ever," Chris Addison states. Conductor Jane Glover suggests, "For me, [Mozart] is beyond the summit... somewhere above the rest of the human race." DAVID BUTCHER

Joan

9.00pm ITV1 Catch up via ITVX

To Joan (Sophie Turner), the glamorous if nefarious lifestyle being presented to her by silky criminal Boisie (Frank Dillane) has just as much sparkle and lustre as the jewels she's been pilfering. And so, before you can say Club Tropicana, she's become embroiled in one of his dodgy couriering scams to a resort in Spain.

Yet it's while Joan is enjoying the sea and sun that she voices a desire not to be beholden to anyone, despite Boisie obviously being very taken with her. The aim, of course, is to be reunited with her daughter, but once back in the UK, social services have questions to ask about Joan's abilities to parent her child. DAVID BROWN

Cast Away
9.00pm Channel 5
Catch up via My5

In 1994, Joanna Lumley spent nine days on a remote desert island for the BBC's Girl Friday, impressing us with her survival skills, resilience and ingenuity (she famously made shoes from her bra).

In 2023, Ruby Wax, after a chat with her old friend, followed suit for Cast Away – (loudly) enduring monsoon-like weather, creepy noises and a starvation diet.

C5 is being surprisingly coy about the identity of the latest "household name" to be stranded, filming themselves off Madagascar as they try to cope with the challenges of isolation and survival. We've had fun at Radio Times trying to guess who it is. Continues until Wednesday. JR

DRAMA

The Penguin
9.00pm Sky Atlantic
Catch up via Now

A healthy pay cheque doesn't always compensate for the toll a role can take on a body. Take Hugh Laurie, who complained of wrecked knees after years spent limping on House. And I do worry that Colin Farrell will be on the same trajectory should he be required to spend many seasons with the Penguin's unconventional gait.

The length of that commitment depends, of course, on both the success of the show and the time it takes for Oz to secure supremacy. He's playing two warring crime clans off against each other, though Sofia Falcone is at least wilier than her male family members, who appear to be playing pass the parcel with their one existing brain cell. DB

DOCUMENTARY

How to Survive a Dictator: North Korea
10.00pm C4
Catch up via C4 streaming

Comedian Munya Chawawa was born in Robert Mugabe's Zimbabwe, so he knows something about dictators. He previously made a playful documentary about Mugabe and brings the same tone to this look at North Korean leader Kim Jong-un.

Chawawa orders a Deliveroo for the country's embassy in Ealing, does a comedy rap and a Gogglebox parody. But the horror of life in North Korea keeps breaking through.

In Seoul, he meets a defector who describes his years of forced labour. Chawawa joins him as he tosses bottles containing rice and USB sticks into the sea, hoping some will float to the North and spread dissent. DBu

TERMINAL VELOCITY
Can Joe (Joe Cole) bring this nightmare journey to a safe halt?

DRAMA

Nightsleeper 9.00pm BBC1 Full series available via iPlayer

LAST EPISODE

We've called at bafflement, implausibility and incidental hilarity along the way, and now this runaway train's wild ride is reaching its final stop.

These cyclical six hours have mainly consisted of Abby (Alexandra Roach) screaming "Joe!" into a phone, said Joe (Joe Cole) charging off as a have-a-go-hero, and techie bods and passengers shouting at one another in either a screen-filled office or a fast-moving train carriage.

There's more of the same tonight. Not everyone who starts the episode's journey finishes it, with incriminating text messages being sent from someone still on board, and Abby having to face her biggest fear yet: getting into a lift.

As the thriller judders into its terminal, it's been a ridiculous but irritatingly irresistible trip. FRANCES TAYLOR

FILM REVIEWS

FILM OF THE DAY

Truman and Tennessee: An Intimate Conversation ★★★

11.30pm-12.50am BBC4 12

DOCUMENTARY Firm if quarrelsome friends, author Truman Capote and playwright Tennessee Williams lived parallel lives during the Golden Age of showbiz. This efficient film, showing on the anniversary of Capote's 100th birthday, marvels at their many similarities and marked differences. Topics include the pair's feelings about superstition, loneliness and sexuality, as well as their relationships with their dads. Archive footage is blended with narration from Jim Parsons (as Capote) and Zachary Quinto (as Williams). JOSH WINNING (US 2021, swearing, HD)

Charade ★★★★★

9.15-11.35am

Talking Pictures TV PG

ROMCOM Director Stanley Donen's wonderful comic caper nearly out-Hitchcocks Hitchcock. Cary Grant and Audrey Hepburn make for a dream lead pairing, as they become embroiled in various double-crosses against ravishing Parisian backdrops. With a score by Henry Mancini and star-making turns from Walter Matthau and James Coburn, this movie's got the lot. TONY SLOMAN (US 1963)

The Long Ships ★★

1.05-3.40pm Film4 PG

ADVENTURE Jack Cardiff's swashbuckling epic offers plenty of action, opulent sets and shimmering camerawork, but it's all a bit too self-indulgent for its own good. Richard Widmark plays his Viking role with pantomimic brio, while Sidney Poitier plays the Moorish prince as a sort of medieval civil rights activist. DAVID PARKINSON (UK/Yug 1963, some violence, HD)

Marilyn ★★ 4.05-5.25pm

Talking Pictures TV PG

CRIME James M Cain's hard-boiled novel The Postman Always Rings Twice provides the basis for this bleak British B-movie. Sandra Dorne oozes cynical sensuality as the unhappy wife whose liaison with mechanic Maxwell Reed leads to the death of her grouchy, garage-owning husband Leslie Dwyer. It's a solid enough study in lust, despair and avarice. DP (UK 1953, BW)

Stardust ★★★★

6.25-9.00pm Film4 PG

FANTASY In Victorian England, shop worker Tristan (Charlie Cox) crosses over into a magical world in search of a fallen star. The star has taken the human form of Yvaine (Claire Danes), and she and Tristan are soon pursued by a witch (Michelle Pfeiffer) and a motley band of princes. Like The Princess Bride, this fairy tale has plenty of cross-generational appeal. BRIAN PENDREIGH (US/UK 2007, some violence, HD)

Sleeping with the Enemy ★★★ 9.00-11.10pm

Great Movies 15

THRILLER The plot of Fatal Attraction is turned on its head here, with the obsessive aggressor a man who won't let his wife go. Julia Roberts plays the abused spouse who stages her own death to flee husband Patrick Bergin, but finds it's not that easy to get away from him. Roberts acquits herself well with the gritty material, while Bergin relishes his bad-guy role. JOHN FERGUSON (US 1991, violence, swearing, flashing images)

In the Line of Fire ★★★★ 9.00-11.50pm

Great Action 15

THRILLER Seeing Clint Eastwood in tears is one of the novelties of this hugely enjoyable movie. Clint plays a Secret Service agent haunted by past failures, who becomes obsessed with stopping a would-be assassin targeting the president. John Malkovich makes for a keen adversary, while director Wolfgang Petersen piles on the suspense. TOM HUTCHINSON (US 1993, violence, swearing)

One Good Turn ★★★

10.00-11.50pm Rewind TV (Freeview 95, Sky 190) U

COMEDY Arguably the best of Norman Wisdom's vehicles, this cleverly constructed follow-up to his smash-hit debut Trouble in Store features the bumbling star as a handyman trying to save the orphanage that employs him. His money-raising schemes are invariably hilarious, while his sequences with leading ladies Joan Rice and Shirley Abicair are utterly charming. TS (UK 1954, BW)

Reasonable Doubt ★★

10.50pm-12.40am Legend 15

CRIME Dominic Cooper lacks the everyman quality needed to carry this noir-like thriller, in which he plays a Chicago lawyer whose ethics are tested when he kills a pedestrian while driving drunk. British director Peter Howitt serves up a meaty moral dilemma, but the rules of the game change halfway through and the plot becomes too twisted. STELLA PAPAMICHAEL (Ger/Can 2014, violence, swearing)

Bad Boys ★★★

12.40-3.05am Legend 18

PRISON DRAMA A young Sean Penn stars as a street thug who tries to steal drugs from a rival gang, only for his plans to go horribly wrong. The film features flashy direction from Rick Rosenthal (Halloween II) and is punctuated with violence at a level that can be hard to stomach. But watch for the fine, neurotic turn from Penn, a star on the rise. JOANNA BERRY (US 1983, violence, swearing)

Industry
10.40pm, 11.40pm (11.10pm, 12.10am N Ireland) BBC1
Catch up via iPlayer

Industry is not like other dramas. It has been compared to Succession because it also features tortured capitalists swearing a lot – and is almost as good. But Industry is wild and jittery: it revs like a sports car rather than purring like a limo.

Witness the start of season three, where we're straight back into a world of City bankers and their clients that looks glamorous – we're on a party yacht in the Med somewhere – but is sick to its core.

Within moments, young trader and heiress Yasmin sees her father in the midst of doing something no child should see. And within a few more moments we gather she has been snapped on the yacht by a tabloid and her father has absconded with funds from the family firm.

That's the first minute or two, and one plot strand of about 17. They're powered by the Industry staples of kinky sex, hard drugs and misery, but staged with so much adrenaline, we swallow it all whole, then wonder what on earth we've swallowed.

EastEnders
7.30pm BBC1 Catch up via iPlayer

The predatory Pastor Clayton has resurfaced and tries to intimidate Yolande into changing her statement about him sexually assaulting her. Buoyed by another woman coming forward to speak out about her experience of a similar historic crime, brave Yolande faces down her abuser. A few hours later, news reaches the Trueman household that Clayton has taken his own life.

It's a brave, brutal twist, but how will Yolande feel to know she will now never get legal justice for what she, and all the other women he preyed upon, endured? And will the audience view this is the ultimate punishment, or an unnecessary way of sensationalising a thus far sensitively handled storyline? Prepare to feel conflicted. JOHNATHON HUGHES

FOOD
Nadiya's Cook Once, Eat Twice
7.30pm BBC2
Catch up via iPlayer

Nadiya Hussain has done it again. Five minutes into this programme I was excitedly compiling a shopping list so that I could make her delicious-looking roast chicken with a distinctive Middle Eastern vibe. But then – how clever is this? – she used the leftover aubergines and chickpeas as the basis for hummus, as well as the strained chickpea water to make melt-in the-mouth meringue kisses. Genius.

This series majors on saving time and money while not wasting a scrap of food, but I also love how Nadiya unashamedly champions short cuts, such as using garlic paste rather than fresh, to make life easier.

The Great British Bake Off
8.00pm C4
Catch up via C4 streaming

What on earth is going on in the Bake Off tent? There's a call for the medics when one baker dramatically faints, another falls off their stool with an almighty crash, while a third makes a momentous decision...

In between all this drama, what co-host Noel Fielding describes as "the ping-pong brigade" (because they tend to do brilliantly in one task and dreadfully in the next), do actually manage to bake a few biscuits. And if you thought last week's illusion cake showstoppers were amazing, some of these gingerbread puppet theatres will blow you away. One creation is even awarded a Paul Hollywood handshake. JR

DRAMA
Waterloo Road
9.00pm BBC1
Catch up via iPlayer

A certain high-profile Mancunian called Noel is currently selling out gigs in the real world, so it feels appropriate that Waterloo Road's very own Noel is performing at the school's Battle of the Bands. The trouble is that while he excels with a guitar in his hand, he's not so hot with a pen. And if Noel wants to continue with A-level music, head Steve needs to see grades that are higher than the 20 per cent he's currently scoring in practice tests.

Teacher Val takes a different view, and thinks that inspiring her students to perform is more important than a rigid pass or fail on an exam paper. And it seems she's willing to sacrifice everything for the sake of those beliefs. DAVID BROWN

Twisted Twins
9.00pm ITV1 Catch up via ITVX

A true-crime two-part series about twins and murder starts with Chris and Paul Dawson, identical twins and professional rugby league players who were golden boys in Sydney in the 1970s. Acquaintances here, however, allege that the twins' tendency to do everything together extended to their sex lives, and that when the pair became teachers later in life, they were inappropriately close to their students.

When Chris's affair with an underage girl was followed by the disappearance of his wife, suspicions were aroused – but it took a hit podcast, re-investigating the case 36 years later, to belatedly secure a conviction for murder. A compelling story. JACK SEALE

DOCUMENTARY

Into the Jungle with Ed Stafford
9.30pm C4 Catch up: C4 streaming

Last week, explorer Ed Stafford introduced six dads and their kids to the deep jungle of Belize. Tonight, he shows them how to survive it. "The forest is your supermarket," he says, before tasking them to forage their food for the night. The main course is roast tarantula. It apparently tastes just like chicken.

The adventure is intended to bring the dads and their kids closer together. This is especially true in the case of Ben and 14-year-old Roka. Ben opens up about the accident that paralysed his elder son Noah. The trip is a chance to reconnect with the child left behind – a task easier said than done when it concerns moody teens. STEPHEN KELLY See p134

DRAMA DOCUMENTARY

War Game: Storyville
10.00pm BBC4 Catch up via iPlayer

It is 6 January 2025 and Governor Robert Strickland (Chris Coffey) has lost the US presidential election. In response, he rejects the result and summons the armed forces to "help liberate our great nation". Thrown into that fictional, simulated scenario are a host of real-life, senior officials – including former Nato commander Wesley Clark – who, as civil war looms, attempt to resolve the crisis alongside the new president, played by Steve Bullock, erstwhile governor of Montana. Unscripted, they pool minds, squabble and try to do the right thing. Before the insurrection of 6 January 2021, such a scenario would have seemed like far-fetched fun. Four years on, it feels rather closer to home. JOHN AIZLEWOOD

Living Every Second: the Kris Hallenga Story
9.00pm BBC2 Catch up via iPlayer

Not many funerals have Dawn French, in full Vicar Of Dibley garb, reading a hilarious eulogy. Even fewer have the eulogy's subject laughing on the front row. This profile of cancer campaigner Kris Hallenga opens with her "FUNeral", or living funeral. It only gets more remarkable from there.

Diagnosed with stage four breast cancer aged 23, Hallenga vowed to save other young women from the same fate. Together with twin sister Maren, she launched the CoppaFeel! charity, showing how to check for signs of cancer. Hallenga's first film for the BBC aired in 2014. Having survived nearly 15 years against all odds, she invited cameras back to chronicle her final days. We see her winning a Pride of Britain Award, recruiting famous faces, getting cancer on the school curriculum and saving many lives via early diagnosis. Full of heart and humour, it's a film about embracing life while facing death. MICHAEL HOGAN

FILM OF THE DAY

P Boss Level ★★★★

9.00-11.00pm Film4 15

THRILLER This vastly entertaining film from Joe Carnahan (Smokin' Aces) stars Frank Grillo as an ex-special-forces soldier stuck in a time loop. Waking up every morning on the day of his death, he reaches out to his ex-wife (Naomi Watts), a techie at a shady megacorp headed by an even shadier colonel (Mel Gibson). Grillo sells the movie with an old-guy-action-hero nonchalance that is as impressive as his muscle definition. "Geri-action" it may be, but Carnahan understands how this sort of film works, delivering a fast and fun action tale. STEVE MORRISSEY (US 2020, violence, swearing)

Against the Wind ★★★

12.55-2.50pm Film4 PG

SPY Best known for writing Ealing comedies, TEB Clarke is behind this tale that follows an eclectic group of agents as they seeks to disrupt Nazi rule during the Second World War. Jack Warner and Simone Signoret stand out in a dependable cast, although director Charles Crichton is overly preoccupied with authentic detail. DAVID PARKINSON (UK 1947, BW, HD)

The Undercover Man ★★★

2.05-3.50pm Talking Pictures TV

CRIME This is a well-played, entertaining film from cult director Joseph H Lewis (Gun Crazy). Based on the real-life entrapment of gangster Al Capone for tax evasion, the story is economically filmed and driven at a fine pace. There are great turns from Glenn Ford, Nina Foch and James Whitmore, here making his screen debut. TONY SLOMAN (US 1949, BW)

The Da Vinci Code ★★★

9.00pm-12.05am Great Movies 12

MYSTERY Tom Hanks leads this faithful adaptation of Dan Brown's hit novel, as the professor of symbology who gets caught up in a search for the Holy Grail. Joined by a cryptologist (Audrey Tautou), Langdon is soon the object of a cat-and-mouse chase. The action is a tad dry, but Ian McKellen's Grail expert injects life into the story. KAREN KRIZANOVICH (US 2006, violence, swearing, drug abuse)

The Interview ★★★ 9.00-11.10pm Comedy Central 15

COMEDY As a ratings booster for their TV station, Seth Rogen and James Franco plan an interview with North Korean leader Kim Jong-un (Randall Park). However, US security forces coerce the duo into attempting to assassinate the dictator. Although this romp is only patchily funny, there are some smart jabs lurking in the script. KK (US 2014, violence, swearing, HD)

Aliens ★★★★★

10.00pm-12.40am ITV4 18

SCI-FI This brilliant sequel surpasses the original Alien in terms of sheer spectacle. Ripley (Sigourney Weaver) wakes up from cryogenic sleep to be told that the planet where she encountered the alien has been colonised. When contact with the inhabitants is lost, she's sent with a squad of marines to investigate. ALAN JONES (US 1986, violence, swearing)

Scarface ★★★★

11.00pm-2.20am Film4 18

CRIME Brian De Palma's scorching update of the 1932 classic follows the rise and fall of a Cuban refugee turned cocaine-smuggling kingpin. Al Pacino plays the ruthless criminal pursuing his own American Dream, and he gets top support from Michelle Pfeiffer as his wife. AJ (US 1983, violence, swearing, drug abuse, sex scenes, nudity, HD)

Dark Prince – the True Story of Dracula ★★★

11.20pm-1.10am Talking Pictures TV 18

HORROR This is a highly romanticised, mostly accurate telling of how real-life 15th-century Romanian warlord Vlad Tepes became the blood-drinking tyrant of Eastern European folklore – and the basis for Bram Stoker's Dracula character. Rudolf Martin acquits himself well as Vlad and The Who's Roger Daltrey convincingly portrays King Janos. AJ (US TVM 2000, violence)

RoboCop 2 ★★★

12 midnight-2.00am Sky Sci-Fi 18

SCI-FI Peter Weller returns as the cyborg policeman patrolling the streets of Detroit. Daniel O'Herlihy, ostensibly the good tycoon from the first film, becomes the bad guy this time around, teaming up with psycho Tom Noonan to destroy his company's creation. It's a very violent affair. JOHN FERGUSON (US 1990, violence, swearing, drug abuse, HD)

Truman and Tennessee: An Intimate Conversation ★★★

12.35-1.55am BBC4 12

See Film of the Day, p65.
(US 2021, swearing)

Iron Eagle II ★★

1.00-3.00am Legend Xtra PG

ADVENTURE A box-office hit in its day, this second-rate Top Gun sees Louis Gossett Jr thrust back into the danger zone, as Americans pilots join forces with the Russians to combat a new threat from the Middle East. There's plenty of gung-ho action, but the attempts at humour fall rather flat. JF (Can 1988, violence, swearing)

DOUBLE TROUBLE
Playing his twin is a puzzle in itself for John (David Mitchell)

DRAMA

Ludwig

9.00pm BBC1
Full series available via iPlayer

There was a degree of grousing by me about the complexity of the logic puzzle at the heart of the opening episode of Ludwig, but this week there are no such complaints. Because to solve the disappearance of an attendee at a team-building retreat, John must ponder the discrepancies between two photographs of the same location. It's essentially a game of spot the difference, which John states is "an entry-level puzzle". For him, maybe, but it's exactly my level.

However, the overarching mystery of this series – that of the vanishing of John's twin brother James – may, I suspect, take longer to solve. For once it's cracked, John will no longer have a reason to pose as a police detective in his sibling's stead.

Plus, you'd have two David Mitchells running around and no end of split-screen trickery of the type that used to feature in Friends whenever Phoebe and Ursula bumped into each other. Something tells me creator Mark Brotherhood will want to spin this particular case out for as long as he can to avoid just such a scenario. DAVID BROWN

SOAP

Coronation Street

8.00pm ITV1 Catch up via ITVX

Billy remained at husband Paul's side throughout his battle with MND, but to miss the moment of his passing was a crushing end to their love story. It's a stark representation of what the illness takes from people and their loved ones, and the story never shied away from the more difficult aspects of portraying the disease, but after months of investing in the relationship, it felt just too cruel – which was precisely the point.

Paul's MND has left us distressed and outraged at the unfairness of a man in his prime dying so young, and tonight's funeral will be difficult for those left behind. Can Billy and mother-in-law Bernie put their differences aside about their opposing views on how to say goodbye? JOHNATHON HUGHES

The Chelsea Detective

8.00pm U&Drama Full series on U

London's Chelsea may be thousands of miles from New York, but there's a sequence in tonight's episode that can be found in virtually every episode of seasoned US crime show Law & Order. Picture the scene: a suspect facing arrest by two officers flees on foot, one sergeant gives chase, the other then cuts the suspect off at the pass in the squad car. Smug faces for the police, while the potential bad guy regrets not watching enough 5USA.

Aside from that adrenaline shot, though, this is a case set at the usual sedate pace, with DI Max Arnold (Adrian Scarborough) heading back to school to investigate the murder of a humanities teacher. Both the class and the series itself will be dismissed tomorrow at 8.00pm. DB

DOCUMENTARY

Parole

9.00pm BBC2 Catch up via iPlayer

The online video calls that make up parole hearings are strange. As we keep seeing in this fascinating series, they're part of a process with a tinge of Kafka, requiring prisoners to prove something unprovable.

They must demonstrate that they won't re-offend: that although they have behaved in impulsive or reckless ways in the past – in some cases over many years – they won't be a risk in future. How do you set about convincing three sceptical pillars of the community of that?

The prisoners attempting it in this episode are "habitual thief" Jason, who robbed a jewellers' armed with an axe, and Jeanette, who punched and kicked a man to death. Both have clearly changed. But how much? DAVID BUTCHER

DOCUMENTARY

The Hunt for Lady Olive and the German Submarine

9.00pm BBC4 Catch up via iPlayer

On 19 February 1917, in the deep waters off the Channel Islands, the German submarine UC-18 chanced upon the 701-ton Royal Navy Q-ship, Lady Olive. It seems the Germans opened fire and, as the ship began to list, submarine captain Wilhelm Kiel rather foolishly elected to assess his crew's handiwork. As the submarine drew close, rather than abandon ship as ordered, Able Seaman William Dumaresq returned fire, sinking the submarine. Curiously, a century later, the wrecks remain elusive. Enter filmmaker Karl Taylor, a search that will take him four years and a saga with more twists than you might imagine... JOHN AIZLEWOOD

We Built a Zoo
9.00pm BBC3 Catch up via iPlayer
If you make it through the first half of this peculiar documentary, there is much enlightening trivia about the habits of meerkats. Before that, however, comes an extended mea culpa from Kyle Thomas, a well-meaning but maddening 19-year-old with 35 million followers on TikTok and an unfortunate habit of making careless, impulsive decisions.

Having learnt that exotic animals aren't pets and that building a zoo requires both professional expertise and consultation with the authorities, he joins forces with Phil Hughes, an older and wiser builder, to create an animal sanctuary. An unwieldy mash-up of Grand Designs, Natural World and a viral YouTube video, but not without interest. GABRIEL TATE

CSI Vegas/Hightown
9.00pm/10.00pm Alibi
Catch up via Now
The return of a couple of reliable US crime dramas, one slick, the other edgy, but both tonight concerned with the subject of vengeance. In the glossy CSI: Vegas, we pick up in the wake of investigator Josh Folsom's (Matt Lauria) arrest for the murder of the guy responsible for the death of his mother. It's a development that has left his colleagues worried that in this city of sin, Josh has allowed feelings of wrath to rule his actions.

Following this, the location switches to Cape Cod for season two of Hightown, where the morally complex Jackie Quinones (Monica Raymund) is determined both to prove herself as a cop and avenge the death of her best buddy Junior. DB

Life on Mars
10.20pm BBC4 Catch up via iPlayer
A crime drama from 2006 with the highest of high concepts, as modern-day copper Sam Tyler (John Simm) gets trapped in the 1970s. Epitomising the blinkered thinking of the past (as well as the writers' nostalgia for The Sweeney) is Gene Hunt (Philip Glenister), the DCI whose blunt approach came to be championed by a certain section of the audience that elevated him from anti-hero to cultural icon.

Looking back, it's hard not to feel slightly queasy, though the ingenious nature of the show's premise remains undiminished. This opening episode (introduced at 10pm by Glenister and co-creator Matthew Graham) reveals how Sam is transported back to a time of flares and Ford Cortinas. DB

WHERE THERE'S LOVE
Anna Richardson and her father Jim

DOCUMENTARY

Anna Richardson: Love, Loss and Dementia
10.00pm C4 Catch up: C4 streaming
TV presenter Anna Richardson (of Naked Attraction fame) has very personal reasons for making this documentary. Ever since her father was diagnosed with vascular dementia, she has been terrified that she, too, could become "cognitively incapable". Tragically it's a very common disease, as she finds out when she meets other families living with dementia and hears from them about their daily struggles.

Many caregivers feel guilty, isolated, angry and frustrated despite trying to do their best for their loved one. There was no preview available at the time of writing, but Anna also examines the stigma of being diagnosed with dementia as well as, on a more positive note, learning about promising new drugs that may slow down the decline in early-stage cases. JANE RACKHAM

FILM OF THE DAY

47 Ronin ★★★

9.00-11.30pm Great Movies 12

ACTION Keanu Reeves stars as Kai, an outcast who joins a band of masterless samurai, called ronin, in a bid to avenge their dead lord and to free Kai's love from a forced marriage. The splendid Japanese support cast is led by Hiroyuki Sanada, who recently won an Emmy for his performance in Shogun. It flags a bit between fight scenes, and the story lacks that sense of going up against overwhelming odds that, say, The Seven Samurai has. But it's handsomely staged, has a moving climax, and is a decent alternative to generic Hollywood action fare. DAVE ALDRIDGE (US 2012, violence)

The Flying Deuces ★★

11.05am-12.25pm
Talking Pictures TV U

COMEDY Although it's directed by genre specialist A Edward Sutherland, this is one of the weaker Laurel and Hardy pictures. Mostly pilfered from Beau Hunks and Bonnie Scotland, the material is spread too thinly, and time hangs heavily between the Paris opening, the pair's jaunty dance on arrival at the Foreign Legion fort and the careering plane finale. DAVID PARKINSON (US 1939, BW)

Airport ★★★

2.20-5.00pm Legend PG

DISASTER MOVIE This sprawling film was brilliantly spoofed in 1980's Airplane!, but it's still competent, soapy entertainment. Burt Lancaster, Dean Martin, George Kennedy and the rest of the starry cast (including an Oscar-winning Helen Hayes) are commendably serious throughout, as blizzards and bombs present crises on the ground and in the air. JOHN FERGUSON (US 1970)

Once upon a Texas Train ★★★

3.00-5.00pm
Great Action U

WESTERN Ranger Richard Widmark and ageing robber Willie Nelson put aside their lifelong feud to deal with young outlaw Shaun Cassidy in this light-hearted movie. In addition to the stellar leads, veteran writer/producer/director Burt Kennedy draws on a wonderful cast of genre stalwarts, including Angie Dickinson, Stuart Whitman and Jack Elam. TONY SLOMAN (US TVM 1988)

Conan the Barbarian ★★★

9.00-11.35pm ITV4 15

ADVENTURE John Milius's sword-and-sorcery epic sees Arnold Schwarzenegger's hero venture forth to avenge his parents' death at the hands of James Earl Jones's warlord. He's aided in his quest by thief Sandahl Bergman and would-be comic sidekick Gerry Lopez. It's all rather humourless, but it looks fabulous. TOM HUTCHINSON (US 1982, violence, swearing, sex scenes, nudity, HD)

War Pigs ★★

9.00-10.50pm Legend 15

WAR This fourth and final entry in Ryan Little's Saints and Soldiers series of dramas may be a cut-price Dirty Dozen knock-off, but it still does the job. Lieutenant Luke Goss is teamed with French Legionnaire Dolph Lundgren to train a maverick crew for a vital mission behind German lines. The script is sloppy but the leads are solid. DP (US 2015, violence, swearing)

Lock Up ★★

11.00pm-1.10am 5 Action 18

PRISON DRAMA Sylvester Stallone opts for grittier material after the cartoon heroics of his Rambo and Rocky characters, but this movie loses its way in a flood of testosterone and clichés. Sly plays a nice criminal on the verge of being released who is whisked away to a gothic prison hell presided over by a wildly over-the-top Donald Sutherland. JF (US 1989, violence, swearing, HD)

Yardie ★★★★

11.30pm-1.05am BBC2 15

CRIME Idris Elba's directorial debut is a sincere adaptation of Victor Headley's hard-hitting 1992 novel. The story follows "D" (a charismatic Aml Ameen), a Jamaican drug runner who arrives in 1980s London seeking revenge for the murder of his brother. It's a tough and humane depiction of the Jamaican diaspora in 1980s London. ANDREW COLLINS (UK 2018, violence, swearing, a sex scene, drug abuse, HD)

Personal Shopper ★★★★

1.25-3.20am Great Movies 15

CHILLER Kristen Stewart reunites with Clouds of Sils Maria writer/director Olivier Assayas for this smart ghost story. She plays Maureen, a young woman who, while working as a clothes-buyer for a supermodel, attempts to connect with the spirit of her dead brother. Its a hypnotic, haunting portrait of grief and alienation. CALUM BAKER (Fr/Ger/CzRep/Bel 2016, violence, swearing, sex scenes)

TRAGEDY Nicola Bulley's family suffered trauma from the intense scrutiny of her disappearance

DOCUMENTARY

The Search for Nicola Bulley

9.00pm BBC1 Catch up via iPlayer

On 27 January 2023, Lancashire mortgage adviser Nikki Bulley dropped her children off at school and took her dog for a walk by the river in the village of St Michael's on Wyre. Shortly afterwards, she went missing.

The disappearance sparked intense press coverage and a storm of speculation on social media. Amateur sleuths descended on the village. Divers searched the river. The police stated there was no evidence of criminal involvement, and alluded to Bulley's "vulnerabilities". A few weeks later, her body was finally found in the river a mile downstream.

For her family, it's hard to imagine a worse experience. The fact that they have taken part in this documentary, hoping to set the record straight, shows remarkable bravery. "Only we can speak about her as a mummy, partner, daughter and sister," they said in a statement. "In addition, if our experience of being in the eye of a media storm makes people think twice about how they act and what they say online, then we will have achieved some further good." DAVID BUTCHER

Amazing Hotels: Life beyond the Lobby

8.00pm BBC2 Catch up via iPlayer

Monica Galetti and Rob Rinder are still preserving the myth that they're at these glamorous hotels to work, but really they don't do much other than admire their luxury surroundings and chat to people.

They're at Rome's elegant, five-star Hotel Hassler, where the rich and famous, including Princess Diana, Audrey Hepburn, Tom Cruise and Madonna have stayed in fabulous suites (that can cost £9,000 a night). While the rates are eye-watering and the family-owned hotel's history is extraordinary, the sight that will stay with you is Monica and Rob sporting impeccable staff uniforms. "I'm feeling fabulously military," purrs Rob in his cream doorman's livery. JANE RACKHAM

Elizabeth Taylor Season From 8.00pm BBC4

Catch up via iPlayer

As a companion to BBC2's stylish three-part series about the star (episode two of which is on Friday), BBC4 are showing the 2000 Omnibus profile of the double Oscar winner in England's Other Elizabeth, charting her remarkably intense life from her days as a child star in National Velvet to her most famous role as Cleopatra.

She recalls the glory days of working with Richard Burton, Montgomery Clift, Rock Hudson, James Dean and Paul Newman, while Shirley MacLaine, Rod Steiger and Angela Lansbury share their memories of working with her.

Following this at 9pm is the critically acclaimed Cat on a Hot Tin Roof, the 1958 film based on Tennessee Williams's play. JR

SERIES FINALE

Following Asti's criticisms of his lifestyle, Max (Adrian Scarborough) is now wondering whether he ought to be signing a renewal on his lease. But the atmosphere of this leisurely whodunnit really wouldn't be the same if he weren't coming home to his houseboat to spend the evening staring at murder boards, a takeaway carton of fish and chips in hand.

The good news for those who have enjoyed such scenes is that U&Drama is set to follow this first series with a broadcast of the second. Episodes will begin next week and find the DI paired with a new sidekick, after actor Sonita Henry (who plays DS Priya Shamsie) decided to pursue other projects. DAVID BROWN

Taskmaster

9.00pm C4

Catch up via C4 streaming

Not enough credit goes to the long-suffering film crew chronicling the strange, chaotic tasks on this show. Sometimes, that means frenetically cutting together a montage of mid-tier comedians sprinting around a garden while they try to count ducks (or something similar). But this week they show their soulful side, creating an oddly moving short film of Jack Dee slowly walking around with a wheelbarrow – a sequence that, in Greg Davies's words, will "save Bafta some money on his In Memoriam".

Perhaps the TV Academy should prick up their ears – if they really want the tears flowing, time to call in team Taskmaster. HUW FULLERTON

He's back. I am, of course, referring to that feckless bon vivant Tristan Farnon, whose presence we've all missed while he's been off soldiering with the Royal Army Veterinary Corps. Much to his brother Siegfried's disgust, Tris seems to have spent his war years drifting from bar to bar, but there's a sense that this professed insouciance is merely a mask. And no doubt, Tristan's true experiences will be revealed in the weeks to come.

Helen, meanwhile, is also putting a brave face on things as she has a visit from the in-laws – the speciality of James's mother appearing to be passive aggression. DB

RuPaul's Drag Race UK

9.00pm BBC3 Catch up via iPlayer

The sixth series of the fabulously flamboyant contest gets into its catwalk-strutting stride. This second episode finds the surviving 11 wannabe drag superstars take on the annual design challenge, but there's a twist. It's a team task so they must work together and combine their sewing skills to create showstopping, runway-ready styles.

US supermodel Kristen McMenamy returns to join Mama Ru as the celebrity guest judge, alongside regulars Michelle Visage and Graham Norton. Which fashion house will finish top of the frocks and shantay through to next week? Who will fall apart at the seams and sashay away? May the best-dressed queens win. MICHAEL HOGAN

Brassic

10.00pm Sky Max Catch up via Now

If you thought last week's episode was odd – the gang came face to face with their gangster nemesis Manolito (Rachid Sabitri), but then we skipped on to three months later – it's all resolved now. We're back in the weed bunker, where Manolito has just accidentally shot himself in the head. Vinnie (Joseph Gilgun) and co hatch a plan to plant the corpse in the dead man's luxury villa, but Manolito's cleaner, his pet crocodile and a "sexy fridge" complicate proceedings.

It's Brassic at its entertaining best, a ludicrous farce with a clever structure beneath all the ribaldry. Meanwhile, Erin (Michelle Keegan) and Carol (Bronagh Gallagher) must torch a car, but struggle to buy petrol without incident. JACK SEALE

HIDDEN TREASURE
Fiona Bruce and Philip Mould follow the trail of a lesser-known female artist

ART

Fake or Fortune?

8.00pm BBC1 Catch up via iPlayer

As he follows tonight's trail of artistic breadcrumbs, Philip Mould at one stage visits a Canadian billionaire with works by the artist in question. A billionaire! Whereas at the other end of the trail sits a mild-mannered art dealer in Lincoln with a lot at stake.

Hanging on the possible authentication of his picture (bought on a hunch for a couple of grand) is a very unbillionaire-like prize – a bungalow. If his late-Impressionist painting gets the thumbs-up, he'll use the proceeds to buy a new home with no flights of stairs to risk falling down.

The work connecting these two gentlemen might be, perhaps, by a Canadian painter, showing harvesters at work picking beans. You probably won't have heard of the artist because she's a woman, and we know how the art pantheon treats women. But Helen McNicoll's stock is rising, we gather, and not just with billionaires. DBu

8.00 Fake or Fortune?
RT 2/4 Series 12. Fiona Bruce and Philip Mould investigate a picturesque outdoor scene of women in a field, in the style of Helen Galloway McNicoll, one of Canada's most celebrated female artists of the early 20th century. The picture was bought at auction in England by artist and small-time art dealer David Taylor for £2,000, but it could be worth more than £300,000 if it was truly painted by McNicoll. As if the stakes weren't high enough already, the artist's biggest collector, billionaire Canadian businessman Pierre Lassonde, flies over to see the painting. Will the team be able to find enough evidence to prove the piece is genuine? A box set of previous episodes is on iPlayer. See p89.

9.00 The Search for Nicola Bulley
RT On the morning of 27 January 2023, Nicola Bulley disappeared without a trace while walking her dog along the River Wyre in the quiet Lancashire village of St Michael's on Wyre. Over the following three weeks, the search for Nicola snowballed into an unprecedented global news and social media storm, even after her body was tragically found about a mile from where she disappeared. With access to Nicola's family and those at the heart of the case, this film charts how it all unfolded, examining the impact the events have had on the family and raising questions about how the case was handled. See page 88.

FILM REVIEWS

FILM OF THE DAY

P Passing ★★★

10.55pm-1.00am Film4 12

PERIOD DRAMA Actor Rebecca Hall makes her directorial debut with this astute character study about racial identity. In 1920s Harlem, Irene (Tessa Thompson) discovers that her childhood friend Clare (Ruth Negga), a light-skinned black woman, has been "passing" for white and is married to a racist (Alexander Skarsgard). Hall's own grandfather was black but spent his life passing as a white man, and she handles the subject with sensitivity. There's an elegance to the black-and-white visuals, too, and while the film is slow-paced, Thompson and Negga are fantastic. ANN LEE (UK/US 2021, racist language, BW, HD)

Operation Petticoat ★★★★

11.00am-1.35pm Film4 U

COMEDY This wonderfully wacky romp teams those two great farceurs Cary Grant and Tony Curtis in their only movie together. Grant is a submarine skipper trying to keep his ropey old vessel in the water with the help of wheeler-dealer junior officer Curtis. Director Blake Edwards ensures that no opportunity for a gag is missed. TONY SLOMAN (US 1959, HD)

SOS Pacific ★★★

1.15-3.00pm

Talking Pictures TV PG

DRAMA The secret of a good disaster movie is to ensure the protagonists hardly have a chance to draw breath between crises. That's the case here, as a plane crashes on an island only for the survivors to learn it is the site for an imminent atomic test. Director Guy Green sustains the suspense well, helped by a solid ensemble cast. DAVID PARKINSON (UK 1959, BW)

A Town Like Alice ★★★

4.20-6.45pm Film4 PG

WAR Nevil Shute's novel receives an earnest screen adaptation here, as it portrays the hardships faced by women route-marched across Malaya by the invading Japanese. The romance between Virginia McKenna and Peter Finch brings relief from the trials of the trek, while Takagi gives a notable performance as a sympathetic guard. DP (UK 1956, BW, HD)

It Could Happen to You ★★★ 6.50-9.00pm

Great Movies PG

ROMCOM This cosy true-story tale reunited Nicolas Cage with his Honeymoon in Vegas director, Andrew Bergman. Cage plays a good-hearted cop whose wife (Rosie Perez) has a meltdown after she discovers he has divided his lottery winnings with a waitress (Bridget Fonda). It is charming, disarming and well acted by the cast. DP (US 1994, may be edited for content)

Cat on a Hot Tin Roof ★★★★

9.00-10.45pm BBC4 15

See review p45. (US 1958, HD)

Elysium ★★★ 9.00-11.20pm Great Movies 15

SCI-FI Following the breakout success of his District 9, Neill Blomkamp was given a bigger budget and star power for this stirring movie. It's 2054 and the rich have left Earth for the orbiting paradise of Elysium. Matt Damon is determined to illegally enter this utopia to receive medical treatment, but Jodie Foster's malevolent official is out to stop him. ANDREW COLLINS (US 2013, violence, swearing)

My Cousin Vinny ★★★★

9.00-11.20pm

Comedy Central 15

COMEDY Joe Pesci plays Vinny, an inept lawyer who comes to the rescue of his young cousin (Ralph Macchio) when the lad runs into trouble with the law in the Deep South. Pesci has great fun with his role but the biggest surprise is Marisa Tomei, who plays his coarse Brooklyn girlfriend, and walked off with a best supporting actress Oscar. JOANNA BERRY (US 1992, violence, swearing, HD)

Fear Is the Key ★★★

9.00-11.05pm

Legend Xtra 15

THRILLER This satisfying action flick stars Barry Newman as a marine salvage expert who goes under cover to avenge his wife and child after they die aboard a hijacked plane. There's a cracking car chase early on, and Newman is a convincing hero, while Ben Kingsley makes an impact in his screen debut. ADRIAN TURNER (UK 1972, violence, swearing)

Bite ★★★ 11.05pm-12.55am Legend Xtra 18

HORROR This slimy B-movie shocker sees bride-to-be Elma Begovic undergoing a radical – and very icky – transformation after she gets bitten during her hen party in Costa Rica. Riffing on The Fly and the films of David Cronenberg, Bite delivers the acid-spitting, vomit-inducing goods. It's gooey, gruesome, and a lot of fun. AJ (Can 2015, violence, swearing, a sex scene)

AVP: Alien vs Predator ★★★ 12.10-1.45am ITV4 15

SCI-FI Two franchises join up here, as Lance Henriksen's tycoon leads an expedition to Antarctica after discovering a pyramid under the ice. The site proves to be the venue for a Predator v Alien smackdown, with the members of the expedition serving as the warm-up act. Sanaa Lathan shines during the finale, but this is all about the monster icons. AJ (US/UK/CzRep/Can/Ger 2004, violence, swearing)

SQUEAKY CLEAN
Greg Davies returns as crime scene cleaner, Wicky

SITCOM

The Cleaner

9.30pm BBC1 Catch up via iPlayer

Most episodes of Greg Davies's sitcom gem have been two-handers. Wicky (Davies) attends a location to carry out his work as a crime scene cleaner. He meets the person who lives there. They chat. That's more or less it. More recently, however, it's been confident enough to branch out into stories with multiple characters, and its season three debut does that to great effect.

Wicky's latest gig is at a lavish mansion, whose owner turns out to be old school pal Justin (Ben Willbond). Before he knows it, Wicky is in the midst of a full reunion of five friends, all of them happy with their lot in life, be it meagre or bountiful.

The party pooper is Wicky, who is jealous of Justin and withering towards the others, because he's frustrated with his bog-standard, middle-aged existence, so his sarcasm is really directed at himself. Typically for The Cleaner, the story has a gentle wisdom below the surface and a twist that is more powerful for being so simple and understated. JACK SEALE

TRAVEL

Grand Tours of Scotland's Lochs

7.00pm BBC2 Catch up via iPlayer

Paul Murton's yomp across spectacular rural Scotland, first shown in 2021, packs in as much as ever: geology, social history, mythology, countryside pursuits, conservation and, of course, midges. But while there are the anticipated nods to Rob Roy and Dr Finlay's Casebook, Trainspotting and dam building, there are also a few surprises: the first village to have every home powered by mains electricity, on the banks of Loch Leven, and the first seismic monitoring station on the planet in an unlikely stone hut near Comrie.

Amid such anecdotal riches, the glorious backdrops are almost overshadowed – but not quite. GABRIEL TATE

DOCUMENTARY

Auschwitz: the Inside Man

8.15pm PBS America
Catch up via Freeview Play

In 1940, Poland was under Nazi occupation. With news of what was actually happening in the Auschwitz concentration camp – where so many Poles were languishing – non-existent, clover farmer and former Polish army captain Witold Pilecki engineered his own arrest in order to infiltrate the camp.

There, the man known only as Prisoner 4859 bore witness to (and experienced) brutality and endemic disease. Yet he began to build a successful in-camp resistance movement, before – more incredibly still – plotting his escape. Contributors to this extraordinary story include his son and fellow prisoners. JOHN AIZLEWOOD

PANEL SHOW

Have I Got News for You?

9.00pm BBC1
Catch up via iPlayer

It might be 34 years and 600 episodes old but the topical panel show is still breaking new ground. A US remake recently launched on CNN (and is now available on iPlayer). It's testament to a bulletproof UK original, which has stayed politically relevant under nine Prime Ministers. It has survived the departure of its longtime presenter and seen off BBC bigwigs tempted to wield the axe.

This is the first episode to air under a tenth PM, meaning we'll get a satirical verdict on Keir Starmer's first months in the job. Ian Hislop and Paul Merton are joined by journalist Helen Lewis, plus another panellist and guest host still to be confirmed. MICHAEL HOGAN

DOCUMENTARY

Elizabeth Taylor: Rebel Superstar

9.00pm (9.35pm Wales) BBC2
Catch up via iPlayer

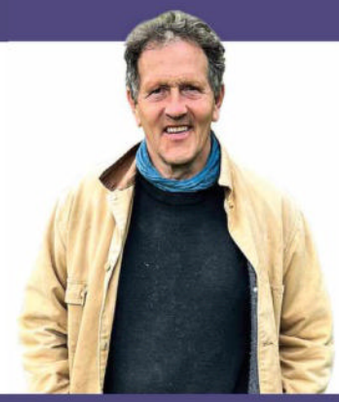

You could fill a ten-part series on Elizabeth Taylor's life. Or run a years-long podcast on her romances alone, with another on her film career. She lived life at an incredible pitch – marriages, scandals, a near-death experience here, a great movie there. This splendid series packs it in like fireworks in a handbag.

We've reached Taylor's 1960s heyday as she became the world's best-paid actress on Cleopatra and began a stormy affair with co-star Richard Burton. There are wonderful stills and bizarre details, like the Pope condemning her for "erotic vagrancy". But as Kim Kardashian says, "She did what she wanted to do." DAVID BUTCHER

For all their fine trappings and impeccable manners, half the guests at the Italian hotel seem to be happy to double-cross others if it makes a bob or two.

Cecil (Mark Umbers) is one such bounder, but has he met his match with the hotel's wheeler-dealer guest Jack (Adam James)? Then there's the tennis pro who makes quite the entrance when he arrives but who may not be as wealthy as you'd expect.

Still, the sun is shining, the scenery is spectacular and love is in the air – especially for Lucian (Oliver Dench), the handsome young man that every woman has their eye on.

MUSIC

Guy Garvey: from the Vaults
10.00pm Sky Arts
Catch up via Now

There's no obvious logic to the ordering of this series, which skips around the calendar like an elderly CD player. Tonight, we hop over to 1988 – a time when Stock, Aitken and Waterman dominated the UK charts. On the flip-side, it was also a superb year on the alternative scene, and indie nerds are treated here to a rare Night Network chat with art-rock gods My Bloody Valentine – who, frankly, make much finer music than they do interviewees.

Still, they come across a lot better than Red Hot Chili Peppers, whose saucer-eyed antics on the same show are an absolute cringe-fest.

CHAT SHOW

The Graham Norton Show
10.40pm BBC1
Catch up via iPlayer

Graham's top-billed guest, Hugh Grant, is full of surprises. Since his disarmingly hilarious turn in Paddington 2 he's thrown himself into roles that shouldn't suit him yet he utterly makes his own, the latest being the one he's talking up tonight – in psychological horror Heretic.

Joining him on the sofa is the similarly unpredictable Sebastian Stan, generating double awards buzz with dark comedy A Different Man and as a 1970s-era Donald Trump in The Apprentice, Greg Davies plugging the return of crime sitcom The Cleaner (see left), and music legend Neneh Cherry, previewing her memoir. JOHNATHON HUGHES

TALE AS OLD AS TIME
Charlie Cooper explores the UK's folklore

DOCUMENTARY

Charlie Cooper's Myth Country
9.00pm BBC3
Catch up via iPlayer

NEW SERIES

The slightly tortuous but forgivable pun of the title (Charlie Cooper playing Kurtan Mucklowe to his sister Daisy May's Kerry in deadpan BBC3 masterpiece This Country) is of a piece with the rest of this strangely charming half-hour, the first of three in which Cooper gets to grips with aspects of British folklore.

He begins in East Anglia on the trail of the legendary Black Shuck, a monstrous hound said to have terrorised the population for centuries. Concrete proof is harder to come by than eye-witness accounts and questionable forensic evidence, but Cooper does the locals the service of treating it all with the utmost respect. There is also diverting tomfoolery – dogging sites, campervans, pranks and his mum's birthday. GT See feature: page 25

FILM OF THE DAY

P Joker ★★★★★ 15
9.00pm ITV1
It may be set in Gotham City, but this sad, brooding tale of a troubled man cracking up is as far from comic-book camp as it gets. Joaquin Phoenix won an Oscar for his tour-de-force performance in the title role. (2019)

FILM REVIEWS

FILM OF THE DAY

P Joker ★★★★★ 9.00-11.15pm ITV1 15

DRAMA Infused with the grimy splendour of a Martin Scorsese movie, director Todd Phillips's magnificent origins tale for the comic-book character turns Batman's arch-nemesis into a loner who dreams of becoming a stand-up comic. Joaquin Phoenix delivers a chilling performance in the lead, his character's anxieties seemingly infesting every inch of his contorted, emaciated frame, while Robert De Niro co-stars as the talk-show host he obsesses over. With its swipes at healthcare cuts and poverty, Joker offers a damning indictment of society's ills. Its sequel is in cinemas from today. EMMA SIMMONDS (US 2019, violence, swearing, HD)

Next Stop Murder ★★

11.00-12.55pm Great Movies

THRILLER Alfred Hitchcock's Strangers on a Train is the basis for this watchable TV movie. A student (Brigid Brannagh) and a disgruntled rich girl (Allison Lange) decide to solve their personal problems by killing someone for each other. Despite unconvincing performances, this is quite atmospheric with a tense finale. SLOAN FREER (US TVM 2010, may be edited for content)

One Million Years BC ★★★

4.50-6.55pm Film4 PG

ADVENTURE Raquel Welch wears a furry bikini and roams the wilderness in this Jurassic lark. Made by Hammer, it's an absolute hoot, as it follows the war between the Rock People and the Shell People, and throws in some wobbly prehistoric monsters, courtesy of visual effects maestro Ray Harryhausen. ADRIAN TURNER (US/UK 1966, HD)

Journey to Shiloh ★★

5.05-7.10pm 5 Action 12

WESTERN More interesting today for its cast than its content, this dates from the time when Universal made programme westerns to show off its young talent. James Caan is given an early leading role as a young Texan seeking Confederate glory, only to discover the horrors of civil war. Keep your eyes peeled, too, for a youthful Harrison Ford. TONY SLOMAN (US 1967, may be edited for content, HD)

Green for Danger ★★★★

7.10-9.00pm

Talking Pictures TV PG

COMEDY THRILLER This brisk and engaging mystery is filled with a dark wit by director Sidney Gilliat. He gets the best out of the incomparable Alastair Sim, playing the Scotland Yard inspector investigating the murder of a patient on the operating table. Leo Genn also makes his mark as the surgeon who is one of Sim's five suspects. DP (UK 1946, BW)

Bridesmaids ★★★★★

9.00-11.35pm ITV2 15

See Film of the Day, p45.
(US 2011, swearing, HD)

Jaws ★★★★★

9.00-11.40pm ITV4 12

THRILLER Steven Spielberg's blockbuster tells the story of a great white shark terrorising a New England resort, and the modern-day Captain Ahab (Robert Shaw) employed to kill it. Roy Scheider (as the police chief) and Richard Dreyfuss (as a shark expert) are excellent, while John Williams's Oscar-winning music ramps up the tension brilliantly. ALAN JONES (US 1975, violence, swearing, nudity, HD)

Lone Survivor ★★★

9.00-11.25pm Legend 15

ACTION Based on a true story, Peter Berg's slick but brutal combat film stars Mark Wahlberg, Emile Hirsch and Taylor Kitsch as members of a small Navy SEAL hit squad who are dropped behind enemy lines in Afghanistan to kill a top Taliban warlord. It's unrelenting stuff and rarely pleasant, but more hardened viewers will find it difficult to look away. DAVE ALDRIDGE (US 2013, violence, swearing)

His House ★★★★

10.00-11.25pm BBC3 15

HORROR This haunted-house chiller tackles the thorny issue of asylum with satirical heft. Sope Dirisu and Wunmi Mosaku star as South Sudanese refugees who are placed in a dilapidated English council house and begin to suffer disturbing visions. Both leads bring great sensitivity to their roles and remain believable in the face of the escalating terror. ES (UK 2020, violence, swearing, HD)

Ghost Stories ★★★★

11.05pm-12.35am BBC2 15

HORROR Adapted from the hit stage play, this blood-curdling shocker revives the portmanteau chills of iconic studios Amicus and Hammer. Co-writer/director Andy Nyman also stars as a TV personality specialising in debunking supernatural occurrences, who is tasked with solving three terrifying riddles. TERRY STAUNTON (UK 2017, violence, swearing, HD)

The Girl with the Dragon Tattoo ★★★★ 11.30pm-2.40am Great Movies 18

THRILLER Following the original Swedish adaptation, David Fincher directed this Hollywood take on Stieg Larsson's novel. Its success is thanks largely to Rooney Mara's turn as spiky hacker Lisbeth Salander, who joins forces with a disgraced journalist (Daniel Craig) to investigate the unsolved disappearance of a woman nearly 40 years before. LUCY BARRICK (US/Swe/UK/Ger 2011, violence, sex scenes, nudity)

Films to stream from p30

Dickensian: Hard Times Sunday 3.00pm Radio 4

FOR THESE TIMES

David Morrissey and Jason Watkins star in a new season of Dickens dramas, which still feel as relevant as ever...

DAVID MORRISSEY plays Thomas Gradgrind, the wealthy school superintendent-cum-merchant-cum-MP with a strong belief in utilitarian, rational thought in Hard Times...

Were you introduced to Dickens as a child?

No. Dickens and Shakespeare were not a part of my [school] curriculum at all. I came to him in my early 20s. There was something about the volume and size of the books that I found intimidating, but then I realised when I started reading them that there was nothing intimidating in the language and that they rocked along.

We know now that he wrote them episodically and they were like modern soap operas. They captivated everybody and that's why newspaper proprietors just loved them – Dickens was one of the main reasons people bought their papers. He has "come back next week" cliffhangers and big moments.

I played Bradley Headstone in Our Mutual Friend on BBC2 in 1998, which is very much about intriguing characters: funny, tragic, political. I think certainly with Hard Times there is a modern political aspect to it as well. So, yes, I came to him late. It wasn't part of my education, but once I dipped my toe in, that was it – I was really smitten!

Tell us more about the connections you see to current politics in Hard Times.

My bugbear for a long time has been people like Michael Gove when he was the Secretary of State for Education [2010–14]. He downgraded what he called "soft options": arts, music, drama, media studies, things like that. So, he was basically saying to a whole generation of state-educated pupils that these subjects aren't worth it. Put your energy into what business is telling us we need: maths, English, science. The consequence of that is quashing the imagination, creativity, curiosity, the idea of fantasy.

What relevance do you see between Dickens's novels and contemporary times?

When we are talking about downgrading the arts – in particular in state schools – what you do see is the flipside of that in private schools, some of which have theatre and orchestra facilities that would rival the West End and Royal Philharmonic Society. It means you are saying the arts are available to one strata of society, basically the rich, and not available to this other side, which is basically the workforce. You are creating a narrative that is: "This isn't for you."

It's always been the case that, for the powers that be, educating the masses is a dangerous undertaking because people start asking questions – they start getting informed, they start finding things out. I hope that Labour are making all their tough decisions early on and will then start rebuilding the sort of society I hoped they would.

What do you think Dickens would make of modern-day Britain?

I think he would be surprised by how little has changed. I think he would be devastated by the river [Thames] and some of the architecture that has been allowed to appear along it. I think he would be appalled by all the noise and pollution. I think most people around at that time would have thought that in the future we would have become a more egalitarian and humanitarian place.

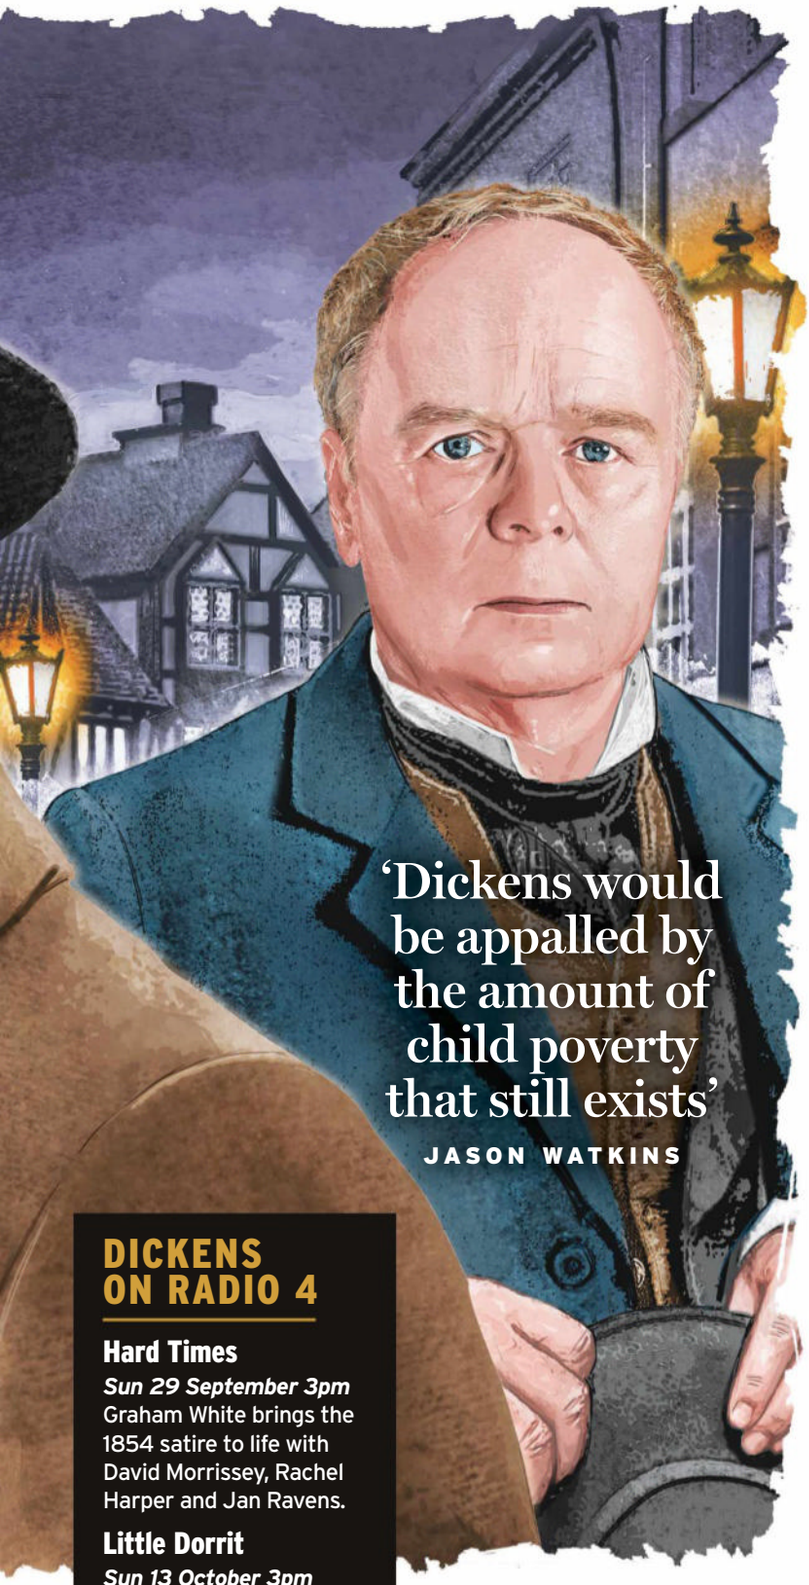

Are there any Dickens roles that you would love to play?

Dombey [from Dombey and Son]. I think he's a great character. There's something about him that I have always loved. Like Gradgrind, he's a character that's stuck in his ways. But he's also grief-stricken. He's a man who felt that he had one destiny, and it's snatched away from him, and he can't live in the present because he is so locked into the past. One of my favourite Dickens books is Night Walks. He was an insomniac and he used to just walk round London at night and write about his observations. It’s very much ruminations on life and the poverty-stricken side of London. Dickens, himself, as a character, I find fascinating. He was obviously a complex individual.

JASON WATKINS takes on a dual role in Little Dorrit, as both Charles Dickens and the villainous Rigaud, a self-confessed, cold-blooded murderer...

When were you introduced to Dickens’s work?
I first knew Dickens through films, probably A Christmas Carol. But my father had quite an eccentric relative who lived on a farm in the middle of nowhere in Lincolnshire, who we visited one Sunday when I was about 11. By the afternoon they were all pretty sozzled and he ended up giving me a Caxton Press 1910 collection of Dickens’s works. I’ve still got it; it’s beautiful. But I’ve always struggled with dyslexia, so I didn’t ever actually read the books.

I was in a play called A Farewell to the Theatre and I played a Dickens reciter who goes to America, so I did a bit of research then and read a biography. And five years ago I read Barnaby Rudge for Audible. It was then that I really got into understanding his work.

Dickens famously wrote very long sentences, so with your dyslexia, was it daunting being asked to tackle something like Barnaby Rudge?
Yes. I’d said to Audible, “This is going to be a push,” and they said, “No, this is fine, take your time,” and I did work out a way of reading it. I count that, actually, as one of my biggest achievements – to be able to read those 885 pages and make it live.

You’re playing two very different roles in Little Dorrit: Rigaud and Dickens; one’s a murder and the other is a humanistic, sympathetic man. How did you find that?
Great! I mean that’s the dream. The dramatisation is incredibly clever. Dickens is reflecting upon his own position in something that he himself has created.

He’s creating this book, these characters, and he – like all good writers – has brought a bit of himself into it.

And then, of course, with Rigaud – who is very dark and manipulative, shallow, morally bankrupt... it’s almost too much fun to play one of these villains.

One of the standout things that people remember from Little Dorrit is the Circumlocution Office, run solely for the benefit of its incompetent, obstructive and self-serving officials. Do you think this makes a connection with contemporary audiences?
It’s bureaucracy gone mad, isn’t it? The equivalent now would be how technology can dehumanise us. Dickens had the Industrial Revolution and the poverty associated with that; we have a technological revolution and it’s where our humanity fits into that.

I was talking to somebody yesterday about the problems with getting a GP appointment. Often you have to sit there at 8.30am with your finger on a button and press it quicker than anyone else so that you can have an appointment. What’s all that about?

And when you’re sitting on a phone line and they say: “We are experiencing exceptionally high call volume at the moment.” You think, “That’s a lie, isn’t it? You haven’t got enough people. You’re making us wait because you don’t want to pay the money.” I am sure Dickens would love to expose the bureaucracy of that – the lie of that.

What do you think he would make of modern Britain?
I think he would be pretty appalled by the amount of child poverty that still exists in such an enormous global economy; that within one of the top five or six economies in the world we still have a society that is unequal, where so many children starve and aren’t housed properly.

But I think he would delight in social media and people saying whatever they like. I’m sure he’d be cancelled fairly quickly... but I’m sure he’d be across that.

Are there any Dickens roles that you would love to play in the future?
I’d like to play Scrooge because that’s been part of my upbringing. I do get a little bit drawn towards the villains – Bill Sikes [from Oliver Twist] would be good and Magwitch in Great Expectations. Now you’ve asked me, I’m going to have to look at all of his books again.

Viktor Orban delivering a speech in the year he came to power

DOCUMENTARY

Continental Divides Monday–Friday 1.45pm Radio 4

For his Radio 4 How to Invent a Country series, journalist Misha Glenny explored the borders, histories and people that make up a nation. In his new series, Glenny examines how increasing political division across Europe could be undermining the continent's stability, echoing the upheavals of the 1930s. He turns his attention first to the ultra-conservative governments of Viktor Orban and Giorgia Meloni, unpacking the importance of economic and social crises in their electoral successes, whether it was the 2008 financial crash in Orban's Hungary or the Covid pandemic for Meloni's Italy. Drama on 3: Ivanov

Sunday 8.00pm Radio 3

In 2010, Rory Kinnear was an outstanding Hamlet at the National Theatre. Here, as the title character in Chekhov's first major play, premiered in 1887, he says, "He's no better than Hamlet, having a good old whine." Ivanov's self-loathing provides a disturbing psychological edge in what is supposedly a comedy, but this adaptation by Katherine Tozer and John Chambers is not designed for laughs. It's all the better for that, and Kinnear, as ever, is tremendous. SO'H

Woman's Hour

Monday 10.00am Radio 4

Newly appointed host Nuala McGovern is sharpening up the programme, and this special edition should demonstrate her strengths. The topic is the Tuam babies scandal – the mother and baby home in Galway where, through the mid-20th century, some 800 babies died before being disposed of in a disused sewage tank. It's ten years since the scandal was uncovered; McGovern and her guests revisit it. SIMON O'HAGAN

A two-part special hosted by the mildly Partridgean Andy Martin explores the inner workings of crime writer Ian Rankin (left), whose books have sold more than 30 million copies. It follows him through a typical day, revealing the notes he writes in the margin from "plough on!" to "slightly hungover" – and has an exclusive extract from the next Rebus novel, titled provisionally Midnight and Blue. Sunday–Friday 7.00pm Radio 4

It was only a matter of time before Alice and George's paths crossed, but this week they finally face off and who knows how that will end? Will receives a disturbing request, and at the dairy, Susan (Charlotte Martin, above) is confronted by a worrying dilemma after someone takes shocking action. A potential threat is identified at Brookfield and David's attempts to solve the problem lead to concerning complications, while Ben has a near miss with Bess. DAVID CRAWFORD

Articles of Interest

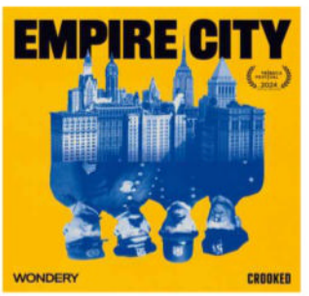

Avery Trufelman is one of my favourite pod voices. She fronts Articles of Interest, a new series of which materialises every couple of months, focusing on what our clothes say about us. She's sophisticated in the true sense of being comfortable with ideas she may not personally share and has one of those voices capable of suggesting inverted commas, italic and bold. One episode of a recent series is about why Catholic priests love their working clothes (not just for reasons of camp). Others cover what we mean by modesty in dress and how Hollywood invented its own fashion in order to avoid being dictated to by Paris. Articles of Interest wears its cleverness lightly and makes you think, much like your favourite glossy magazine. DOCUMENTARY

Proper Manc

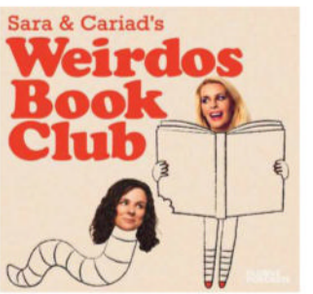

What springs to mind when you think of Manchester in the 1990s? Oasis? The Hacienda nightclub? In this neatly crafted mini-series, host and proud Mancunian David Scott steers away from pop culture and towards a terrible day in 1996, when the IRA detonated their largest bomb near the Arndale shopping centre. He focuses on the growth of gang culture and the devastating impact of street drugs. A tough listen and a different take on a key decade in Manchester's history. ANNA JONES

Empire City

Chenjerai Kumanyika unpicks the hidden, chequered history of the NYPD. Back in the 1830s, cops were financially rewarded for kidnapping black New Yorkers off the streets because they were regarded as "runaway slaves". Violence, corruption and bigotry are depressingly prevalent in these early episodes, but the resistance of the abolitionists, anti-slavery activists and everyday folk promises some hope in the rest of this eye-opening series. JA

Streams of Consciousness

DAVID HEPWORTH

If you're looking for something funny, it could be going viral now

If TikTok, Instagram Reels and YouTube shorts are anything to go by, today's world is full of furiously talented, quick-witted, camera-ready young women passing the time before their big break recording smart, knowing, short-form videos with the high pass-on quality that might make for a viral hit leading to that longed-for "break out".

Many of these performers came to the fore during lockdown, an unsought moment of unity in our increasingly siloed lives when we all responded to the same jokes. Sarah Cooper became very well known in 2020 for posting videos in which she lip-synched the speeches of Donald Trump, her facial expression hinting that the words coming out of her mouth came as much of a surprise to the speaker as they did to the listener.

Today the target doesn't have to be a famous person. Manon Mathews does a creditable Kamala Harris but what has more value is her evocation of the way that, ever since Björk, female singers in indie rock enunciate like weird children from a Gothic novel.

This is where observational comedy has migrated. Instead of a comic saying, "Have you noticed..?", there's Caitlin Reilly doing "Girl You Get Stuck Next to at Coachella" or Blaire Erskine and Kylie Brakeman collaborating on "Aunts Who Get All Their News from Facebook", the targets of the skits flagged up by captions. Half the appeal lies in whether you recognise the type or not.

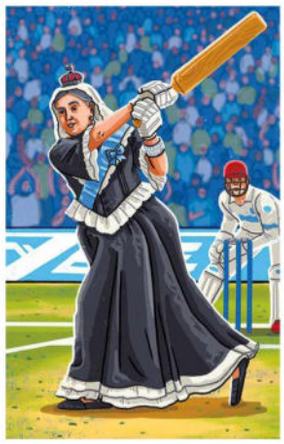

They're not all American. You probably have an idea of what to expect from the UK's Grace Long (who adopts the "nom de net" gdiddlydog) doing "British Mums When It's Sunny" or "Character in a Crime Drama Who Has Something to Hide". She's reached 2.6 million hits with "Teacher Who Has a New Boyfriend".

None of the above is what you'd call hilarious, but it all elicits the smirk of recognition. There's nothing deserving of a laugh track. In fact, half the appeal is that it doesn't all work. That doesn't matter. They're just feeling for your funnybone.

Tales from a Long Room

8.45am/1.45pm/7.45pm
Radio 4 Extra

The cricket season may be almost over but here to provide a lovely coda is one of the peaks of Radio 4 comedy from one of its greatest practitioners. Peter Tinniswood was only 66 when he died in 2003, but his legacy lives on, with the best original radio drama recognised through the annual Tinniswood Award. Tinniswood's Tales from a Long Room, first broadcast in the early 1980s, are masterpieces of surreal humour that recall, on the one hand, PG Wodehouse, and on the other, Monty Python. Purporting to tell of unknown incidents in cricket history, they are sublimely narrated by Robin Bailey's crusty old Brigadier, and today's opener – in which the Brigadier reveals Queen Victoria was quite the cricketer, much to Prince Albert's disapproval – is pure joy. SIMON O'HAGAN

It is 60 years since the first public run of the Japanese "bullet train", the Shinkansen, on 1 October 1964, a symbol of modern Japan that captured public imagination worldwide. The train's sleek look and high speed (up to 200mph) offered a new lease of life to rail transport, emulated and since surpassed by the likes of China, France and Spain. Iszi Lawrence and her guests hail this Second Age of Rail, with the Beijing to Shanghai high-speed sleeper getting top marks. However, what of high-speed rail's future with post-Covid remote working and competition from low-cost air travel? And why no mention of HS2? Strangely absent from such a stimulating discussion. TODAY'S CHOICES

Between the Ears: Einstein Fix – an Electronic Symphony

7.15pm Radio 3

Einstein Patrick Mupalu (above) is a refugee from the war in Congo. His parents split up when he was six months old and his upbringing was "not good". He made his way to South Africa, and since 2009 has run a hole-in-the-wall electronic repair shop on a street in Cape Town. Einstein's become a local legend – the man who can fix everything – and his interactions with customers, his thoughts on life, and a backdrop of beeping gadgets add up to a wonderful audio portrait of his world.

SIMON O'HAGAN

Lasting Lessons

7.15pm Radio 4

An extraordinary audio short, recorded over six months and following five teenagers who all wish to work in healthcare as they volunteer an afternoon each week in a Surrey hospice. While Farida is the main narrative voice – she's gone on to study medicine in London – the most poignant insight comes from Ben. At the start of their volunteering, he struggles to make a cup of tea or coffee. By the end, his natural empathy has brought palpable joy to the patients with whom he's formed bonds. ANNA JONES

THIS WEEK'S HIGHLIGHTS See p108

Dickensian: Hard Times

3.00pm Radio 4

A season of Dickens dramas begins with David Morrissey as the cold, calculating, "eminently practical" Thomas Gradgrind.

Drama on 3: Ivanov

8.00pm Radio 3

A new version of Chekhov's first major stage play starring Rory Kinnear in the title role.

Plus sibling rows, family feuds, and lovers at odds, as well as stand-offs between gangs, good v evil in Heaven, and one man's quest to hunt a certain whale. The programme also features musical quarrels, including Mozart v Salieri, Brahms v Liszt and Debussy v Ravel. The readers are Andonis Anthony and Pooky Quesnel. Producer Jessica Treen

7.15 Between the Ears: Einstein Fix – an Electronic Symphony
RT Einstein Patrick Mupalu (aka Einstein Fix) is the go-to repair man in Cape Town for mobile phones and laptops. Originally from the Democratic Republic of Congo, Mupalu has since 2009 sought asylum in South Africa, where he works out of a tiny shop on Bree Street, resuscitating tired batteries, cracked screens and unresponsive keys. In this electronic symphony, Mupalu's poignant personal story is told in movements, alongside the hustle, humour, energy, noise and multiplicity of voices that fill his every day. With music by John Withers. Producer Catherine Boulle

7.45 Sunday Feature: Anjin, the Pilot
New Generation Thinker Nandini Das tells the story of William Adams (1564–1620), who in 1600 – owing to a shipwreck – became the first Englishman to reach Japan. She reveals how the life of one man can offer new insights into the history of England's contact with the wider world, and with one island empire on the other side of the world in particular. The hero of James Clavell's 1975 novel Shogun, James Blackthorne, is inspired by Adams, who was also known as Miura Anjin. Producer Mohini Patel

8.00 Drama on 3: Ivanov

TODAY'S CHOICES

Between the Ears: Miniatures

9.45pm Radio 3

The devilishly clever idea of short versions of Between the Ears taking over The Essay slot made its debut in September last year with five experimental programmes (available on BBC Sounds) that took an image as their starting point. These new, boundary-pushing, mind-expanding works from audio-makers around the world focus on the elements. The opening programme on water has two women floating in a Vermont pond but also manages to buoy up an image of a strange museum, while Wednesday's take on fire is a triumphant examination of feminism and faith. ANNA JONES

The Kindness of Strangers

11.45am Radio 4

Kerry Hudson has written and reads five specially commissioned essays on the theme of receiving kindness from strangers. Hudson's childhood, the subject of her bestselling non-fiction debut Lowborn in 2019, was one of upheaval, poverty and fear. In the opening episode, we discover how she felt supported by non-judgemental librarians and, sometimes, schoolteachers, and there's remarkable story of a man on a coach who bought a travel blanket from a service station and placed it upon the obviously cold Kerry without saying a word. ANNA JONES

9.00 Start the Week
3/16. Ancient India and China: from Golden to Silk Roads. Adam Rutherford looks at the global significance of India and China from ancient times to the present day. He talks to historian William Dalrymple, whose book The Golden Road: How Ancient India Transformed the World argues that for more than a millennium India's influence was unprecedented. Also, Susan Whitfield, an expert on the Silk Roads, talks about the discovery of manuscripts in a cave in Dunhuang, northern China, which provide a detailed picture of the cultural life of the town. Producer Katy Hickman Repeated 9pm

9.45 Café Hope
3/11. Rachel Burden hosts the virtual coffee shop, where guests pop in for a cuppa and a chat to talk about what they are doing to make things better in big and small ways.
Producer Uma Doraiswamy Repeated 9.45pm

10.00 Woman's Hour
RT In a special edition, Nuala McGovern travels to Tuam in County Galway, Ireland, to visit the site of a former mother-and-baby home which came to the world's attention in 2014, when it was revealed that the bodies of up to 796 babies who died there, from the 1920s to the 60s, were disposed of in a disused sewage tank. She hears from the women who uncovered the scandal, an elderly survivor of the home, and the man tasked with providing answers for families hoping to give their children a proper burial. See choice: p109.
Producer Sarah Crawley; Editor Karen Dalziel

11.00 On the Run
2/3. At Their Feet. Continuing her history of running, writer Helen Mort discovers the surprising religious origins of Britain's modern-day position in global athletics. She'll chart the ups and downs of women runners, and also learn how 17th-century foot messengers became a powerful tool in the struggle between indigenous North Americans and European colonisers. Producer Becca Bryers

11.45 The Kindness of Strangers
RT New series. 1/5. Belief. Written and read by Kerry Hudson. The author explores the many faces of kindness, and how tiny encounters and larger actions have turned the tide in desperate circumstances.

Reports on consumer affairs.

1.00 The World at One
Presented by Sarah Montague.

1.45 Continental Divides
RT New series. 1/5. Misha Glenny explores a number of political divides facing Europe and asks whether the continent is undergoing the same crises it went through in the 1930s. He begins by investigating two countries that have elected ultra-conservative leaders over the past 15 years – Viktor Orban in Hungary in 2010 and Giorgia Meloni in Italy in 2022. See choice: p109.

2.00 The Archers Repeated from yesterday 7pm

2.15 Plum House
5/6. All in Good Faith. Comedy by Ben Cottam and Paul McKenna. The team welcome a new vicar to their parish, and Maureen and Alan try in their own way to help with church repairs and maintenance, but to disastrous effect. Meanwhile, Tom tries to patch things up with Emma. Plum House features Simon Callow, Jane Horrocks, Miles Jupp, Pearce Quigley, Tom Bell and Louise Ford. Guest-starring Robert Bathurst and Alex Lowe.
Producer Claire Broughton; Director Paul Schlesinger (R)

2.45 Bridget Jones's Diary

TODAY'S CHOICES

Surrealism Remixed

4.00pm Radio 4

When it comes to art, Russell Tovey (above) is not just an enthusiast, he's "an absolute geek." He remembers being transfixed by Roy Lichtenstein's Whaam! when he was about eight. Since 2018 he has hosted with gallerist Robert Diament a podcast, Talk Art, also the title of their two books. Now he tells the story of the revolutionary ideas that produced the Surrealist Manifestos, the first of which were published in Paris 100 years ago this month. Possibly, Tovey is not alone in his belief that life in 2024 is more surreal than in 1924. His distinguished guests include artists Gavin Turk and David Shrigley and fellow art lover Jim Moir alias Vic Reeves. DAVID McGILLIVRAY

Punt and Dennis: RouteMasters

3.00pm Radio 4

Veteran British comedians Hugh Dennis and Steve Punt met at Cambridge University back in the 1980s, and have worked together for more than three decades, collaborating on everything from iconoclastic 1990s radio/TV crossover The Mary Whitehouse Experience to Radio 4's weekly news satire The Now Show, which ended recently after 25 years. This new podcast sees the ever-genial pair taking their guests on a "journey through new knowledge", with all manner of unexpected pauses, about-turns and digressions along the way. Basically, expect anything but the topical. MATT GLASBY

TODAY'S CHOICES

Ivo Graham's Obsessions

6.30pm Radio 4

At 18, Ivo Graham (above) made a big splash on the comedy scene and collected some awards. But he hasn't quite followed through. See what you think but, for my money, he doesn't seem entirely at ease taking over the show that Joe Lycett stamped his personality on. Lycett's guests admitted to their silly passions and the new mistress of camp was withering about them. The format remains the same but, despite the four writers required to knock the material into shape, results are hit-and-miss. In episode one it doesn't help that Phil Wang claims to be obsessed with crooners, not a topic with enormous potential. He ends up sidelined, too, so not an ideal situation. The rest of the series needs to be wackier and indeed riskier. I live in hope.

DAVID McGILLIVRAY

Radio 3 in Concert

7.30pm Radio 3

The BBC Singers have made it to a century, a remarkable achievement for the choral group that first performed as the BBC Wireless Chorus on 2 October 1924. This birthday concert at the Barbican with guests Eric Whitacre, Anna Lapwood and Abel Selaocoe is especially welcome as, in 2023, the BBC attempted to disband the Singers, causing significant public protest. Happily, current Radio 3 controller Sam Jackson is committed to their survival, telling RT he wanted "to do more shouting about the BBC Singers". After seven Proms appearances and now a gala evening featuring Bach, Leonard Bernstein, musicals and a new work by Composer in Association, Roderick Williams, it looks like that is happening.

Producer Richard Vadon Repeated Friday 4.30pm

9.30 The Coming Storm
4/8. The Jump. In the summer of 2023, a low-budget thriller becomes a smash hit. Sound of Freedom is based on the true story of Tim Ballard, a former Homeland Security officer, who spent years under cover busting child sex-trafficking rings before he quit and set up his own organisation. The film was linked to QAnon, the conspiracy theory about a satanic cabal of paedophiles secretly running America, although Q isn't mentioned in the film and the movement has now withered. But Q's ideas have seeped into the mainstream, merging with a bigger story about dark forces that have captured the institutions of America, like the Federal Reserve, the FBI, and... Hollywood. Available on BBC Sounds since last Wednesday. Producer Lucy Proctor

The Real Agatha Christie: A Daughter's a Daughter

2.15pm Radio 4

In the fifth of six novels that Agatha Christie (above) had published under the pseudonym of Mary Westmacott, the author writes of the jealousy and, in some instances, sheer spite between a mother and daughter, both of whom are seeking love while dealing with substance abuse. This dramatisation by Malcolm McKay has a contemporary feel when it comes to the mental-health dynamics involved, with Dame Laura Whitstable (played by Sylvestra Le Touzel) coming across as more psychotherapist than close family friend. As the indulged, spoiled daughter Sarah (Natalie Mitson) destroys any chance of a second marriage for her mother Ann (Nancy Carroll), only to find the situation reversed when she starts dating a cocaine-pusher, it's interesting to note that Christie's own daughter was never keen on this novel… ANNA JONES

The Documentary: Saving a Sinking City – Jakarta

9.30am/8.05pm

BBC World Service

The parting gift of Indonesia's outgoing president is the new capital city of Nusantara on the island of Borneo. He announced the plan in 2019 to relocate the capital 800 miles from chronically overcrowded and constantly flooding Jakarta on Java. It will be the fifth time the capital has been moved since 1945; the difference is that Nusantara is being purpose built, in the middle of the rainforest. Indonesia's new centre will not be completed until 2045, aiming to be a model for sustainable urbanisation. At a cost of $40 billlion, one of the questions asked by BBC News Indonesia reporter Astudestra Ajengrastri is, will it be worth it? FIONA HUGHES

TODAY'S CHOICES

The Chalet School

10.30am/4.30pm
Radio 4 Extra

Tartan noir fans will be familiar with the level of violence writer Val McDermid is prepared to visit in her fiction. But who had her down as a fan of the Chalet School books? She didn't just love reading the adventure stories set in a boarding school for girls (originally in Austria, then moving to Guernsey, Herefordshire, a fictional island off the coast of Wales and finally to Switzerland after the Second World War), but also credits the aspirational novels with inspiring her as a working-class Scot to aim for Oxford and a career as a writer. Expert witnesses, including the female priest who runs the Friends of Chalet School, and a trio of ten-year-old readers work with McDermid in this half hour (first broadcast on Radio 4 in 2011) to prove beyond doubt that the 58 books written by Elinor Brent-Dyer are so much more than guilty pleasures. FIONA HUGHES

Crowd Science

8.30pm BBC World Service

At the beginning of the year, we learnt the surprising fact that, by the end of 2024, more people – to be precise, nearly half the world's population – will have voted in elections than in any previous year in history. This is the year in which nearly 100 of the world's 195 countries are going to the polls. But are we also more aware than ever of the danger of election fraud? Listener James wants to know which present voting system is the fairest. The programme responds by calling on mathematicians and political scientists – and then puts the cat among the pigeons by asking whether fair necessarily also implies best! Splendid, thought-provoking stuff. DAVID McGILLIVRAY

Age 71
Current job Has presented the Thursday early evening show (5–7pm) on Radio Caroline since 2022. "Caroline's remit is to play album tracks. The only stipulation is that it's got to be 'grown-up music'. Something old, something new, but we don't play pop." Presenters work from home, but once a month there is a broadcast from the Ross Revenge, the boat that succeeded Mi Amigo, which sank in 1980. "Can you plug the fact the boat desperately needs repairs? We're running a crowdfunder to get its bottom scraped!"
CV Born in what's now the London borough of Croydon, he did a course in civil engineering at the University of Salford. "I got too involved in the social side, running discos and dances, so I moved on and went to HMV Records." While working as a sales rep for Chrysalis Records in 1980, he listened to BBC Radio Norfolk's test transmissions, recognised the voice of Rob Bonnet, with whom he went to school, and as a result, Proctor's record review was slotted into Wally Webb's programme for two years. He was also a sound engineer for the Pink Floyd tribute band the Floyd Effect. He retired in 2020 but during lockdown was programme controller for the internet station Burwell Radio, which will end broadcasting later this year. His programme Polished Rock has been taken by stations throughout the world including EKR in Kent, run by Mark Stafford. "Mark also had a show on Radio Caroline and he said, 'I'm taking a week off. Do you fancy covering for me?'" A few months later he took over full-time.
Social media – yes or no? "Yes, I use it extensively to publicise the show. In fact I've got something to do this morning for tonight's show."
Best moment "My wife will kill me because I'm supposed to say my best moment was when I met her. Sneak that in if you can. My best radio moment was when Mark Stafford said, 'The show's yours.'"
Worst moments "On my first show on Caroline, they pulled the plug on me because the Queen had died."
Off air He lives in Burwell, Cambs, with his wife Jo and "a black and white furry monster called Baxter". Between them they have seven children and 12 grandchildren.
First radio memory "My brother, Keith, told me Radio Caroline was about to start. I listened to the first broadcast at Easter 1964. I must admit I swapped my allegiance to [rival] Radio London. I used to dash home to listen to Kenny and Cash."
Favourite broadcasters "Kenny Everett and Dave Cash from those days. And Simon Mayo. He makes it sound so easy. And we mustn't forget John Peel, who was fearless."
Ambition/Dream job "I've been a listener from the very beginning, and I always thought, I wonder what it's like to be on that boat? This is the dream job. I have to pinch myself."
Secret skills "I cook a mean curry. [What's your essential ingredient?] "Fenugreek." DAVID McGILLIVRAY

Age 71
Current job Has presented the Thursday early evening show (5–7pm) on Radio Caroline since 2022. "Caroline's remit is to play album tracks. The only stipulation is that it's got to be 'grown-up music'. Something old, something new, but we don't play pop." Presenters work from home, but once a month there is a broadcast from the Ross Revenge, the boat that succeeded Mi Amigo, which sank in 1980. "Can you plug the fact the boat desperately needs repairs? We're running a crowdfunder to get its bottom scraped!"
CV Born in what's now the London borough of Croydon, he did a course in civil engineering at the University of Salford. "I got too involved in the social side, running discos and dances, so I moved on and went to HMV Records." While working as a sales rep for Chrysalis Records in 1980, he listened to BBC Radio Norfolk's test transmissions, recognised the voice of Rob Bonnet, with whom he went to school, and as a result, Proctor's record review was slotted into Wally Webb's programme for two years. He was also a sound engineer for the Pink Floyd tribute band the Floyd Effect. He retired in 2020 but during lockdown was programme controller for the internet station Burwell Radio, which will end broadcasting later this year. His programme Polished Rock has been taken by stations throughout the world including EKR in Kent, run by Mark Stafford. "Mark also had a show on Radio Caroline and he said, 'I'm taking a week off. Do you fancy covering for me?'" A few months later he took over full-time.
Social media – yes or no? "Yes, I use it extensively to publicise the show. In fact I've got something to do this morning for tonight's show."
Best moment "My wife will kill me because I'm supposed to say my best moment was when I met her. Sneak that in if you can. My best radio moment was when Mark Stafford said, 'The show's yours.'"
Worst moments "On my first show on Caroline, they pulled the plug on me because the Queen had died."
Off air He lives in Burwell, Cambs, with his wife Jo and "a black and white furry monster called Baxter". Between them they have seven children and 12 grandchildren.
First radio memory "My brother, Keith, told me Radio Caroline was about to start. I listened to the first broadcast at Easter 1964. I must admit I swapped my allegiance to [rival] Radio London. I used to dash home to listen to Kenny and Cash."
Favourite broadcasters "Kenny Everett and Dave Cash from those days. And Simon Mayo. He makes it sound so easy. And we mustn't forget John Peel, who was fearless."
Ambition/Dream job "I've been a listener from the very beginning, and I always thought, I wonder what it's like to be on that boat? This is the dream job. I have to pinch myself."
Secret skills "I cook a mean curry. [What's your essential ingredient?] "Fenugreek." DAVID McGILLIVRAY

Age 71
Current job Has presented the Thursday early evening show (5–7pm) on Radio Caroline since 2022. "Caroline's remit is to play album tracks. The only stipulation is that it's got to be 'grown-up music'. Something old, something new, but we don't play pop." Presenters work from home, but once a month there is a broadcast from the Ross Revenge, the boat that succeeded Mi Amigo, which sank in 1980. "Can you plug the fact the boat desperately needs repairs? We're running a crowdfunder to get its bottom scraped!"
CV Born in what's now the London borough of Croydon, he did a course in civil engineering at the University of Salford. "I got too involved in the social side, running discos and dances, so I moved on and went to HMV Records." While working as a sales rep for Chrysalis Records in 1980, he listened to BBC Radio Norfolk's test transmissions, recognised the voice of Rob Bonnet, with whom he went to school, and as a result, Proctor's record review was slotted into Wally Webb's programme for two years. He was also a sound engineer for the Pink Floyd tribute band the Floyd Effect. He retired in 2020 but during lockdown was programme controller for the internet station Burwell Radio, which will end broadcasting later this year. His programme Polished Rock has been taken by stations throughout the world including EKR in Kent, run by Mark Stafford. "Mark also had a show on Radio Caroline and he said, 'I'm taking a week off. Do you fancy covering for me?'" A few months later he took over full-time.
Social media – yes or no? "Yes, I use it extensively to publicise the show. In fact I've got something to do this morning for tonight's show."
Best moment "My wife will kill me because I'm supposed to say my best moment was when I met her. Sneak that in if you can. My best radio moment was when Mark Stafford said, 'The show's yours.'"
Worst moments "On my first show on Caroline, they pulled the plug on me because the Queen had died."
Off air He lives in Burwell, Cambs, with his wife Jo and "a black and white furry monster called Baxter". Between them they have seven children and 12 grandchildren.
First radio memory "My brother, Keith, told me Radio Caroline was about to start. I listened to the first broadcast at Easter 1964. I must admit I swapped my allegiance to [rival] Radio London. I used to dash home to listen to Kenny and Cash."
Favourite broadcasters "Kenny Everett and Dave Cash from those days. And Simon Mayo. He makes it sound so easy. And we mustn't forget John Peel, who was fearless."
Ambition/Dream job "I've been a listener from the very beginning, and I always thought, I wonder what it's like to be on that boat? This is the dream job. I have to pinch myself."
Secret skills "I cook a mean curry. [What's your essential ingredient?] "Fenugreek." DAVID McGILLIVRAY

1.00pm The Mystery of… Murder at Speckled Hill 2/4. The case of Co Galway father and son herdsmen, John and Martin Lydon, who in 1881 were beaten and shot. Martin survived long enough to identify one of his assailants, Patrick Walsh, who was later convicted and hanged. At a time when all of Ireland was under British rule and Westminster was keen to quash the resistance of the Land League agitators, was this a case of the hanging of an innocent man as a warning to others, or were secret societies living by their own set of rules?
Repeated Thursday 9.05pm

1.30 Storytellers: Hidden Belfast, Forbidden Love 4/5. By Hugh Costello, based on the secret diaries of David Strain. David's standing in the community was shattered when his brother revealed he had been seen holding hands with a man. As a consequence, he found himself no longer wanted as an elder of the church. With Desmond Eastwood.
Repeated Thursday 9.30pm

9.05 The Mystery of… Murder at Speckled Hill 2/4. The case of County Galway herdsmen, father and son, John and Martin Lydon, who in 1881 were beaten and shot. Martin survived long enough to identify one of his assailants, Patrick Walsh, who was later convicted and hanged. At a time when all of Ireland was under British rule and Westminster was keen to quash the resistance of the Land League agitators, was this a case of the hanging of an innocent man as a warning to others, or were secret societies living by their own set of rules?
Repeated from Saturday 1.05pm

9.30 Storytellers: Hidden Belfast, Forbidden Love 4/5. By Hugh Costello. The impact of David Strain's secret diaries. David's standing in the community was shattered when his brother revealed he had been seen holding hands with a man. As a consequence, he found himself no longer wanted as an elder of the church. With Desmond Eastwood.
Repeated from on Saturday at 1.30pm

Age 71
Current job Has presented the Thursday early evening show (5–7pm) on Radio Caroline since 2022. "Caroline's remit is to play album tracks. The only stipulation is that it's got to be 'grown-up music'. Something old, something new, but we don't play pop." Presenters work from home, but once a month there is a broadcast from the Ross Revenge, the boat that succeeded Mi Amigo, which sank in 1980. "Can you plug the fact the boat desperately needs repairs? We're running a crowdfunder to get its bottom scraped!"
CV Born in what's now the London borough of Croydon, he did a course in civil engineering at the University of Salford. "I got too involved in the social side, running discos and dances, so I moved on and went to HMV Records." While working as a sales rep for Chrysalis Records in 1980, he listened to BBC Radio Norfolk's test transmissions, recognised the voice of Rob Bonnet, with whom he went to school, and as a result, Proctor's record review was slotted into Wally Webb's programme for two years. He was also a sound engineer for the Pink Floyd tribute band the Floyd Effect. He retired in 2020 but during lockdown was programme controller for the internet station Burwell Radio, which will end broadcasting later this year. His programme Polished Rock has been taken by stations throughout the world including EKR in Kent, run by Mark Stafford. "Mark also had a show on Radio Caroline and he said, 'I'm taking a week off. Do you fancy covering for me?'" A few months later he took over full-time.
Social media – yes or no? "Yes, I use it extensively to publicise the show. In fact I've got something to do this morning for tonight's show."
Best moment "My wife will kill me because I'm supposed to say my best moment was when I met her. Sneak that in if you can. My best radio moment was when Mark Stafford said, 'The show's yours.'"
Worst moments "On my first show on Caroline, they pulled the plug on me because the Queen had died."
Off air He lives in Burwell, Cambs, with his wife Jo and "a black and white furry monster called Baxter". Between them they have seven children and 12 grandchildren.
First radio memory "My brother, Keith, told me Radio Caroline was about to start. I listened to the first broadcast at Easter 1964. I must admit I swapped my allegiance to [rival] Radio London. I used to dash home to listen to Kenny and Cash."
Favourite broadcasters "Kenny Everett and Dave Cash from those days. And Simon Mayo. He makes it sound so easy. And we mustn't forget John Peel, who was fearless."
Ambition/Dream job "I've been a listener from the very beginning, and I always thought, I wonder what it's like to be on that boat? This is the dream job. I have to pinch myself."
Secret skills "I cook a mean curry. [What's your essential ingredient?] "Fenugreek." DAVID McGILLIVRAY

‘I’M A BIT OF A LONER, REALLY’

Sir Michael Palin reflects on the death of his wife Helen, why he parted from the BBC and how, at 81, he intends to keep travelling the world

INTERVIEW BY MICHAEL HODGES

RAY BURMISTON: ALAMY

Ah yes,” says Michael Palin. “Fingers up bums.” Britain’s nicest man, like it or not – and he doesn’t much, as we’ll find out – is talking about his newly published volume of diaries, There and Back, which covers 1999 to 2009. It doesn’t skimp on personal detail, not even the indignities of GPs’ prostate checks. “There are a lot of bathroom moments in the diaries,” Palin says, speaking in the book-lined sitting room of his north London home.

On the loo or in transit, Palin writes it all down, so we know what happened and so does he. “A diary gives you a memory,” he says. “Which is wonderful.” Particularly wonderful to Palin, perhaps, because his Monty Python friend Terry Jones lost much of his short-term memory to frontotemporal dementia before dying in 2020, aged 77. “In the diary, there’s a feeling of the curtain slowly coming down. Terry is not quite what he was before. We’re all getting into the departure lounge, and we’re trying to work out how to deal with this. That’s what makes this diary different; the feeling of time running out, a feeling of loss.”

The most painful loss for Palin would come later, marked in a diary we are yet to see – his wife Helen died last year, aged 80, after a long and painful struggle with kidney disease. Here in There and Back, very much alive, she happily acquiesces in her husband’s plans to go away for travel documentaries. Palin writes of their marriage: “Love grows in direct proportion to the time I spend away.”

Does he still think that, or now regret he didn’t spend more time with Helen? “I don’t have regrets really,” he says, then pauses. “Perhaps towards the end, when I was doing the later travel journeys like North Korea. Helen was then less well, less good at looking after herself, unfortunately, and that was a slightly difficult time. I don’t think she particularly wanted me to go away then, but she knew that my interest in travel and other people was very deep-seated, it wasn’t because I wanted to get away from home – it wasn’t that at all.”

When Helen died, he continued to keep the diary. “They were difficult entries to write,” he says. “Helen was ill for a couple of years, so it wasn’t a sudden death, and I was helping her and caring for her through a lot of pain. Writing this down helped me to deal with it. I needed to remember all that."

And so he goes on, still wandering the world and telling us all about it. His last series was about Nigeria, which followed recent documentaries on Iraq and North Korea, all made for Channel 5, his broadcasting partner since his last series with the BBC in 2012. "There was the feeling that the BBC wanted to interfere a little more," he says of his departure.

"They wanted to control it a little more. And they had this new way of presenting shows – which I would get absolutely, desperately frustrated with – where they would show, in the first five minutes, all the great moments of what was to come. Because this captured viewers. Otherwise, as soon as they see Michael Palin, they'll switch off. The BBC were going in a different direction, and presentation was going in a different direction." Will he keep travelling? "In the diaries I talk a lot about being in my 60s. Well, I'm now 81, and I'm planning another series."

What comes across in the diaries is the sheer amount of stuff he does: planning trips, book tours, public appearances for charities. "I'm constantly banging on about the emails and number of people asking me to do things," he says. "I was asked to do Strictly Come Dancing but thought, 'That pathway is being a warm, joyful, much-loved celebrity.' I'm not that. I'm a bit of a loner, really. Just being a celebrity or a personality doesn't interest me that much."

If he can sound a little grumpy, in conversation and on the page, who's to blame him after all those years of being told how lovely he is. "Michael Palin, nicest man," he says with a touch of weariness. "How do you deal with that in a diary? Well, you've got to say some days you weren't really nice. You write about them and you accept them, and that's it. I am quite contrary; I don't like being pushed in a certain direction. I don't like doing what seems to be the 'proper thing'."

Does he like the Palin in the diaries? "I'm a friend of his. So I suppose I do, otherwise I wouldn't have gone on day after day writing this stuff. The point is, do other people like him?" I think we know the answer to that one.

The true story of jewel thief Joan Hannington

JOAN
JOAN HANNINGTON
Joan Sunday 9pm ITV1
A gorgeous, confident woman, bedecked in furs and jewels – who'd ever suspect she was one of Britain's most notorious thieves? But that's exactly how Joan Hannington operated, donning disguises like armour as she sought to protect her daughter via any means necessary – rising from petty crime to high-stakes diamond theft, and getting away with it. Joan (Ebury Spotlight, £10.99) is her story in her own words, detailing how she used people's preconceptions against them as she rose to notoriety in a 1980s underworld. See feature: page 18

NEWBORN
KERRY HUDSON
The Kindness of Strangers
Monday–Friday 11.45am, 12.30am Radio 4
Kerry Hudson's writing has long been praised for its candour and emotion, much of it relating to a troubled childhood in poverty. In addition to her series of essays commissioned for Radio 4, this year she published Newborn (Chatto & Windus, £18.99), exploring her journey into parenthood, and chronic health issues – all while being stuck in a foreign country as the pandemic hit. Newborn details how she learnt one can create a loving and healthy environment without necessarily having a personal blueprint to work from.

OUR EVENINGS
ALAN HOLLINGHURST
Open Book Sunday 4pm R4
Twenty years after his Booker-winning The Line of Beauty, Alan Hollinghurst remains one of Britain's top authors, once again bringing us a portrait of England – this time covering half a century as we follow young Dave Win from his awkward teens through to his 60s. Our Evenings (Picador, £22) explores race, class, sexuality and more, as Dave is drawn into a society different from his own and grows into himself, fighting discrimination to try to reach happiness. RHIANNON THOMAS

PRETTY IN PINK

Reliable, charming and honest... Japanese anemones will flower happily in most gardens, says Joe Swift

Some plants are so reliable, easy to grow and such good value that I plant them into most gardens I design if the conditions are right. Japanese anemones are right up there on my list; they flower for weeks from late summer into autumn, do well in sun or shade, rarely need staking, and their vine-shaped leaves make a very useful ground cover to combat weeds. Have I missed something? Oh yes, they're gorgeous, too! Their open, simple flowers are charming and honest, and their versatility means they look great in a range of garden styles, from cottage to contemporary.

You can go out and buy some in flower now, pop them in where you want them and, being perennial, they'll come back year on year to remind you why you chose them in the first place. After a few years you'll have a decent clump or two to lift, divide and dot around into available gaps in your garden.

Japanese anemones come in a range of pinks and whites. They work nicely in clumps in borders – or you can plant them in chunky blocks to soften bottoms and edges of walls or at the base of a pergola post. I've experimented with some in quite deep shade (under canopies of trees and against north-facing walls) and found that if they have some moisture while establishing themselves, they will flower reliably if not as prolifically as those that get more light.

My favourite is the pure white Anemone x hybrida "Honorine Jobert": its flowers have yellow centres and carry a subtle pink tinge on the underside of the petals – perfect for lifting a shady spot. Anemone x hybrida "September Charm" is understandably popular, as it has a very long flowering season from the end of July right through to October. Its light pink inner petals contrast nicely with darker pink outer edges. For a stronger pink, look out for Anemone hupehensis var japonica "Prinz Heinrich". It has deep rose-pink, semi-double flowers and a slight curve on the petal, creating a fine quill effect. Gorgeous! Most grow to between 90cm and 1.2m tall, so are useful for the middle to back of a border.

Prepare the soil well by digging in plenty of leaf mould. If you plant them now, water well in dry spells until autumn. Next year, feed them from late spring onwards using something like pelleted chicken manure.

Joe Swift is a presenter on Gardener's World, Friday BBC2 (not Wales)

covering weedy areas

Does your garden have weedy or grassy areas or do you have a veg patch you want to plant up next year? Now is a good time to save yourself a lot of future work... Things are slowing down, but weeds are still germinating. Covering them (and lawn areas) blocks light and kills them off. For instance, I've made new beds and won't be planting till next year. By covering them now, I'm ensuring that weed seed won't settle on the soil, nor will any be able to germinate and multiply.

Consider the environmental impact of buying any product: ideally, re-use something you already have. And whatever you use, weigh it down well using anything to hand, or you can buy specifically designed bent metal pegs.

WHAT TO USE

■ CARDBOARD/ OLD BOXES This works very well; remove any staples or tape, and flatten out. Make sure to overlap, and (if you have enough) double up the thickness. In spring you can remove it (and compost) or it may have broken down enough to dig in.

■ BLACK PLASTIC Works well as it blocks light and heats up beneath on a sunny day to kill off unwanted plants and seed. It doesn't let water through, either. I would use it if I had some knocking around already.

■ LANDSCAPE FABRIC This comes in rolls and is designed specifically for the job. The wider the roll the easier it is to cover large areas (overlap joins, or the weeds will push through). Depending on what you do with the area you may want to leave it down then plant through (by cutting holes or slits) and mulch over in spring.

Into the Jungle with Ed Stafford
Tuesday 9.30pm C4

CHUCKING KIDS ACROSS waterfalls, feeding them spiders, making them sleep with jaguars – it's a wonder Ed Stafford wasn't detained by Belizean social services while filming his latest show out there. But that's the whole point of Into the Jungle with Ed Stafford: the Guinness World Record-holding explorer took six British children and their dads into the wilds of Central America on a challenging but hopefully bonding trip. Here's his guide to what we can all learn from the experience.

KIDS NEED TOUGHENING UP A BIT

"The problem is, modern life's a bit easy. I'm a big advocate of risk and adventure and challenges and toughing it, because you need those to evolve as a person. But I don't think there's enough of that in everyday life. You can just go to the fridge and get food, you can turn the tap on and get water – you can be very broken and still exist in this life. I think I've evolved as a human being because I've gone on lots of adventures. Not because I'm now super-tough and can kill a snake, but because it's humbled me and allowed me to work through stuff that I probably wouldn't have if I'd been sitting in an office."

ANYONE CAN HAVE AN ADVENTURE

"We did this show with dads, but it could all definitely work with mums, too. We haven't talked about doing it with nannas yet, but you never know! And really, anyone can be adventurous. In one of the programmes, we abseil 160 feet down into a sinkhole, and we've got this 12-year-old girl, Immie, who was born with limb difference, so her arm ends at her elbow.

"Abseiling is intimidating in any case, and she was so distraught at the top of it. I thought, 'Have we taken this too far?' But her dad's help and kindness and utter love got her through it, and she was so elated when she got to the bottom. One of our safety crew, an ex-SAS guy, came up to me and said, 'That's the most impressive thing I've seen in my whole life.' It was beautiful, and I'm choking up just talking about it."

YOU ONLY NEED A FORTNIGHT

"We saw a huge amount of change in these kids in just ten days. It's all gradual, because we knew we couldn't push them too far too soon, or there'd be a traumatic experience. So initially they're in little cabins or huts, and eventually they're out in hammocks, and then they're building their own shelters. But any holiday can be full of new challenges. When I take my family away, we're not really sitting on the beach and drinking beer, we're looking for new experiences. I think that's healthy."

A FEW MOUTHFULS OF BUGS WON'T HURT

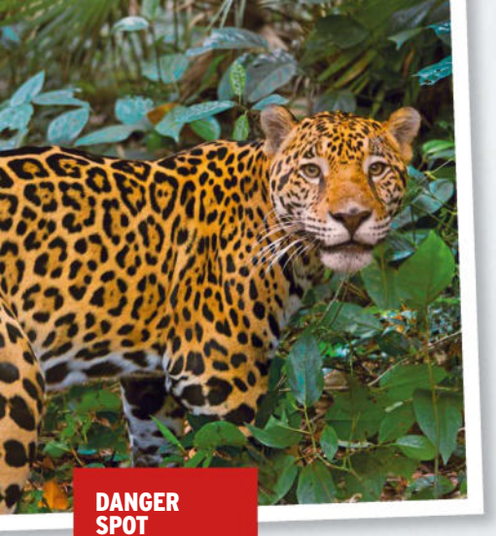

"That stuff works televisually, because it plays into people's fears, but it's also nice because when we sent everyone out foraging into the jungle, they came to recognise the value of food and the stuff we take for granted. And once you've eaten ants or cockroaches, from then on you know that you can if you have to. For me, that's not about prepping for armageddon, it's about interacting with nature."

TAKE A SCREEN BREAK

"I know it's not easy. If my kids have the option [he has three with fellow explorer Laura Bingham, and the family moved to Costa Rica last year so the children could have a more outdoorsy upbringing], they'll grab some Pringles and watch TV all day. But invariably when the kids engage with foods they've not tried before, or activities they wouldn't have tried if they'd been on their phones, they end up happier.

"It's the same with adults. With the dads on this show, they were all talking round the campfire with each other till one o'clock in the morning – there was no alcohol or anything, and normally people would have gone to bed much earlier without that lubricant; but because they didn't have any screens, they were genuinely engaged with each other. I'm in a WhatsApp group with them, and now – ten months later – there's still about 200 messages a week. It's gorgeous, but I've had to archive it because I can't have all these messages popping up all the time!"

DON'T SWEAT THE JAGUARS

"There was genuine jeopardy on this show: the possibility of getting bitten by a snake, for instance, or attacked by a jaguar – one of our local guides saw a jaguar only ten metres outside of camp while we were all out there sleeping in hammocks. But I knew that we were far more likely to die in a road traffic accident on the bus journey from Belize City – and we could use that feeling of being in a strange place.

"Someone came on one of my expeditions, and because he was in an alien environment and his brain was spinning, he asked, 'Will these Ibuprofen work in the jungle?' Being somewhere unfamiliar destabilises you and therefore makes you more open to change. Go somewhere weird and wonderful – anywhere – and you can really learn about yourself." ED GRENBY

THE COST OF KEEPING WARM

Gas and electricity bills will be going up from 1 October, so act now, says Paul Lewis

Just as the weather gets chilly, the cost of putting the heating on will cost more. From Tuesday, the typical bill for people who use gas and electricity, and pay by direct debit, will rise by nearly 10% – more than wiping out the 7% cut we got on 1 July. And the latest forecast is that in January prices will rise slightly again.

The actual change in your bill will depend on how much energy you use, the mix of the two fuels, and how you pay. Detailed figures from the energy regulator Ofgem show that the price of each unit of gas will be nearly 14% higher, while electricity units will rise by nearly 10% – putting them where they were before the July cut. Standing charges will rise, too, though only by a small amount, so the cost of having electricity and gas delivered to your home will be £6.50 a week.

> 'Gas will be 14% higher and electricity will rise by 10%'

However, people who wait for the quarterly bill and pay by credit card or cheque will face a bigger rise on top of their already record standing charges, taking the two to £7.24 a week even if they use no fuel at all. They also pay the highest charges for the electricity and gas they do use. Five million households pay quarterly – if yours is one, you should definitely consider changing to direct debit.

On average, standing charges have risen by 80% since winter 2021/22, and Ofgem found that nearly two out of three who responded to a consultation said they should be abolished. Ofgem warns that would put up costs for many low-income households who are high users and could cause problems for suppliers. It suggests instead reducing the maximum standing charge by between £20 and £100.

It also wants suppliers to offer tariffs with lower standing charges or even none at all. Some already do that, so if you are a low user it might be worthwhile finding tariffs with lower standing charges.

Smart meters should make the change to higher prices automatically on 1 October. But if you do not have one – or yours does not work – read your meter last thing on Monday 30th so you do not pay the higher price for units used before Tuesday.

WHAT IS EQUITY RELEASE?

FREE GUIDE

Unlock the tax-free cash tied up in your home

Equity release is a way for homeowners aged 55 and over to release the value locked in their homes. One of the benefits for many people is that there are no monthly repayments required, as the money you borrow, plus accrued interest, is repaid when you pass away or move into long-term care.

Plus, all plans that meet the Equity Release Council's standards come with a no-negative equity guarantee, which ensures that your estate will never owe more than your property is worth when it is sold.

You may be able to release from a minimum of £10,000 up to 53% of your property's value. The money is yours to enjoy spending once you've repaid any existing mortgage, which is a condition of equity release.

Equity release may involve a home reversion plan or a lifetime mortgage, which is secured against your property and will reduce the value of your estate and impact funding long-term care.

Advice is required before proceeding with equity release, and Radio Times have teamed up with Age Partnership+ to provide an equity release service where you can find out more and get a free no-obligation quotation. Only if your case completes would an advice fee of £1,995 be payable.

Other lender and solicitor fees may apply.

PHRASE OF THE WEEK Foot the bill

Have you ever wondered why in paying for something we "foot the bill"? This curious expression arose in the 19th century, when anyone writing in an account ledger would tot up a column of figures and write the total at the bottom, or foot, of the column.

The modern use of settling an account comes from a similar practice when the amount owed would be totalled at the bottom of the bill.

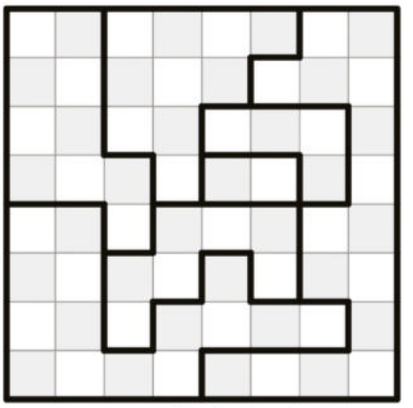

Other expressions originating from accounting include "going into the red". Red ink was routinely used to enter debit amounts. To "make ends meet" is also thought to have begun with bookkeeping, in which the total at the bottom ("end") of the column of income must at least match that at the bottom of the expenditure column if you are to live within your means.

NOT FAMILY-FRIENDLY

"Mum! What can we all watch together on Sunday at 8pm?"

"I know, there's a detective drama called Grace on ITV1, we'd all enjoy that. It's about a lady who's kidnapped by a masked man, buried in a box and then tortured with a branding iron."

Honestly, I despair.

SORE ABOUT MYFANWY

The closing tribute to England's green and pleasant land on Last Night of the Proms (14 September BBC TV, Radio 3) happily featured, as always, Jerusalem; for Scotland there was The Skye Boat Song; for Ireland Danny Boy; but for Wales – what? I suspect the song chosen, Ar lan y môr (Beside the Sea), would've been known to very few people in Wales. This selection was mysterious when the comparable, and most-loved, national melody would've been Myfanwy. In future, please can this be sung – and in Welsh, albeit with English subtitles.

Michael Benoy Ewhurst, Surrey

...Did Katie Derham really mean to say, "The atmosphere in the hall at the Last Night of the Proms never fails to disappoint"? One negative too many, methinks, but I guess this slip just proved it was live. Great Last Night, though!

WRONG CALL

As a fan of British football across all the leagues, I was frustrated by BBC radio's coverage of the matches on 17 September. Both 5 Live and 5 Sports Extra chose to persist with reporting on the Liverpool game (virtually won) and Manchester United's (already won) instead of cutting to the nail-biting penalty shoot-out between Preston North End and Fulham, which ended 16–15, and turned out to be a record! There was a reporter at this game, so why not stay with the unfolding drama, which would have been great radio!

Barbara Alcock Folkestone, Kent

"EUSTON, WE HAVE A PROBLEM..."

I started watching Nightsleeper (15 September BBC1) and the mantelpiece clock stopped just after 9pm! It's great entertainment but perhaps more comedy than thriller. Sharon Small, who might pass for Liz Truss, plays a government minister called Liz; and David Threlfall, as cyber expert Paul Peveril, is made to look like godfather of modern cryptography Whitfield Diffie. As it played out in real time and all six episodes were available on iPlayer, I had to resist the temptation to stay up all night watching it.

LETTER OF THE WEEK

A lesson in French

My wife and I were glued to the brilliant six-part French drama Sambre: Anatomy of a Crime (BBC4). It was based on the true story of a serial rapist who went undetected for decades largely due to the misogyny of the police force. The acting was superb, and the way it covered 30 years through the eyes of different people was clever and effective. Unlike many British TV crime dramas, it managed to convey the horrors without any gratuitous violence. And that was one of its many strengths, which made it compelling viewing. I hope British productions learn from the producers of Sambre. Violence happens, but it doesn't have to be shown in graphic detail.

NIECE WORK

I read Marian Jennings's letter (Feedback, 21 September) regarding the pronunciation of Kamala Harris's name with great interest. My husband reminds me that Americans pronounce "comma" very differently, and I happened to see a YouTube video in which Kamala's very sweet nieces taught an audience how to say their aunt's name – indeed, they all pronounced it "Karmala", as in "Calmer-la". But this could run and run!

STREETS AHEAD

The performance of Peter Ash, whose character Paul Foreman died recently of motor neurone disease in Coronation Street (ITV1), was brilliant, acting so expressively just with his eyes. I am much in awe of his skills as an actor and his dedication to "getting it right".

Thank you, Peter, and the whole Corrie family.

MAN IN THE WHITE SUIT
Kenneth Cope, with co-stars Annette Andre and Mike Pratt in 1969

KENNETH COPE 1931–2024

The Randall and Hopkirk star who gave the show cult status

Kenneth Cope cornered the market in Jack-the-lads with a twinkle in their eye and mischief up their sleeve. He first came to attention as Jed Stone ("Sonny Jim") in Coronation Street from 1961–6, but demonstrated his comedic talents as one of the team on That Was the Week That Was, the hard-hitting BBC satire. He seemed right at home in its chaotic "live" environment.

He guested in The Avengers, Doctor Who, Miss Marple and Minder, among other famous shows, but was best known as Marty Hopkirk in the hit ITC series Randall and Hopkirk (Deceased). Created by Dennis Spooner (and called My Partner the Ghost in the US), this comedy drama told the story of a private detective, killed in the line of duty, who reappears as a ghost that only his ex-partner, Jeff Randall (Mike Pratt), can see or hear. Cope spent the entire series wearing an immaculately white suit (sans pockets) that apparently was a nightmare to keep clean. However, that image, allied to Cope's endearing performance as the cowardly phantom, ensured the show cult status.

Apart from acting, Cope was also a writer and even contributed a couple of episodes to Turn Out the Lights, a sitcom spin-off from Pardon the Expression, itself a rare spin-off from Coronation Street centring on Leonard Swindley (Arthur Lowe). He had a stint on Brookside, but fittingly, his last role was back on the Street, in 2008, reprising the role of Jed Stone.
DICK FIDDY TV historian, BFI

BACK TO THE 50s

While reading RT's tribute to Phil Swern (Feedback, 14 September), I was swept back to the 1950s to a Glasgow tenement. There I would prance around the kitchen with my two brothers to the wireless playing Poppa Piccolino (perhaps the Petula Clark version?), which was the single missing from Phil's collection that he found at a car boot sale. For most of the day, this signorina shall now have a not unwelcome earworm of a concertino from "sunny Italee".
Margot Alexander Edinburgh

OLDIE BUT A GOODIE

I laughed out loud hearing Geoffrey Munn talking about his passion for collecting on Antiques Roadshow (15 September BBC1). For all the Fabergé and other valuable artefacts he'll have collected over the years in his wonderful career, the valueless blue-and-white porcelain fragments he has dug out of the mud hold so much interest and fondness for him.

I'm afraid I have about 40 of these bits, too, dug up from my and my sister's garden. I sadly try to identify where they could be from and get stick for my collection! So, Geoffrey, you're not alone – and every spadeful throws up a tiny "gemstone" for me. I feel a mosaic coming on...
Jean Bruce Dunstable, Bedfordshire

HS2 FAILINGS

I was eagerly anticipating Richard Bilton's Panorama investigation (16 September BBC1) into the scandalous, wasteful HS2 project. While he had revealing interviews with people close to the project highlighting the failure of both the then government and the HS2 bosses to address the vast overspend, it failed to look into the bigger picture of why in past decades Britain has become so bad at infrastructure. It would also have been good to hear why the original plans failed to take into account the engineering consequences of planning for such a fast train system, arguably not really necessary in the UK with its relatively short distances between major cities.
Martin George Hythe, Kent

SUBTITTERS

I'm thoroughly enjoying The Chelsea Detective (Wed, Thu U&Drama) but was surprised to learn via the subtitles that South Kent has acquired a new Tube station – what a boon that will be. Now, too, it seems one doesn't send an old car to the crusher, you get it "sawn".

Red Bee Media who provide the subtitles really need someone with experience of London, as anyone visiting the V&A knows you go to South Ken(sington) Tube. And anyone who drives would know you don't saw up an old car if it's not in use, you put it on a SORN (Statutory Off Road Notice).

STINGRAY AT 60

The undersea saga that's still making a splash

With the words "Stand by for action", a thrilling new children's sci-fi series launched on ITV on 4 October 1964. Stingray was a sophisticated puppet show created by Gerry and Sylvia Anderson, who had given the world Fireball XL5 and would go on to dream up Thunderbirds, Captain Scarlet and the Mysterons and Joe 90.

It followed Wasp (the World Aquanaut Security Patrol) and their encounters with undersea civilisations. With a budget of £20,000 per episode, it was the first long-running British TV series to be filmed entirely in colour – although it would be some years before viewers would be able to actually watch it in colour.

Gerry's son Jamie Anderson says the development made production company AP Films pioneers: "For the teams responsible for making the transition from black and white to colour, it was a massive pain. But it became the 'unlock' to longevity, so it's a real turning point." This, coupled with a step-up in the "Supermarionation" process and special effects, gave the show staying power on repeat viewings, including on BBC2 in the 1990s.

"That 90s resurgence was so key and was such a testament to the work done by the whole team," says Jamie, 39, managing director of Anderson Entertainment, which is building on Gerry's legacy. "I was a kid among other kids who were finding out about the show for the first time and they thought that it had been made for them recently. There was no concept that they were already watching a 30-year-old piece of television!"

The company shot 39 episodes of Stingray in new studios built inside a converted factory unit in Slough, Berkshire. Setting the series in water did have its drawbacks, however. "In the early days one of their tanks burst and flooded the studio," explains Jamie.

> 'One of their tanks burst and flooded the studio'

There was a greater emphasis on action: "It is all about conflict, so the stakes are raised from the opening titles onwards. They were grabbing audiences and keeping them hooked in a brand-new way."

That said, character dynamics were more complex compared with preceding shows. There was Commander Sam Shore, head of the Wasp HQ Marineville; his daughter Atlanta, a lieutenant; and the Stingray submarine captain Troy Tempest, whose affections were torn between Atlanta and Marina, a mute woman from the underwater kingdom of Titanica. "The love triangle always surprised me because it doesn't feel like a kids' thing. You're not that interested in grown-ups being icky and 'eughhh' when you're seven or eight – but it was still interesting. That's the precursor to the dual-level writing of Thunderbirds."

BIG FISH Gerry and Sylvia Anderson

Two major contributors were composer Barry Gray and effects maestro Derek Meddings, who tackled the series and those that followed with "drama and gravitas", according to Jamie. "Neither was approaching this as a kiddies' show, neither was trying to do stuff on the cheap – they were both well funded and supported, which really helped – but they both brought an experimental and intellectual rigour to their different roles."

Stingray is still big business for Anderson Entertainment, 60 years on, with new audio and books just released, plus comic anthologies and a tech manual in the pipeline.

"It's another solid bit of warm nostalgia with action and adventure which persists, thankfully. It's the first of the Anderson shows that maintains a 'passing between generations' element, where parents and grandparents share it with future generations. And it's the blend of the colour, characters, effects and music that has made that possible." MARK BRAXTON

CALLUM WOODHOUSE

The All Creatures actor would love to wield a lightsaber, but a trowel will do for now...

RICHARD GRASSIE

What is the view from your sofa?
A fireplace underneath the telly, and on either side there are bookshelves. On the left, I've got graphic novels divided from actual novels by a Marvel figure of Dr Doom on a throne. On the right I've got a record player and a DVD of a Dexys Midnight Runners gig at the Duke of York's Theatre. My favourite band. In front of that I've got Tristan from All Creatures Great and Small's vet bag.

Who controls the remote in your household?
Very much me, but that's because I've got three separate remotes – one for the telly, one for the Firestick, and one for the sound bar. My girlfriend is, like, "Can you just do it?" And by then, I'm choosing what we're watching.

What have you enjoyed recently?
The Acolyte. It didn't do very well in reviews, but I love anything Star Wars. You put on eight hours of paint drying in the Star Wars universe and I'd watch.

If even paint drying is watchable, what are your TV turn-offs?
There are things that I really don't like. Bridgerton is one of the worst shows ever, but I would absolutely take a role on it, because then I could just choose whatever job I wanted.

Have you ever auditioned for Star Wars?
No, that's my dream. If I got to wield a lightsaber on TV or film, I could die the next day a happy man.

Were your parents supportive when you told them you wanted to act?
My dad is an engineer in the oil business and my mum is a nurse. I said, "Folks, this is what I want to do." They were completely baffled but supported me. My dad wanted me to have a Plan B, but I thought if I didn't then acting had to work out.

You left drama school, going straight into The Durrells and were then cast in All Creatures – have you always been an animal lover?
It's weird. At drama school I got dark roles like Hotspur in Henry IV and Stanhope in Journey's End... then I got Leslie in The Durrells! I thought hopefully I'll do it well, and then get back to the bad guys. But I've carried on with the lovely, wholesome family drama stuff. But I have done some horror films on the side. I love horror.

This season Tristan is back from the war. How was his homecoming?
Siegfried [Samuel West] and Tristan had that beautiful farewell at the end of series three and you'd think that would have given their relationship a new dimension, but it doesn't take long for them to descend into bickering like an old married couple again. Which is what you want to see. I absolutely loved Jamie Rose's performance as Carmody in series four, so it's been great to act with him. We have a really wonderful episode that's almost like Breaking Bad.

DOWN TIME

LAST MOVIE
Alien: Romulus*, a brilliant, brilliant film. The world-building now is just fantastic.

COMFORT TV
The US Office*. I've seen it so many times; when I can't think of what to watch, I'll just put it on. Steve Carell is unbelievable.

Breaking Bad* is quite a departure from the Yorkshire Dales!
I mean, it's still James Herriot... Honestly, when we're filming in Grassington, which doubles for Darrowby, there's so much affection for the show – we always have an audience when we're filming. It's like a cross between telly and theatre. There are 200 people watching and when we cut, we get a round of applause.

Are you working on something darker right now?
No, I'm working as a part-time gardener. It's a fun thing to do between acting jobs to give my days structure. A friend of a friend was doing my garden while I was preparing to do a horror film – I had to look emaciated so I decided to help out to lose weight. I had a knack for it, and he offered me shifts. It gets me out of the house, I learn about plants, and do cool stuff. So, my dad got his way in the end. I now have a Plan B.
